Proposed fee increase cut sharply

University of Idaho officials have reduced the proposed $57 per semester fee increase by nearly half in a letter to the Faculty Council, Assistant Vice President and Director of Budget and Planning Robert Fenning said the university is now seeking a $36 per semester undergraduate fee increase.

Eleven dollars of the increase will be budgeted into facility fees, and $21 will be allocated to matriculation fees. The remaining four dollars will be directed to activity fees.

The proposal, which was reviewed and voted on by the State Board of Education sometime this week at its meeting in Idaho Falls, differs sharply from the proposal publicized one month ago which called for $50 of the $57 increase to go toward matriculation fees.

The reduction will bring the total increase down from 8.66 percent to 4.65 percent—which is good news for students. Unfortunately, the university now finds itself in a difficult situation.

The original $57 fee increase proposal was made because the state legislature did not include a "fund shift" in its budget for the university, said Fenning. This is why all four of Idaho's four-year schools originally announced fee increases which approached ten percent.

The State Board of Education, however, looked at things a bit differently and voted last month to ask the schools to follow a 4.7 percent fee increase guideline. As soon as the $36 fee increase is approved, which is likely according to Fenning, university officials will be busy figuring out where to cut "several hundred thousand dollars to match (the new) revenue projections."

"Several members of the board felt quite strongly about the fee issue," said Fenning. "And they made a decision to use the board guideline for the student fee increases."

Fenning said the board guideline was first implemented in the 1980s in order to avoid sudden and dramatic fee increases at Idaho's schools. The guideline asks that increases be made yearly which are tied to some measure such as the Consumer Price Index rather than having no increase at all one year and a huge increase the following year.

According to Fenning's letter, the $11 facility fees increase will be used to fund "detailed planning and design" for the proposed University Center and "initial planning for a student recreation center."

Graduate students will see a 4.65 percent increase in the extra fee which they pay for graduate/professional fee will rise by $12 per semester for next year.

UI law students are facing the biggest per-semester increase: they will be paying an extra $150 per semester next year.

However, it is the non-resident students who continue to be hit hardest by increases. New non-resident students will pay $3,500 and continuing non-resident students will face a $150 per semester increase in tuition and fees paid for this school year.

ECC receives national accreditation

The ECC had to fill out a self-study evaluation saying that they had met the criteria. Then a team of two people trained in early childhood education—called validators—came to evaluate the facility.

"They went through all the rooms and paperwork," said Reed. "They went through everything."

After validators verified that the ECC met all the requirements, the results of their evaluation was referred to a professional child care commission. Based on their professional opinion, they chose which facilities would receive accreditation.

It took the ECC over one year to a complete the accreditation process. "Our self-study evaluation book is about an inch thick," said Reed. "It was really a lot of work."

The accreditation is good for three years. Each year the center will have to report to the NAECP, and at the end of the three years the center will have to go through the process again.

"In the evaluation, our strengths

Scholarship money to be granted

Any students can now stop wondering what happened to the $10,000 in scholarships the ASUI senate has granted parents needing assistance with child care payments.

Tuesday, ASUI President Sean Wilson mailed a final draft of the criteria—which students need to meet to be eligible for the scholarships—to Joe Reed, director of the University of Idaho Early Childhood Center at UI/WSU, Latah Falls, financial aid advisor.

"I'm not sure that the money can start being allocated today," Zahrah Sheikh, ASUI Senate, said Wednesday. "President Wilson and I wrote the letter explaining the criteria for eligibility, so as soon as all the letters get out, the money can go out. It may happen by the end of the week."

The ASUI has $50 scholarships and five $1,000 scholarships, but only plans to award half of that money this semester. "We want to see that money last as long as possible because we doubt that we can get more money," said Sheikh. "We will be willing to help families whose need is need—up to $5,000 for this semester."

In order to qualify for these scholarships, students must be full time undergraduate or graduate students. First preference will be given to single parent families, then to two parent families.

"They have to show that they are in need of money," said Sheikh. "A parent who is not working, probably won't have a chance against a parent who works 40 hours a week."

Lindquist said parents will be automatically considered from the identified pool of parents at the ECC.

"As soon as we receive final word on this, we can start cred- iting student's accounts, maybe as soon as next week," said Lindquist. "We will be looking at things like academic perfor- mance and financial need. But awards will be based primarily on financial need."
Do you know what UI was like 10, 15, 20 years ago?

10 years ago today:

- Bad advising meant extra semesters for at least 118 UI students, according to results of an uncensored ASUI survey on academic advising.
- Targhee Hall was a UI tradition with roots dating back to 1938. It is one of the last in many of cooperatives that made the UI famous during the Depression Era.
- Students at the UI will pay more for their education because of action taken by the State Board of Education last week. The Board's meeting on Thursday and Friday saw approval of a $23 increase in the Institutional Maintenance Fee and a 60 percent increase in the ASUI fee. The ASUI Board also increased room and board rates for university housing and turned down a request for increased athletic.
- The five Iraqi students stranded in Vancouver B.C. have been officially designated re-entry into the U.S. from the State Department.

---

Organization Center has space for you

Applications are available for use of desk/work offices in the Organization Center. The center was established in 1995-1996 academic year. Applications may be obtained at the Student Organization Center or the ASUI offices located in the Student Union. Applications must be completed and returned to Oey Echon in the Student Organization Center by Wednesday, April 26. For further information contact Oey Echon at 885-2537.

Be all you can be!

Scholarship applications are now being accepted by the Department of Military Science, Army ROTC. Six scholarships are available to qualified ROTC cadets, students with prior military leadership experience, or students who complete a six-week leadership workshop.

Interested students must complete the application by May 1. For more information or the amounts of the scholarships or qualifications required see Captain Robert Stotz in room B-42 in Memorial Gym or call 885-5528.

---

Help celebrate Earth Day's anniversary

ENVI and PCEL would like to invite anyone interested in helping them clean up their section of Paradise Creek. The event will take place on Saturday. Everyone who should meet at 10 a.m. in the Student Union or go directly to the site located at 104 West Avenue and Main intersection. The event should be over by 3 p.m. and get wet and muddy. For more information call Mary at 882-7912.

AmeriCorps/VISTA looking for a few good persons

Applications are now being accepted for several AmeriCorps VISTA spots. For more information stop in the UI Career Services Office in G-11 in Brick Hall.

Become aware of the effects of alcohol

Terry Armstrong, an alcohol awareness speaker, will talk about "The Effects of Alcohol" on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Borah Theater. Phi Delta Theta Fraternity will handle the event. For more information call John Hoye at 885-6286.

Professors debate Endangered Species Act

The Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy Studies is hosting a debate between Dr. Richard Stock, senior associate of the Political Economy Research Center and Economies professor at Montana State University, and James S. McDonnel, UI professor of law, based on an article in the UI College of Law Courtroom.

- "The Effectiveness of the Endangered Species Act: A Reception," the event will be held at 3 p.m. in the main lobby. For more information call Alice Alkawas at 885-5662.

Discover the universe

Dr. James Heser will speak on "The Search for Life in the Universe" in the College of Law on Friday, April 29. For more information call 885-7477.

Living groups want quarters

In recognition of National Youth Service Day, UI living groups are sponsoring "Quarter Mile" fundraiser on Monday, April 25.

Computer plans for command post stolen from Trade Center

NEW YORK—Computer files belonging to the World Trade Center's new high-tech security command center project have been stolen, prompting the Port Authority to alert the Joint Terror Task Force.

The planned command control center is part of the Port Authority's plan to step up security in the aftermath of the 1993 terrorist bombing that killed six people and injured more than 1,000 at the trade center.

Plans for the command center were stored on the hard drive of a Gateway 2000 computer that was stolen by Alice from April 13 after the Port Authority's engineering offices at One World Trade, according to Port Authority police, who are unclear whether the thief knew the information was stored on the hard drive or whether it was just a computer theft.

Port Authority police sources said the thief was armed with a saw and the police officer was ready to give all assistance if needed. The police officer was unable to identify the thief in such cases, "Rabin's spokesman quoted him as saying in the main.

Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization and head of the Palestinian self-rule authority, said he also sent his condolences Sunday to Bill Clinton for the victims of the United States. "Palestinian people （mourning） with the tribes, Islamic organization Hamas, which issued a statement expressing its support for the terrorists who carried out the bombing against Israeli targets denied any connection to the bombing.

---

Oklahoma bombing shocks the world

The devastating car bomb explosion in Oklahoma City sent shock waves around the world Thursday, with officials and world leaders expressing sympathy and renewing commitments to a global crusade to stamp out the scourge of terrorism.

Residents in Paris, London, Madrid and Rome accepted the bombing of special precautions for the wake of terror bombings, Americans may have to get used to more routine security checks, including body searches and bag checks in public places.

This kind of anonymous bomb attack against innocent civilians in the middle of the States using explosives made from readily available materials, could be the wave of the future.

First, there were only laboratories for the new wars we face.

Attali said the United States has now joined "the club" of valiant states that have been subjected by international terrorism and confined to Europe and the Middle East.

How Americans respond to that challenge could have a fatal impact on relations with the outside world.

"If we want to be able to prevent the country from a round here to try to make the distance with the outside world, Attali said. "But with the end of the cold war, the fears about apocalypse will only play into the hands of global terrorism.

The 15-nation European Union said in a statement its leaders were "deeply moved by the particularly hateful attack" and expressed concern for the U.S. and the families of the victims.

In the Middle East, where some bombings have occurred with greater regularity, there was a unanimous chorus of support for the United States. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin wrote to President Clinton that he shared "the sorrow and the pain" borne by the victims of the Oklahoma City bombing.

"The terror must be cut off before it hits again. The quicker and the more effective the better," the Prime Minister said. "We are ready to give all assistance if needed, if and when we hear the plan from such cases, Rabin's spokesman quoted him as saying in the main.

---

Meat packers win right to label alcohol content

Beef producers have won a First Amendment right to put alcohol content levels on beef labels, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously Wednesday in overturning a 60-year-old federal law.
PCEI sponsors 5th cleanup of Paradise Creek

Group plans to restore section of stream in late August
SHELBY BECK

The Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute is adding the South Fork of the Palouse River to its fifth annual Paradise Creek Clean-up in celebration of the 25th of the Fifth Day.

"This is sort of a kick-off year for Pullman. We've been testing it out here in Moscow and people have shown a lot of interest in Pullman and getting involved in other adopt-a-stream type situations," said Adam Thornbrough, PCEI's Water Quality Program Coordinator.

Each year, PCEI coordinates roughly 200 volunteers in an effort that annually collects four thousand pounds of garbage.

"We seem to average about two tons a year now and that doesn't include things like ear parts and tires," Thornbrough said.

"Upstream of Main St. has traditionally been a bad area. Some of the banks of Paradise Creek are treated like a junkyard. Getting the ear parts out of there is probably going to be difficult to do unless we can get a crane," he said.

While 25 groups have adopted segments of Paradise Creek, individual volunteers and groups who would like to adopt a section to clean up are welcome. Volunteers should meet at 10 a.m. at the University of Idaho Student Union Building in Moscow, or in Pullman at River Park. Garbage bags will be provided.

He also advises volunteers to bring gloves for sorting birds and be careful of private property bounded by the creek.

"Each year we just try to make sure that the groups are aware that they are on private property and that they should respect that property," said Thornbrough.

Following the clean-up, PCEI is planning an educational event. The food will be prepared by Michael Cross, the Executive Chef at The Grand Hotel in Lewiston. PCEI has arranged a water witch demonstration, games, and a silent auction of photography and mixed media prints by Alison Meyer.

One project Thornbrough hopes to finish this fall is the restoration of a section of Paradise Creek that runs along Moscow School District land at the corner of Joseph St. and Mountain View Rd. Ultimately, the project will change that area of Paradise Creek from a straightened ditch with damaged aquatic habitat to a stream with meso- and re-introduced native vegetation and a riparian corridor.

"That involves a lot of permitting. People say, you're an environmentalist or you're a developer. Well, now I've become an environmentalist developer. I'm jumping through all the hoops that a developer would have to go through," Thornbrough said.

The proposed design of Paradise Creek is based on aerial photographs taken in the 1960s before it was straightened.

The project is scheduled to begin August 15. Thornbrough said workers will be moving soil until Labor Day, after which student volunteers will be needed to help install support structures, erosion control materials and plants.

Volunteers for Saturday's clean-up of Paradise Creek and the South Fork of the Palouse River should meet in Moscow at the UI Student Union Building and in Pullman at Renney Park at 10 a.m. The re-introduction picnic begins at 7 p.m. at Mountain View Park in Moscow. For more information, contact PCEI at 852-1444.
Lucky student to pay three dollars for fall fees

Shelby Dopp
News Editor

Imagine paying only three dollars for registration next fall. That is what the cost will be to one lucky University of Idaho student.

The UI Parents Association is sponsoring a raffle to help one student pay for school next fall. The prize is equivalent to what it costs to attend the university as a full-time, in-state student—up to at least $774.

If the cost of registration goes up next fall the prize will cover that amount. However, if the student's fees are not as high as $774, they will not get the extra money left over. As for out-of-state students, the prize money will be deducted from the cost of their tuition and fees.

According to Tim Helmske, intern at the UI Alumni Office and a member of Student Alumni Relations Board, the money to pay for the registration fee will come from ticket sales. Students can purchase tickets from any member on Staff or call the Alumni Office at 885-6154. The cost of the tickets is $3 each or a booklet of 4 for $10.

"Tickets will be available up until the drawing," Helmske said. "The drawing will take place at 8 a.m. at the Family Weekend Breakfast on Saturday in the Student Union Ballroom. Hot 104, KITR, will be at the breakfast to help promote the raffle. The raffle is open to any and all UI undergraduate and graduate students who will attend the university in the fall," Helmske said. This includes both in-state and out-of-state students. The raffle idea is an "offshoot of what is being done at Oregon State University," said UI Alumni Doug Sweetland. The OSU raffle is very successful, he said.

Every semester, the Parents Association gives away four $400 scholarships. The Association also donates money to the Music, Dance, and Theatre departments. "They are really active in promoting students," Helmske said.

College Life:
A Few Things To Know

Know: Which off-campus bookstore will buy back your used $45 textbooks for more than 25 cents.

Know: Which "30-minutes-or-it's-free" pizza place always takes exactly 31 minutes.

Know: Which evil, quarter-eating laundromat machines to avoid.

Know the code:
IT ALWAYS COSTS LESS THAN 1-800-COLLECT.

Hey on college campuses those "in the know" are the ones who rule. And it's not just about being smart in the classroom, it's about being wise with your wallet as well. So if you want a great low price on a collect call, just dial 1 800-CALL-ATT. It always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT. Always.

There are lots of tricky things for you to learn at college, but here's something that's easy: KNOW THE CODE, and save the person on the other end some serious money. You'll be glad you did.

Are you "AT&T" Your True Voice?
Local coalition takes Central American issues to heart

Jennifer Eng
Staff

For nine years a group here in Moscow has been active in tackling some very pressing issues that affect Central America in conjunction with United States foreign policy.

The group is the Coalition for Central America; its cause is to keep congress and the American public aware of social and political issues in Central America, the Caribbean and Mexico.

The group is comprised of a great number of people on campus and in the community who want to inform themselves and others about the history and current condition in Central America, the Caribbean and Mexico. Students on campus have recently formed a student sub group of the coalition. This group has the same goals, but is directed towards students and the issues that they find most important.

One of the goals of the coalition is to raise awareness and to let people, particularly among students, know about what they can do to help the cause. The group advocates writing letters to our representatives in the United States government to express concern over a wide range of topics. Recently the coalition has focused on two major events. These two events deal with the problems in Guatemala and the plight of the lower class as well as a similar struggle in southern Mexico in the state of Chiapas.

Dr. E. Gordon, the director of the Latin America Studies Program at UI, said that the Indian populations of these areas have been suffering from discrimination and oppression since the Spanish Conquest of the 15th century. In many of the countries in Central America there has been a struggle of a guerrilla movement against the government. The established governments of the whole region of Central American countries have enlisted the financial and military help of the United States government to bring their countries under control.

"The rebel movements have been about poverty and hunger, and not about communist infiltration or revolution," Grady said. "United States tax dollars would be better used to fight the drug and arms development programs that end poverty and hunger by equipping military forces to repress urban trade unions or hungry peasants living in the countryside.

In Guatemala, the struggle is not yet over but the people affected by the revolts in Guatemala and the onlookers in America are looking for some answers, especially in conjunction with the American governments involvement.

One issue is that of the mysterious disappearances of guerrillas and the amount of information the state department is not giving out. One of the most publicized events involved an American lawyer by the name of Jennifer Harbury and the disappearance of her husband, a Guatemalan guerrilla movement, Efrain Ramirez Velazquez.

Velazquez was assassinated in 1992 by a Guatemalan colonel who according to other national press was trained in America. After Harbury's husband turned up missing, she attempted to obtain information about her husband's disappearance from the State Department, but to no avail. In an attempt to find answers she staged a hunger strike in Guatemala City in an effort to get the information she wanted from the State Department.

The Coalition for Central America is going to be presenting a video on Harbury and her plight. The video, which will be shown sometime within the next few weeks, is an interview which details Harbury's struggle to obtain information about her husband.

In Guatemala, the struggle is not yet over but the people affected by the revolts in Guatemala and the onlookers in America are looking for some answers, especially in conjunction with the American governments involvement.

One issue is that of the mysterious disappearances of guerrillas and the amount of information the state department is not giving out. One of the most publicized events involved an American lawyer by the name of Jennifer Harbury and the disappearance of her husband, a Guatemalan guerrilla movement, Efrain Ramirez Velazquez.

Velazquez was assassinated in 1992 by a Guatemalan colonel who according to other national press was trained in America. After Harbury's husband turned up missing, she attempted to obtain information about her husband's disappearance from the State Department, but to no avail. In an attempt to find answers she staged a hunger strike in Guatemala City in an effort to get the information she wanted from the State Department.

The Coalition for Central America is going to be presenting a video on Harbury and her plight. The video, which will be shown sometime within the next few weeks, is an interview which details Harbury's struggle to obtain information about her husband.

The rebel movements have been about poverty and hunger, and not about communist infiltration or subversion.

—Dr. Dale Graden, director of Latin American Studies

The rebel movements have been about poverty and hunger, and not about communist infiltration or subversion.

—Dr. Dale Graden, director of Latin American Studies
Hybrid-powered car ‘charges’ into future

Dawn Casey
Staff

UI/WSU team places fourth in competition
Dawn Casey
Staff

The bright red electric car poking its nose around campus comes this week was built from the ground up by local students. Designed and constructed by students at the University of Idaho and Washington State University, it placed fourth overall at the United States Department of Energy Advanced Student Hybrid (DASH) Challenge in Los Angeles last week.

Teams from eight schools across the country entered vehicles in the competition where their vehicles were scrutinized from various angles.

The UI/WSU team won first place in the Diamond Bar-Long Beach Road Rally, one of the six categories of competition including acceleration, autonomous, emissions and energy economy, as well as consumer acceptance.

“The Mechanical Engineering Department calls their electric car the Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV). The UI students were Sean Harris, Brian Gonjon, Daris Peterson, Rick Castle Jr., Ken Kubo, Shawn Riffle, Carl Powell, John Waltz, Ken Reeves and Yancy Wright. Dean Edwards, UI Professor of Mechanical Engineering advised the UI/WSU team.

HEV is supported by private sponsors, both universities, and UI’s National Center for Advanced Transportation Technology.

UI/WSU, team places fourth in competition

Dawn Casey
Staff

The bright red electric car poking its nose around campus comes this week was built from the ground up by local students. Designed and constructed by students at the University of Idaho and Washington State University, it placed fourth overall at the United States Department of Energy Advanced Student Hybrid (DASH) Challenge in Los Angeles last week.

Teams from eight schools across the country entered vehicles in the competition where their vehicles were scrutinized from various angles.

The UI/WSU team won first place in the Diamond Bar-Long Beach Road Rally, one of the six categories of competition including acceleration, autonomous, emissions and energy economy, as well as consumer acceptance.

“The Mechanical Engineering Department calls their electric car the Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV). The UI students were Sean Harris, Brian Gonjon, Daris Peterson, Rick Castle Jr., Ken Kubo, Shawn Riffle, Carl Powell, John Waltz, Ken Reeves and Yancy Wright. Dean Edwards, UI Professor of Mechanical Engineering advised the UI/WSU team.

HEV is supported by private sponsors, both universities, and UI’s National Center for Advanced Transportation Technology.
LISTEN TO
HOT 104 KHTR
FOR AUDIO CLUES TO
10 DIFFERENT PRIZES AND
IF YOU ARE THE FIRST TO IDENTIFY ALL 10
UGOTTEM!
MORE THAN $5,000 IN
CASH AND PRIZES
GOING TO ONE PERSON!

Listen & Win

WITH VALLEY & ROSSI, THE BREAKFAST FLAKES,
BETWEEN 6 & 10 AM! AND WITH JOCKEY JOHN
BETWEEN 3 & 7PM! CLUES PLAYED EVERY HOUR!
ICA seeks to put two bills on '96 ballot

Justin Oliver Ruen

The Idaho Citizens Alliance will try to put a reworded version of Proposition One, the antigay rights initiative that failed to pass last November, on the 1996 Idaho ballot.

The ICA is also planning to introduce a proposal that would allow a $1,000 per child tax credit for attending private schools.

The reworded version of Proposition One will be very similar to the original, said Kelly Walton, Chairman of the ICA. The revision will include fewer issues and is described by Walton as "simple and clear."

"It will have many of the same basic elements that Prop One had. We are receiving input from around the state from concerned individuals on what they would like to see in it," he said.

According to Walton, the initial premise will stay the same. "Everyone should be protected by the Constitution and no group based on behavior should be getting special protections or privileges."

"The other initiative that we're going to be releasing is an educational choice initiative. It would give a tax credit to parents who send their kids to non-government education. It is still well before the final deadline," Walton said. The ICA will attempt to release both bills this May.

Missing from the revised Prop One will be the issue of state employment. "What we were trying to do is show that in state employment no one could be fired because of a rumor being circulated that they happened to be of a certain sexual orientation," Walton said. "Our opponents tried to interpret it to mean that we were going on a witchhunt and every homosexual in the state would get fired. We were just trying to show that the bill was reasonable and all we wanted to do was to prevent special privilege from being granted."

Our opponents' basic strategy (against Proposition One) was to confuse people. They were calling people and saying "if you're confused about Proposition One, just vote no. They know they can't debate us straight up on the essential issue," he said, "they've got to try to confuse people and that will remain their strategy. We're just convinced now that thousands of Idaho voters have realized they voted the wrong way."

"I think protecting every individual's freedom of speech and assembly and freedom of access to knowledge is in every Ida'han's best interest," said Walter Hixford, professor of English and a local opponent of Proposition One. "I certainly see it as a major attempt to abrogate that ability to gain access to knowledge and express opinions, a real violation of what (Idaho and the United States) basically stand for."

"I would like the ICA to be able to show we as an example since Proposition One was defeated there should be no homosexuals gaining what they want," said Walton.

---

ELECTRIC

from page 6

The engine uses an AC drive—an induction motor plus a power-electronic unit. The combination yields an ability to steer and control speed with very few moving parts.

Regular cars are highly complex with countless moving parts and therefore, as any car owner can testify, to spend at least some expensive time and money. Electrical cars spend almost no time in the shop—they have almost no moving components.

Most importantly, the electric car plays a role in polluting smoggy skies while the internal combustion engine has become so connected with the very word "pollution." What little pollution is created in the electrical production plants can be controlled, monitored, and certainly would be less than that produced by millions of cars burning gas at red lights.

Everything about the electrical car seems to be superior to the gas cars on the roads today—low maintenance, no gas hills, and, of course, no foul emissions. So what is the drawback?

"The trouble with electrical cars is that you have to pay all the money up front," said Dean Edwards, Associate Professor of Mechanical Engineering at UI. "But the maintenance and electrical cost is lower than that of an internal combustion engine."

"The initial cost is what is expensive," he said, but over the life of the car, the costs remain very comparable. The high initial cost plus low maintenance cost ends up to be about the same as a gas car—which has lower initial cost but high maintenance cost.

"If normal cars didn't pollute, then we wouldn't have to do anything for the electric car," Edwards said. But they do pollute, and Southern California, where the UI/WSU Engineering team entered their HEV in a competition last week, can see it in their sky every day.

California recently mandated that by the year 1998, two to three percent of all cars sold must be electric. The participants of this study tend to view this trend towards change will be met by the rich—or car enthusiasts in general.

But Edwards suggested to look back at the development technology of television and VCRs were cost aggressively expensive—only a few years ago a television or VCR was a readily available item, and it is not as expensive as electronics.

The electric car may not spread as quickly as electronic mail did, but the future certainly holds a picture of vehicles that are at least a little more breathable.

---

Spread Your Faith

A RELIGIOUS DIRECTORY

Trinity Baptist Church
(Pastor)
A Warm, Caring Church With A Relevant, Biblical Focus
Tom Robinson, Pastor
6th & Minnview
Office: 882-2105
Sunday Services:
8:15, 10:45 A.M. & 6 P.M.
Sunday School:
9:15 A.M.
For a ride, meet at Theophilus Tower at 9:15 or 15:15 am Tamara Walton. Campus Christian Center or call the church office.
Wednesday Prayer Service:
7 P.M.
Baptist Studebaker Ministries Sunday School 8-11:45 P.M.
Chapel Christian Center
To Advertise Your Religious Group Here
Call 885-7825

Living Faith Fellowship
Ministry Training Center
1565 Kinnel - 332-3545
Dr. Karl Baten, Senior Pastor
Phil Vanice, Campus Pastor
Sunday: Helpful Practical Classes
Classes: 9 A.M.
Sunday Worship: 10:30 A.M.
Wednesday Services:
8:15 P.M.
Sunday: Campus Christian Fellowship:
7:30 P.M.
Geenen Lots 36.9
United Church of Moscow
1935 2nd St.
Worship 11am Sundays
College age study: 7 habitats of highly effective people 9:30 am Sundays
Dr. Mike Burr Pastor

Christian Science Church
3rd & Minnview 882-8848
Church Services: Sunday 10:00 AM
Christian Science Reading Room
Tuesday - Friday 1:30 PM
518 S. Main - Moscow
Christian Science Church
3rd & Minnview 882-8848
Church Services: Sunday 10:00 AM
Christian Science Reading Room
Tuesday - Friday 1:30 PM
518 S. Main - Moscow

St. Marks Episcopal Church
111 South Jefferson/Moscow
(208) 322-2023
Holy Eucharist 8 & 10:30 AM
Adult Education & Sunday School 9:30 AM
The Rev.
Richard Dunham, Rector

Chenoweth visits UI despite threats

Melica Johnson

Despite previous direct threats warning U.S. Representative Helen Chenoweth not to visit the University of Idaho, she faced the crowd anyway.

Students, faculty, community members, activists and even a small posse of police officers came to listen to Chenoweth explain and defend government issues at a noon open forum Wednesday in the Student Union Vandals Lounge.

The police officers, however, did not attend the forum to hear about up-coming legal cases. They came to watch the rather "unusual" audience of approximately 250.

ASUI Senator Christa Manis said that Chenoweth's office was sympathetic as to the motivations of the activist groups. According to Manis, one fear of Chenoweth's office, was that an activist was going to throw a trans fish on her. "Everywhere she has been this year there has been a trans person to be around for her," Manis said.

Chenoweth spoke briefly at the forum and then committed her time to answering a wide array of questions from the audience.

During the question and answer period, Chenoweth called on and answered many activist's questions, while maintaining composure during their heckles and laughter.

Some issues raised during the forum included issues about the timber industry, the Endangered Species Act, social security, the Idaho Citizens' Alliance, Proposition One, and the American Budget Amendment, National Endowment for the Arts funding.

---

Unitarian Universalist Church of the Palouse
420 E. 2nd • Moscow
(Corner of Van Buren)
Sunday Services:
10 AM
Religious Education Program for Children

Emmanuel Lutheran Church
1036 W. A St. • Moscow
882-3912
New Pastor: Jake Blum
Campus Ministry: Bill Williams
Worship: 8 & 10:30 AM
Sunday School: 9:15 AM
For van ride call 9 5

"A Hunger for Healing" Video Series
Monday Nights at 7:00 PM at the Campus Christian Center
Sponsored by United Methodist Campus Ministry

Divine Savior Lutheran Church
A牧场 to the Pastoral Care of the Grass (Midlands Synod) Building a Community of Christian Love
NE 620 Stadium Way
(Across from Excell)
For transportation and more info Call 332-1452

CHENOWETH PAGE 9
were our staff and children interaction," said Reed. "That was probably the most important. Our other strengths were our physical environment and food and nutrition." Nationally, there are approximately 3,600 accredited child-care facilities, with about 8,000 in self study. Reed said the accreditation means parents no longer have to search out for the highest standards in child care for themselves. "Parents can now rest assured that the highest standards have been met," Reed said. "They can be sure that the most stringent criteria have been set, looked at by professionals and met."

WHERE THE SHEEP ARE GROWING TEETH.

Representative Helen Chenoweth spoke in the Vandal Lounge Wednesday during her trip through Idaho.

ICA FROM PAGE 9

like to call "special rights." Homosexuals never wanted any special rights, they just want ordinary rights that we all enjoy," Horder said.

He said the law already grants equal rights, "so why do we need whatever the ICA has in mind? If it is not broken, why fix it?"

Walton feels ready to tackle the national school-choice issue. "We're taking on the National Education Association and they've got unlimited resources. They just spent $18 million in California on a similar bill and it was defeated down there. They will spend a lot of money to defeat this because they're defending a monopoly," Walton said. "Competition raises all boats in the tide of education and for them to feel threatened by a $1,000,000 ad going in to a private school situation, it really shows how they know that the product that's being put out there right now is generally inferior to what private schools and home schools can do right now."

"I think, overall it's going to improve the quality of public education, when an administrator knows that if the parents in the area are not pleased they can take their business elsewhere," he said.
Theater group performs children’s book

Jeremy Chase
Staff

Screes acting, singing, and choreography were featured in the Theatreworks/USA production of The Little Prince, performed at the Administration Auditorium Tuesday evening.

With a cast of five playing multiple parts, The Little Prince, based on the book by Antoine de Saint-Exupery, tells the story of a young little prince who leaves his tiny planet to find out for what is really important. Along the way he meets exotic, colorful characters who teach him about selfishness and true love.

In the end, the little prince discovers that what matters the most is what he left behind on his home planet. In this case, it is the love he has for a beautiful rose.

To support the story, this particular adaptation of the play was done as a musical. With the background score provided by the stage manager, the dialogue between characters was minimal. Instead, the actors sang to carry the story along.

Using only a few flats for the stage, the actors instead relied on the use of props and miming to leave more to the imagination and enjoyment of the audience.

The many highlights of the evening were provided by the actors themselves. Jo Ellen Constine, portraying the little prince, displayed charming skill by her ability to combine acting, singing and dancing into a powerful package.

In supporting roles, Cyndi Logan, who played the Prince’s beloved Rose, and Andrew Gonzales, as the bird that the prince used to travel the galaxy with, both showed their talents of ballet and humor, respectively. To the audience, consisting of both children and adults, the play provided energy and humor to make the production very enjoyable.

Theatreworks/USA, the country’s largest producer of children’s theatre, made Tuesday’s entertaining show possible. Based in New York, Theatreworks/USA has performed over 29,000 shows in 49 states. This year, there are 13 different troups across the country performing different shows.

For Rick Lotzkar, stage manager of “The Little Prince,” doing the shows across the country makes his job exciting and enjoyable. “We’re getting to see the country,” he said. “It’s very pleasant.”

Lotzkar said that the traveling production started Jan. 4 in New York, and has been on the road since Jan. 23. Primarily traveling the southern and western parts of the country, he said that they’ve been able to perform in San Francisco, San Diego, Portland, and New Orleans.

Lotzkar also said that Tuesday’s show was their first, and only show in Idaho. “This is our only Idaho show,” he said. “Next, we go to Whitefish, Montana.”

For next year, he said that Theatreworks/USA is looking to put together shows for Around the World in 80 Days, Freedom Train, a biography of Harriet Tubman, and Where’s Waldo, an adaptation of the popular children’s book series.

“They’re always on the lookout for new shows,” he said.

Lotzkar said Theatreworks/USA should be returning to Moscow next year for another production, The Little Prince was brought to campus by ASUI Productions.

Smith travels through the back door of Europe

Valaree Johnson
Staff

If traveling in Europe is on your agenda any time soon, Steve Smith can show you how to do it right.

“European cities are more intense and better than ever,” said Smith in a slide-illustrated lecture Tuesday designed to address the questions and concerns of travelers as part of UI International Week.

Smith, co-author of Rick Steves’ Best of France, covered the most important aspects of the freedom of travel and experiencing Europe the right way...through the back door.

Smith says that most travelers make the mistake of traveling to the places only known in travel magazines, and if the ones they are “expect- ed” to go.

“Get off the beaten path,” Smith exclaimed. By approaching Europe through the back door, travelers broaden their perspective and learn the true essence of the culture.

Smith gave a synopsis of the Rick Steves Europe Through The Back Door Library, which includes how to design an itinerary, the best modes of transportation for what you want to see, eating and accommodations on a budget, and coping to maximize your time and resources while traveling abroad.

Smith also demonstrated how to live out of a backpack for weeks at a time.

Handling the language barrier can seem intimidating to some travelers but Smith showed how many words are internationally used and explained the breakdown of some languages.

Smith gave tips on how to avoid crowds, the best time of day and year to visit, the clouts on Eurostar passes and taking care of finances and money in a foreign country.

Smith also presented slides of side trips to Eastern Europe and the breathtaking realities of Morocco he says “are well worth the dollars.”

Contacting a tourist office with specific questions in mind and visiting a library to research your destinations will make your adventures more rewarding and help you grasp an understanding of the surroundings and an appreciation for the culture you experience.

“Read your guide books,” says Smith. The $15 spent on a good guide book will save you much more in the end.

An important part of the Rick Steves travel philosophy is becoming an expert.

Making the attitude adjustment makes a better trip and helps the traveler build upon the experiences so that the memories last a lifetime.

Stevens is the host and co-writer of the PBS-TV series Travel in Europe with Rick Steves.

Smith, from Seattle, has traveled regularly in Europe for over 20 years. He specializes in France and Italy. In addition to owning a country inn in Burgundy, Smith has led tours through France for the past five years.

The Europe Through The Back Door Library can be found in several bookstores. For more information on traveling in Europe or to be put on the company’s mailing list call (206) 771-6830.

European traveler and author Steve Smith visited campus Tuesday for International Week.

Contributed photo
Welcome to Parent's Weekend 1995

Discount taken from lowest price marked. Offer expires April 24, 1995.

Use this valuable coupon

Save 20% off the lowest price marked.

All shoes.

Friday-Saturday-Sunday.

Discount taken from lowest price marked. Offer expires April 24, 1995.

Has more quality, name-brand athletic shoes to choose from...and nobody sells them for less!

We guarantee it.

Prices effective April 21-23.

1104 Pullman Road, Moscow 882-4555.

Open daily Mon.-Fri. 9AM-9PM; Sat. 9AM-7PM; Sun. 9AM-6PM.
UI graduate opens guitar studio

Jeffrey Albertson

After moving from several locations around town, University of Idaho graduate Michelle Ward has finally found solid ground to teach from.

Ward, who obtained her master’s in music performance from UI, recently opened CTR Guitar Studio in Moscow as a place to provide a variety of guitar instruction. Previously Ward, along with Mike Dulak, had held studio space at Guitar’s Friend, but lost that space when the store’s new owner expanded. For a short stint the two began operating out of a second story room in the McConnell building, but a limited amount of space at that location forced Ward to look for a larger venue to hold a studio.

After a trial run last summer Dulak moved out of the area at which time Ward took over the studio and re-opened it at the first of this year.

The studio, which is located at 507 S. Main, in the basement of what used to be house Barleyhopper’s, required three months of renovation before the grand opening could commence. In that time the basement was completely refurbished and now houses four separate rooms for individual instruction as well as one large room which Ward said will be used for student recitals and as a place for people to showcase instruments which they’ve built.

Ward, who gives instruction in classical guitar and jazz, has been joined by three fellow instructors teaching a wide variety of styles and techniques. David Nystrom, a student at UI pursuing a bachelor’s degree in music composition and performance, also teaches classical guitar and various other intermediate disciplines.

Tom Armstrong brings with him 20 years of performance experience in finger style, bass and singer-songwriter writing, and Zak Boyle with eight years of teaching experience specializes in rock, fusion and improvisation.

Ward said that the new location and surplus space has helped to provide a professional atmosphere.

“The environment here is much more conducive to guitar learning,” Nystrom added.

Together the four provide instruction for 45 students in all at a cost of $40 a month for half hour sessions once a week.

Nystrom also said that the studio gives him an opportunity to explore teaching techniques and helps him to learn different styles.

“I get a chance to learn through students’ questions and they have broadened my view,” Nystrom said, adding that for him teaching has also been a good learning experience.

With a steady clientele and a few months under their belt, Ward said that the studio is still getting in feet wet, but she does have plans in store for the future.

“We hope to offer people from the community an opportunity to come, play and be heard,” Ward said of plans for a monthly open house that would feature local talent.

Recently Ward and the rest of the instructors held an open house at which time all four performed for visitors and offered free clinics. In addition to instruction, Armstrong will also be operating a small repair shop for 8-string repairs.

The studio will be giving lessons on an appointment basis only and those interested can contact any of the instructors at (208) 862-6735.

Summer DJ’s Needed!

& Promotions Director! (1 year term)

Underwriting Director! (1 year term)

Applications* Due May 5 for DJ’s & April 26 for Directors.

* Pick up your application 3rd Floor Student Union!

Welcome Parents!

All Travel Books
Will be 20% off

All Earthday Books
Will be 20% off

Also look for our clearance specials:

• 50% off Titles

• And Books by

The Inch Table!

Good thru April 22nd

47% class assignment.

Skippers

ALSO HAS

CHICKEN
Four UI students to compete at theater festival

On April 21, four students from the UI Theatre Arts Department will be traveling to Washington D.C. to compete in the national Kennedy Center/America College Theater Festival. Kelly Quinnett, Carey Gibb, Stephanie Miller and Nicole Stevens will be at the Kennedy Center April 21-23, competing for scholarships and national recognition of their artistic talents. All four students are advanced to the Kennedy Center after winning top awards at the regional level.

Kelly Quinnett, nominated for her performance in Dancing at Lughnasa, won an Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship and will be participating in the "Evening of Scenes," an opportunity for her to showcase her talents for leading directors, producers, and casting agents. Two participants will receive an additional $2,500 scholarship. Carey Gibb, Quinnett's scene partner, won Best Scene Partner at the Northwest Drama Conference. This is Quinnett's second trip to the Kennedy Center; she won the national Irene Ryan competition in 1993, while an undergraduate at Northern Kentucky University.

Stephanie Miller's scenic designs for the Secret Garden, and Nicole Stevens' costume designs for Dancing at Lughnasa won them Thespian Design Excellence Awards at the regional competition. Their designs will be on display during the national festival; one national winner is selected, and the other will receive an honorarium and an all-expenses-paid trip to New York City and a studio of dialogue.

SEE FEST PAGE 14

Free entertainment no one ever sees

How many times has the lead for a story about an ASUI Productions presentation begun something like this, "(insert performance name) performed to an intimate crowd in the (insert place here)?"

Too many times, in my opinion. ASUI Productions provides campus entertainment on a nearly weekly basis. Yet, despite extensive advertising and announcements, most shows are little attended.

I suppose part of the problem is limited coverage for these events, but I don't think that is the only reason. Oftentimes the Argonaut provides a story or a feature for an upcoming performance. But when these events are covered, it is often reported that attendance was low.

This is very frustrating because most of the productions are free to UI students. While I recognize that we all have busy schedules, wouldn't it be nice to take a little time out and see something entertaining? We all have tight budgets, so a little free entertainment is a gift.

It is also important to know that part of the money for these productions comes from student fees, so in essence, we are not paying all of our money to good use. We are paying for services we don't even use.

I think that ASUI Productions has done a wonderful job of providing student entertainment, and I think it's too bad that we don't all take advantage of the services offered to us.

Sadly enough, I think that no amount of coverage by the newspapers and no amount of advertising on campus will increase the attendance at ASUI Productions.

I just think it is important that students realize that these performances sponsored by ASUI Productions come out of our student fees, and I encourage everyone, even myself, to take advantage of these brief, but entertaining encounters.

It's One Of The Most Useful Credit Cards On The Planet. Unless You've Stolen It. Your MasterCard® is stolen. You panic, get angry, panic some more. Then you call and cancel it. Now the thief is in possession of, oh, about seven cents worth of stolen plastic. (Maybe he can use it as a coaster when he entertains at the hideout.) So relax. You only have to pay for stuff you bought, and you can get a new card the next day. It'll be accepted at millions of places, one of which must sell wallets. MasterCard. It's more than a credit card. It's smart money.™
FEST • FROM PAGE 13

Linguenced designers. Prior to competing at the regional level, students must be nominated by an outside adjudicator for performances or designs in their college or university productions. Idaho is one of eight states within the Northwest region. In addition to Quinnent, Holly Allen Marsh was nominated for performances in Dancing at Lughnaesh, Gabrielle Korn and Michael Sarmore were nominated for performances in The Secret Garden and Brad Rohman was nominated for his performance in As You Like It.

Festivals at the Kennedy Center were also nominated by students in the region. The Kennedy Center American College Festival provides opportunities for colleges and universities to showcase their best work and receive outside assessment. KCACTF honors excellence of over 600,000 students and offers students individual recognition through awards and scholarships. Last year more than 17,000 students participated in the American College Festival at the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C.
Alumni Association provides needed link

When you leave the boundaries of Moscow and graduate from the University of Idaho, the Alumni Association is your key to networking professionally with other UI graduates, and keeping in touch with friends.

The Alumni Association links the University of Idaho with alumni across the country to help create support for lifelong connection. The association provides alumni services to members across the world, keeping people who were once students at the UI up to date about their alma mater and encouraging them to stay involved.

"The Alumni Association is a dynamic force for the university and throughout the country because of the dedication and participation of its alumni," said Flip Kleffner, director of UI Alumni Association.

Numerous activities of the more than 62,000 association members are guided by Kleffner, along with an elected board of directors led by Dr. Larry Knight, a Boise physician and 1955 UI graduate.

The association boasts 22 chapters throughout the United States where members have access to immediate contact with the university.

Each chapter was formed in an area which indicated an interest in being involved with the university and its graduates. Chapter events sponsored by the association help in exchanging information about the UI, in promoting the mission of the university, and in recruiting students.

"The chapter system is the place where you can go and meet other alumni in your profession," said Chandra Zenner Ford, assistant director for the Alumni Association in Boise.

Through an awards program the association rewards outstanding student achievement, exceptional alumni and chapters, and individuals who provide noteworthy service.

"Nominations are received each year in the Alumni Office from individuals interested in telling the story of the many accomplished University of Idaho graduates and volunteers," said Knight.

The Alumni Office gathers and maintains records of alumni. This information is available to the members as well as current students. All former UI students are members of the association if they earned 90 or more credits while attending the university.

Students who completed at least 26 credits are welcomed to the Alumni Association if they request membership.

Close ties to the university can be maintained through the association. Homecoming, Silver and Gold Days, reunions, continuing education programs both worldwide and on campus, and travel tours are main features of alumni programming. Recently, the Alumni Association has emphasized their support through the Alumni Legislative Network, said Fran Dingel, national association board member in charge of alumni legislative relations.

Through the network selected alumni serve as contacts and representatives in working with the legislature in higher education issues.

The Alumni Association offers opportunities for alumni and parents to assist in building students scholarships through alumni services that include the West One Affinity Visa card and the Parents Fund, managed by the Parents Association. For further information on alumni programs; to find out about the UI presence in your area, and to let us know of your interests, please call Pam Farmer, associate director of the Alumni Association, at the office at (208) 885-6154.
International alumni present

Dawn Casey

Mailings from the Alumni Office to University of Idaho alumni do not stop at the United States border.
Regardless of where alumni end up in the world, they can still claim participation in activities of the Alumni Association.
International alumni can add cultural diversity to the Alumni Association’s activities.
This includes international students who have obtained a degree from UI as well as American graduates who find themselves overseas for work, travel, or school.
The ratio of international alumni to alumni living in the United States is obviously not a proportioned one. It follows that such a small group of international mailing will be accompanied with special information aimed for their living situation.

With the current university emphasis on cultural diversity and international studies, there are more and more UI alumni who fit into this category.
Some who have come from abroad to study at UI were those seeking quality education, or who have already received that education and help UI to conduct significant research.
Their experience with UI in education and research can often lead to advances in their home countries as well as expanded personal opportunity.
The opportunity for involvement of international alumni is limited, but the Alumni Association can provide other ways in which they can stay involved with UI and other alumni.

Senior send-off announced

Adam Gardels

In less than one month, some current University of Idaho students will say “good-bye” to college and “hello” to the real world.
The Student Alumni Relations Board will be honoring those graduating seniors at their eleventh annual Senior Send-Off. This event will be offered April 28 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the University Inn Court Yard (pool side).
The event is held for those students who are receiving their degree in May or have received their degree over the past year.
The SARB members believe this event is important as it offers these soon to be graduates/alumni an opportunity to get together one last time before graduation.
There will be an admission of $3, which includes a barbecue hamburger buffet, fruit salad and beverage.
Seniors will be able to try their chances at winning many valuable prizes.
“We have a lot of give-aways from local businesses,” said Casey Hanson, UI Alumni Office program advisor. Soon to be graduates will have the chance to win many prizes. These prizes have been donated by West One Bank, Wal-Mart, Gambino’s, the Chinese Village, the University Inn, Z-Fun 106, the UI Golf Courses, Casa de Oro, Mikey’s Gyros, the UI Bookstore, SARB and the Alumni Association.
Prizes range from a dinner for two at Gambino’s, 10 bottles of golf and aaffle drawing for a VCR.
The music will be provided by Z-Fun 106, who will be giving out prizes as well.
SARB members and Alumni Office staff will also be present to help answer questions about the connections the graduates will have available to them as UI alumni. The Alumni Office also will verify addresses with most students so mailings will reach the proper people.
SARB members have been busy planning the event for some time.
Most graduating seniors should have received a flyer in the mail this past month to register for the Senior Send-Off.
Students are encouraged to return the mailer to the Alumni Office or call the office to let them know their intent on showing up. However it is never too late as all seniors are welcome.
For additional information call Casey Hanson at 885-6154.

Charge on Idaho!

With the University of Idaho VISA* card, you contribute to the University each time you make a purchase with this card. A percentage of each sale and 40% of the annual fee is donated to help fund various Alumni Association and Vandal Booster programs.

Thanks to people like you, this program has generated over $220,000 for programs that benefit the University of Idaho students and others.

 Booster helps out athletics

University of Idaho alumni and other interested Vandals provide important support to the UI in the areas of scholarship fund raising and networking through the Vandal Boosters. This group, some 3,500 members strong and spread out all over the world, has made substantial gifts to them as UI Booster and donors.
Their goal is to fully fund the scholarships provided by UI Athletics,” said Pete Liske, UI athletic director. “Annually the Vandal Boosters provide more than $600,000 in scholarships and giveback support to students.”
“We work closely with the UI Foundation in our fund raising efforts, and the Alumni Association in our networking, as evidenced by the Under-30 Alumni Club,” said Liske.
Vandals gather in great numbers to socialize and organize events at the T.G.I.F. gatherings.

VISA

Apply for the University of Idaho VISA today. Don’t wait! Applications are available through the University at the Alumni office (208/885-6154).

WEST ONE

BANK

Friday, April 21, 1995
SArb lets students mingle with alumni

Adam Gardels

If the University of Idaho has ever needed an organization to carry out such events as Homecoming, the Senior Off and Family Weekend, it has found it in the Student Relations Alumni Board—an organization that brings together alums to strengthen and continue their commitment to the university.

Following 25 years of growth and continued success, SArb is looking to promote strong alumni relations with graduating seniors. "SArb coordinates major campus projects and encourages students to form ties with the alumni," said Pam Farmer, associate director of Alumni Relations. She stressed the fact that SArb helps students in their transition from new graduates into alumni because SArb is the youngest chapter of the 22 UI alumni chapters. SArb is responsible for many campus activities and projects throughout the year. Beginning in spring, SArb hosts the New Students Traditions Nights. At this gathering freshmen and transfer students have the opportunity to learn about the campus and UI traditions.

SArb hosts the bonfire, the royalty events and breakfast at Homecoming. Near the end of the semester SArb welcomes all the fathers to the UI to be part of Dad's Weekend activities.

SArb is also the host of the Senior-Off Day, Silver and Gold event and Saturday's breakfast held during Family Weekend. The Silver and Gold event is held to honor the many contributions of the alumni and will begin at 2 p.m. on Saturday on the west patio of the Forestry Building. The Breakfast will begin tomorrow morning at 8 a.m. in the Student Union and is open to anyone. At the Breakfast SArb will honor the "SArby" they feel has proven outstanding qualities in leadership and team unity.

SArb believes that developing their 60 members' talents are integral to forging a link between student, community and alumni.

"SArb is a mixture of fun and opportunity," said Chris Campbell, president of SArb. "We have a lot of people who are really talented in different areas," Campbell said, stressing the leadership camps that SArb hosts for its new members.

SArb has enjoyed increased interests by new members. "We just had a membership drive at the beginning of the Semester and gained 24 new members," Campbell said. "We are really trying to get membership involvement from the residence halls. We targeted off campus students in our last membership drive."

SArb encourages interested people to contact them during their membership drive in order to join the organization.
Schedule of Events

Friday, April 21

- 12:00-5:00 p.m.
  - Welcome and Registration
    - Student Union, Main Floor
  - Site Specific Dance Performance
    - Library
  - Honors Convocation
    - Memorial Gym
  - International Bazaar & Coffeehouse
    - Student Union Ballroom

- 5:30 p.m.
  - Parents Association Board Dinner and meeting

- 7:00 p.m.
  - Student Achievement Awards in Leadership and Service
  - Administration Auditorium

- 7:30
  - Jazz Band & Jazz Choir Concert
    - School of Music Recital Hall
  - All Day
    - International Photo Exhibit
    - Student Union
    - Outdoor Environmental Sculpture
    - Library Lawn

Saturday, April 22

- 8:00-11:00 a.m.
  - Registration and Help Table
    - Student Union, Main Floor
  - Check in updated Schedules if possible

- 8:00 a.m.
  - Family Weekend Breakfast
    - Student Union Ballroom

- 9:00-11:00 a.m.
  - Greek / Residence Halls Open Houses

- 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
  - International Soccer Tournament
    - Guy Wicks Field

- 10:30 a.m.
  - Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby
    - Phi Delta Theta House

- 10:30 a.m.
  - Beta Theta Pi 4-man Scramble
    - UI Golf Course

- 1:00-4:00 p.m.
  - Micro-Reality Indoor Stock Car Racing
    - Student Union

- 2:00 p.m.
  - Alumni Silver & Gold Celebration
    - West Patio, Forestry Building

- 3:30 p.m.
  - Phi Kappa Phi Reception
    - Student Union

- 7:00 p.m.
  - Blue Key Talent Show
    - Student Union Ballroom

- 8:00 p.m.
  - Locus—An environmental dance group
    - Administration Auditorium

Sunday, April 22

- 8:00 a.m.
  - Palouse Triathlon

- 10:00 a.m.-3:00
  - International Soccer Tournament
    - Guy Wicks Field

- 2:00 p.m.
  - Film—"An American Tail"
    - Student Union, Borah Theater

---

For more information, or to register, please stop by the SUB information desk or call 885-6484

* Schedule subject to change
Agcat roar announces arrival of spring

Barnstorming legend survives flying local crop-dusters

Dave Lewis Staff

The first bluebird or robin pales as a meaningful harbinger of spring when compared to the hair-raising Doppler-effect roar of a barnstorming crop-duster. In early spring when area farm fields are still too wet for ground application of fertilizer, they are seedless day enough for crop-dusting. Since 1969, Craig Fountain has been flying the powerful planes that say "spring is finally here." Craig's father, Pete, founded Fountain's Flying Service and taught his son to fly crop-dusters. Last-time pilot and Craig's boyhood friend, Wayne Pitkin, has been flying the planes for the past 22 years. The father-son aspect of the business was taken a step further two years ago when Craig's son, Pete, began flying crop-dusters for hire. Although he has actually been crop-dusting for two years, the younger Pete Fountain claims to have been crop-dusting for "only a couple of days."

Crop-dusting and old-time barnstorming are products of ex-military pilots searching for an economically viable way to keep flying. After the First World War, some newly discharged pilots became barnstormers and roamed the countryside doing aerial stunts and selling rides in open cockpit aircraft. Others took a more business-like course and became crop-dusters, inventing a way to fertilize and spray weeds and insect pests when field conditions make other methods impractical. According to Craig, military airpplanes were relatively inexpensive, so it was natural that was-tired pilots would step out of uniform and into an exciting airborne occupation.

When the elder Pete Fountain founded his company, he spent long days in the air applying fertilizer and long nights walking the fields placing markers to guide him the next day, assuring accurate product placement. A remote controlled field marking device came into use in the sixties. Now with the appearance of a trigger, a pilot releases a weighted tissue marker rendering nocturnal hiking and the practice of employing humans to mark each past shuttle. The Automatic Flagman is also much safer than wheel marking. Before Automatic Flagmen, crop-dusters would execute a touch-and-go landing, then leaving wheels imprints in the field to mark each pass. When asked if either had ever suffered a crash, both Craig and Pitkin immediately pointed at the other and yelled, "He did!" Craig admits his crash was his own fault and happened while wheel marking a pass. Thankfully, his only injury was a scraped knuckle. The plane didn't fare so well. But according to its owner, it needed an overhaul anyway. "At least I was flying when I crashed," says Craig, alluding to the other finger-pointer.

Pitkin is a quiet man, permeated with mischievousness. "I don't do this for fun," he says with feigned seriousness, "I just like to control my adrenaline," this attitude keeps climbers on the rocks, there's nothing like climbing a route for the first time without falling, no matter how many times you've attempted it before. Granite Point is only a half hour away, ideal for some quick climbing after classes on a nice afternoon. Granite Point will often be visited by over 20 climbers at a time on the weekends, about as many as the space will allow. Post Falls, two hours north of Moscow, also has some very popular climbing sites, which make for a good day or weekend trip. So why not find someone with gear to take you out and show you the ropes? It might well turn into a hobby that will constantly present new challenges, and with them, new opportunities to experience the same thrill many climbers share every time they try a route that pushes their mental and physical abilities to the edge. With that you may also experience the inner peace many climbers report. The rocks are waiting for you.

Craig Fountain takes off from a dirt runway south of Moscow.

Rock climbing—paradox of adrenaline, serenity

Erik Marone Staff

It was a cool, slightly overcast afternoon that found Jared Marone standing apprehensively at the base of Granite Point, awaiting his first rock climb. His companion and mentor explained some techniques Jared might use for ascending the rock that was patiently waiting for him. He gave his banana some final adjustments, secured his knots, buckled with his belay and started up the face, awkwardly searching for handholds and footholds.

By the time he reached the top, he was moving with much more confidence and cut loose with a haphazard step as he reached the "bines that held his rope. With his feet back on the ground, he saw the rock in a new light. "It was a lot more difficult than I had expected," Jared commented on his first climb, "I things it would be easy getting to the top, but there's more to it."

Jared's story is typical of many people trying the sport for the first time. With a growing number of avid climbers in Moscow, it is getting easier to find someone who can take you out and get you started. Gear can be purchased many local sporting goods stores and the Campus Recreation climbing wall offers a wall orientation and free basic climbing lessons on Wednesday nights.

The wall is a great place to learn or warm up for the season, but most climbers feel there's nothing quite like hugging a rock face. Clark Karoon is one of them. "It's a kind of spiritual oneness with the rock," he says. "You have to know every hump and crack; it's like sex sometimes."

"It doesn't seem like it would be relaxing, but it is," says another climber, "it's just you and the rock. It's physically stimulating but mentally relaxing."

After his first climbing trip, John Marone was immediately ready for more. "When I get up there, my arms and hands were so tired, and I almost couldn't pull myself to the top. But when I finally did, I just stood up there and it felt great. I can't wait to get back out there." However, the paradoxical adrenaline and serenity make this a very exciting sport, there is always the need to climb higher, find tougher routes and push yourself farther. B.J. Locker says "Usually the only thing I say after a climb is "F---, I missed that hold!" This attitude keeps climbers on the rocks, there's nothing like climbing a route for the first time without falling, no matter how many times you've attempted it before.
Hunter safety classes reduce related accidents

Dave Claycomb
Staff

In 1979, the Idaho State Legislature passed a bill allowing anyone born after January 1, 1975 to be required to obtain a certificate of completion from a hunter’s education class to legally obtain a hunting license. Since that time, the number of accidental hunting deaths has rapidly declined in the state of Idaho.

Recently, a brochure entitled Hunter Education for the Future of Idaho’s Heritage was put out by the Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game in conjunction with the hunter’s safety class. The brochure explains how the hunter’s education classes teach new hunters some of the fundamental skills and attitudes that should be associated with the sport of hunting.

Hunting education classes are available on a first come first serve basis in most towns throughout Idaho and are held at least once a year. The classes are available to anyone eleven years of age or older and since a person must be at least twelve to hunt in Idaho, there is a one year opportunity for hunters wishing to get their certificate of completion before they are legally able to purchase a license.

Classes consist of a minimum of two evenings and two full hours of field exercise and range time, in some cases up to 22 hours. Classes generally take two to four weeks to complete.

Besides discussing hunting safety, the brochure has information on conservation and hunting ethics. Dan Papp, the Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game Education Coordinator said, “Beyond explaining how to apply for hunter education courses, the publication describes the history of hunting and provides tips and statistics.”

Anyone wishing to obtain a copy of Hunter Education for the Future of Idaho’s Heritage can get one from the Lewiston Regional Office or contact Dan Papp at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game in Boise at (208) 334-2263.

Spring

FROM PAGE 19

weeks. To further explain himself he adds, “I got sir sick the first day we fly every spring. Last year, I didn’t get over it until I dumped the last load.”

His crash was not related to pilot error. It happened on take-off when the landing gear failed. The plane ended up on its top, but the only injury sustained by the pilot happened when his crew released his seat belt and he fell out of the cockpit. Crop-dusting may look like fun, even so it employs powerful toys. An Avera Thrush with a 1,200 horsepower engine and a working speed of up to 140 miles per hour, doubles its 5,000 empty weight when its tanks are filled with products. A crew of only slightly slower Gramman Agit or a biplane with 600 horsepower and was the first plane to be designed for crop-dust, fogging, forest fire twos according to Avera’s Dan Lewis. “It’s a great engine,” he says, “But it reduces the noise level wherever possible.”

Completed, Picken and Pets have had many other interesting occurrences. Flying a crop-duster is exciting, to say the least. Once killed a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times. Another occurred when a deer in a mid-air collision by landing a couple of times.
To: All Parents

You are cordially invited to help your college student remember their days at the University of Idaho by ordering them a limited edition 1994-95 Gem of the Mountains yearbook.

Order your yearbook in the Student Union all weekend. They will be sold at the regular price of $32.50.

If you purchase a Gem of the Mountains during Family Weekend, you will receive a free gift compliments of the yearbook staff.

Don't miss out on one of the last opportunities to get in on the only collection of all the memories of the UI for the 1994-95 school year. The Gem covers the year from Rush to Graduation with most everything in between.

GEM
of the Mountains
Our fate rests in politics and religion

O verpopulation. It is quickly becoming the hot topic of the '90s. Overpopulation is an other new buzz word to be dropped at dinner parties and pseudo-intellectual gatherings.
Many in the scientific world have known for decades human population is growing too rapidly. Many others believe population numbers have no merit.
Matthias noted in the 18th century that food production grows arithmetically while population grows geometrically. Worldwide population reached one billion in the late 19th century. Today world population is in the neighborhood of six billion.
Billions mean little; it is hard to comprehend such large numbers. I have no idea what a billion of anything looks like.
To make things a little easier to understand; every two seconds nine babies are born. In the same two seconds 3 people die. The math is easy, every two seconds there is a net population increase of six people or in every second three people are added to human numbers.
Thanks to my treaty almanac for the information.
Any biological system is a closed system. This can be applied to microbes growing in a petri dish as well as the planet as a whole. The same principles of biology apply to both.
I will grant the world is a far more complex and sophisticated system than the petri dish, but simple observations lead to scientific revelations.
In a nutrient rich petri dish inco-rated with a microorganism growth abounds. The little critters grow exponentially. Until, some limiting factor runs out or the organism just drowns in its own wastes.
Just a simple observation.
It has been said the United States can support the population of China. Of this I have no doubts.
The more important question is do we as a culture want the same standard of living as China?
We as a species are simply too successful as a breed to survive. I don't claim to have all the answers.
But we do need to think about changing the way we approach the problem.
The current policy of fear no evil, see no evil speak no evil practiced by the primate of politics does not work. There has been a quiet rumbling in the populous for years, spearheaded by Zero Population Growth. The name of this organization is self explanatry.
The many whispers of the dark are becoming louder. But the voice-es are drowned in a sea of political spatathy.
An example: Now vice president
Al Gore approached the subject in his book, Earth in the Balance. He has backed off stances taken in the book. Political survival has taken the place of political virtue, but isn't survival the goal of politi-clases?
Religion is a belief system so embraced by so many collective consciousness of the world it fails to see the truths in science. Not that science can answer all moral questions of the world, just as religion cannot properly examine empirical information.
New approaches to population control need to be implemented.
Science and research needs to be integrated with politics and religion. Good luck to us; have a nice wait while swimming in a petri dish.

HUNT • FROM PAGE 20

Preachers declared that the bear had heard us coming and that we had scared it right before it shot.
Not being the type to argue with anyone over 6'4", I agreed and suggested that we sneak up on the next one.
After a successful stalk on the next target, Jetio raised up and let one go. Missing by about two counties, he suddenly lost his sense of diplomacy and threatened serious bodily harm upon not only me, but also my "Cousin lovin'" partner Moore. I tried to explain that the kill shot that he had inflicted on the rock he hit was far more impressive than actually hitting the target, but it was to no avail. As he began pummeling me about the head and neck region and
I started to lose consciousness,
I heard a mighty roar.
When I awoke in the hospital, I learned mynomates upper molars imbedd in Jetio's calf probably saved my life. Is there a lesson to be learned in all of this?
I don't know. I do know this though, elk and deer season can't get here soon enough.
I may hold worthless knowledge beyond my brain, or any other human on the face of the earth.

That's what I mean when you tell me that Major League Baseball player to die in a game, who went every World Series from 1960 to 1973 Oly: to mention when college sports 30 percent of the players in the NBA attended.

OK, so basically I know a lot of sports that the people can't care less about. For the most part I probably am being a diaphragm when it come to sports knowledge or athletic strategy. Later, however, I will reveal to you a little more knowledge for those interested in automotive mechanical wisdom, I will also reveal a lot of knowledge about one of the best salesmen in the country.

For many years, business man living in Pampa, grew up in Sandpoint, and received a variety of injuries including a sickle the day he finished his high school when he was 17, blowing a good portion of his arm hunting accident and sawing off a portion of meat above his elbow in a shop accident at his high school.

The reputation of the hard luck kid was well deserved as Kramer put a lot of pressure and a lot of effort into trying to still be paid as Kramer.

Kramer's high soon changed and college scouts from the University of Washington to show an interest in him who were looking to recruit the 6-foot-2, 210-pound offensive tackle and kicker.

The recruiter from Idaho, who had offered an athletic interest in Kramer as a sophomore, totally ignored the college freshmen-to-be because of the shortage injury to his arm, causing Kramer to strengthen his focus at the UW as the school would he play football for.

"I was in Seattle making a visit to the campus there. When I returned my dad told me that I better keep myself in Idaho. The coach at the UW had an alum from Sandpoint pick me up in his car and college scout me to go to the UI," Kramer said.

Once in Moscow, coaches convinced Kramer from an offensive tackle to a guard and the

Men's tennis crushes EWU, prepares for BSU

Ben Carr

Although the outcome of Idaho's match against Eastern Washington was never really in doubt, it probably put to rest some nagging doubts for coach Gary South.

After a less than spectacular effort at the Weber State Invitational last weekend, Wednesday's 7-4 defeat of Conference East-West EWU in the Moscow cold, served as a good warm up for the Conference Championships, in Boise, on April 29.

In Idaho's, the team was loss than a hundred percent.
A few players were down sick, the weather didn't cooperate, and the format of the matches was different from what the players were used to. South and his players didn't see all those problems as excuses, they just took everything in stride.

"We win some, you lose some," South said.

The midweek match against EWU served as the swan song for Idaho's three seniors at home. Nirea Lall, Ryan Stion, and New Zealand native, Mark Holliday, all ended their Idaho home career with wins, and started looking towards the BSC Championships in two weeks.

Idaho tore through EWU in the singles matches, losing only one set.

In his straight sets victory, Mark Holliday used his powerful serve to send the ball swirling over the net and then used his 6-foot-3 frame to rush the net and keep Sam Stinson off balance for a 6-3, 6-1 win over the EWU junior.

In a much of a much different style than Holliday and Stinson, Nirea Lall used his superior quickness to out the hard-hitting freshman John Calcina, 6-1, 6-2.

The victory raised Lall's singles record to 11-11.

In his soft coach's voice, South will tell you that his job is to

Kramer tells of pigskin career

Former NFL and Idaho player talks to Argonaut

Damon Barkdull

Growing up in Sandpoint, Idaho, NFL great and former football star Jerry Kramer had the reputation of being the hard luck kid.

Kramer, now a busy business man living in Pampa, grew up in Sandpoint, and received a variety of injuries including a sickle the day he finished his high school when he was 17, blowing a good portion of his arm hunting accident and sawing off a portion of meat above his elbow in a shop accident at his high school.

The reputation of the hard luck kid was well deserved as Kramer put a lot of pressure and a lot of effort into trying to still be paid as Kramer.

Jerry Kramer (46) kicks the ball from the hold of the holder of Punter Bart Star in one NFL years.

San Francisco, the 49ers selected Kramer to play in both the Shrine East-West game and the North-South college all-star game.

After finishing his senior year, Kramer was unsure whether or not he would play in the National Football League.

In 1968, Kramer was drafted by one of his friends and Wayne Walker (also drafted into the NFL) and Kramer found out that he had gone in the 4th round to the Green Bay Packers.

Kramer's favorite memory was hearing how well coached Mike Kuhlman was and the newly signed rookie was off to Green Bay, Wisconsin.

"It was a really big thrill for me. I was so naive about the whole thing. My friend Wayne Walker was also drafted by the Packers. Stopping short, except he went to the world championship and he was drafted by the Packers. Wayne teased me about that for a while," Kramer said.

In Kramer's first year for the Packers he started at right guard and the Women's golf team finishes on fire

Mark Vanderwall

The Vandals' number one player, was left home with the flu.

The women's golf program in Moscow is definitely on the way up and after its brief stay, it has become one of the premier women's sports on campus.

"We went from the cellar to being contenders in a very short period of time," said Rassmussen.

In a season that saw the Vandals steadily improve from tourney to tourney, the hard work finally paid off and will be great motivation going into next season.

With the Masters, British Open, and Skins Game getting a lot of media attention, Idaho may have a hidden display of talent to watch as well.

"I think with the nucleus we have and the recruits we have coming in, that we will battle for the Big Sky Conference title in our last year in the conference," said Rassmussen.

Cori Omundson, senior golfer, prepares to tee off during practice earlier in the season.
Stokes experiences a change of seasons

Mark Vanderwall

Leaving the sunny confines of California for the less than temperate atmosphere of Idaho wasn’t an easy choice for current Idaho volleyball assistant Melissa Stokes, but the transition has been all that and a bag of chips.

Stokes, who grew up in El Cajon, California, played a game she referred to as volleyball tennis as a child and thought that it was what most people call volleyball.

"We would line up on a tennis court, and let the ball hit once before we would volley and I thought that a boring game," Stokes said.

With basketball filling her winter and softball her spring, Stokes had nothing to fill her fall, so she decided to try her hand at volleyball. You could say it was a little more exciting to her than that childhood game of volleyball tennis.

"I had never seen the net that high and I found that volleyball was quite a bit different than I had originally thought," added Stokes.

Stokes proceeded to earn All-American honors in her new found sport and was a highly sought freshman for many college teams. After nailing down her choices to either San Diego State or Washington State, the Aztecs chose the Aztecs rather than the Cowgirls, simple fact that the Cowgirls were 2-10 in the Pac-10 conference the year before and the Aztecs were a top-10 team as usual.

"There was also the fact that there was a senior setter in front of me and I knew I was going to get a chance to play as a sophomore," said Stokes.

Stokes came to the Idaho program to play outside hitter and moved up the ladder to assistant coach in a matter of six months.

She will be entering her fourth year on the Palouse in the fall.

Since her arrival, along with head coach Tom Hilbert, the Idaho program has made a drastic turnaround.

Stokes has been given a lot of slack to do her own thing and this in itself proves Hilbert’s trust in his top assistant.

Stokes handles the weight training, scowling, recruitment and some of the on-court coaching duties as well.

"I’m in a great position here at Idaho and I am very fortunate that I have always been around good people, both as a player and as an assistant here," said Stokes.

Stokes comes from a family of six, that includes all four children being girls, two older and one younger. She credits her parents for getting and staying involved in athletics.

"My parents have been very supportive of all of us, whether it be as parents or as volleyball practice, they were always there for us," said Stokes.

If there was anything the she would have liked to have done different, it might have been to stay competitive longer, but overall she is very comfortable with the choices she has made.

"I could have gone and played in Europe or onto the beach, but who knows? If I had waited five years to get coaching I may not be where I’m at today," added Stokes.

Stokes still loves to play the game as well as coach and a couple of times a summer she goes back to her roots and gets out on the beach for a few hours of competition.

"I have a friend back in San Diego that I play with and (former Vandal) Dee Porter and I have done more well together too," said Stokes. "Dee and I are planning on playing in four tournaments this summer. Tom gives me the time off to do that so I’m in a very good situation there as well," added Stokes.

Hilbert didn’t have enough good things to say about his top assistant and for good reason.

"It’s tough to give her a lot of freedom and show her every aspect of the program. A lot of coaches won’t do that," said Hilbert.

"The greatest asset she possesses is that she’s an excellent coach and I am very confident in the decisions she makes," added Hilbert.

With the skills Stokes has shown here at Idaho and the eagerness she shows in her work, you may someday hear her name from the announcers booth, only this time as a head and not an assistant coach.
TENNIS  *FROM PAGE 23

I think that if we play as well as we can, we will at least get fourth, and that’s as high as we’ve reached since I’ve been here.

—Niren Lal
Senior tennis player

Driving is one split decision after another.

It’s not enough that you have to set the cruise, adjust the mirror, buckle up, find a decent radio station, turn up the radio, roll down the window and fix your hair...

you have to watch the road?

For a FREE estimate, give us a call. 882-8535.
Mixed Media
Jack Ohman

!Comic strip with text:

Dave
David Miller

!Comic strip with text:

Bound & Gagged
Dana Summers

!Comic strip with text:

---

UI COMPUTER STORE

SPECIALS & NEW PRODUCTS

Description
Price

- Ribbon, Brother AX-10/20/30, EM-30 $7.20

- University of Idaho Mouse Pads (all types)
  $8.75

- Creative Labs Value MultiMedia Kit
  $249.00

- Microsoft Serial Mice, Bulk
  $1.00

- Lotus Smart Suite Release 3, Windows
  $112.00

- Colored Printer Paper, 100 sheets, 24 lb
  $2.00

- Apple Full-Page Monochrome Monitor
  $275.00

- DTC 2278L, VESA-LB Controller & 1/O Board
  $28.00

(quantities limited on some products)

Coming Soon...

Grateful Dead Mouse Pads!

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO

BOOKSTORE

---

Collegiate crossword

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Across</th>
<th>Down</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Like text scores, sometimes.</td>
<td>1. Type of triangle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7. Street markers</td>
<td>2. Summa (3 wds.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12. Famous pitcher</td>
<td>3. Orichiral point</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13. Parcheesi</td>
<td>4. ——- Lam</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15. Like a color</td>
<td>5. Chemical suffix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16. Like an object</td>
<td>6. Say at Great</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18. Like an object</td>
<td>7. Planets</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22. Like an object</td>
<td>8. Flights</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26. Like an object</td>
<td>9. Phase</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28. Like an object</td>
<td>10. Type of story</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31. Like an object</td>
<td>11. Tricked (3 wds.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>34. Like an object</td>
<td>12. Antiseptic</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>36. Like an object</td>
<td>13. Sparkling champagne</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39. Like an object</td>
<td>14. Present</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40. Like an object</td>
<td>15. Gibbon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>43. Like an object</td>
<td>16. Mythological</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>45. Like an object</td>
<td>17. Relative of the cat</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>47. Like an object</td>
<td>18. Small fish</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50. Like an object</td>
<td>19. Cheese balls</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>52. Like an object</td>
<td>20. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>54. Like an object</td>
<td>21. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>56. Like an object</td>
<td>22. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>58. Like an object</td>
<td>23. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>60. Like an object</td>
<td>24. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>62. Like an object</td>
<td>25. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>63. Like an object</td>
<td>26. Common fruit</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

Answers

This Week's Puzzle

Comic strip with text:
Positive coverage lacking

What has prompted the very biased and negative coverage of Living Faith Fellowship without substantial positive input by current church members? Reality says everyone is a vollitional being, and has the will to choose his vocation, his church, his attitudes, etc. Those of us who have chosen to embrace the Biblical lifestyle at L.F.F. are obviously excited to be there. That's our choice and that's our attitude. The Bible clearly states there should be "no divisions among you, but that you be perfecty joined together in the same mind and judgment." (1 Cor. 1:10). We have learned to build our relationship meaningfully, sincerely, and constructively.

When the Word of God faithfully preached, the Church at large cannot be responsible for the wrong choices people make leading to divorce, bankruptcy, sexual immorality, etc. Although it is easy to find a scapegoat, before God we are all accountable for our personal choices in what we think, say, and do.

The Argonaut reporters would do well to write another "sensational article" from the perspective of long-standing church members who give freely of their time and talents to see the Kingdom of God established in Pullman and other parts of the world. Good news coverage legitimately presents both sides of the story.

-Cheryl Parduhn

Help much appreciated

Palouse Habitat for Humanity would like to express our thanks to all of the members of this community; the students; the visiting moms who were attending Mom's Weekend at WSU and the people who came from surrounding areas to attend our 3rd Annual Spring-Time Home & Garden Tour. It was a smashing success and it would not have been so without all of you and the gracious home owners who opened their homes for us. To Dan and Stacey Lansen, Fred Rabe, Sarah Reckn, David and April Rych and Ron and Diane See—

Thank you!
A special thank you to Vera White at Moscow/Pullman Daily News for her wonderful and in-depth feature story on our Home Tour and to the other newspapers who published our many news releases.

Many members of the area churches burned the midnight oil baking all of those yummy cookies and the LDS Church of Pullman supplied lemonade and we thank those folks. Several area businesses gave us a boost by advertising our Home Tour on their Reader Boards and we appreciate that.

Last but certainly not least, our thanks go to Palouse View Dental Center for their early support with a $1,000 contribution to enable us to start our paid advertising campaign (the balance is ear-marked for construction costs).

Palouse Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization devoted to building safe and affordable housing for needy families in both Whitman and Lewis Counties. In order to fulfill these goals, fundraisers such as this are necessary. When we receive the wonderful support such as we did with this Home Tour—we are indeed grateful.

-Pam Peterson, Chair, Fund-Raising Committee
-Donna Blackwell, Office Administrator

Vandal Fridays a success

We would like to thank those who participated in the success of Vandal Fridays. This recruiting event helped show future Vandals and their parents the best our campus has to offer. We would like to thank the following: Staff from the Student Advisory Services Office, Dr. Bruce Pittman, Linda Davis, Chris Wehsltich, Dee Rups, Jean Bobnote, Karen Angles, Panhellenic and Interfraternity Officers and all other Greek volunteers, HCT 104 Disc Jockeys Jim Valley and John McCaine for providing music and a light show, Pepsi for donating half of the soda, Delta Advincula of Marriott for outstanding service in catering, and the staff of New Student Services for organizing this event.

We would also like to thank the following University officials for attending casino-night: Dr. Hal Godwin, Pam Farmer, Pam Peterson, and Margaret and Maynard Foxberg. Thanks again to everyone who contributed their time and energy to Vandal Fridays. We are looking forward to next year! GO VANDALS!!

-Katie Jolley, Panhellenic Assistant Rush Chair
-Jon Smith, Greek Intern

PLASTICPAPERCANSGLASS

Sorting your trash is easier than you think!

Recycle!
Hitler would feel right at home

Erik Marone

Once again, ramblings of anti-rights legislation are being heard from the south. Apparently Ralph Cigal-Gillgony, and his roving band of the Idaho Citizen's Alliance were not satisfied with his recent defeat of Proposition 1 and are preparing another measure for the next general election.

It is painfully obvious that none of us can abide by the simple idea to live and let live. One of the more insidious of these was Adolf Hitler, whose influence we are all too familiar with here in North Idaho, and the ICA is little more than another group behaving much like the National Socialist German Workers' Party of the years, and I can't recall a single instance divine instruction to actively seek out and persecute anyone, even homosexuals.

Unless, of course, you adhere to the antiquated and divinely amended Old Testament, it doesn't prescribe a course of action for humans to take concerning actions God condemns; He will deal with it when the time comes. However, vividly remembering being taught to love my neighbor in spite of their sins does not make me judge others.

Oh, but groups like Queer Nation and the Lesbian Avengers are corrupting our youth! Neither group would exist if people could learn to accept the reality that everyone is not a white god-fearing heterosexual. And so, they do not "convert" people to homosexuality in the same way the Church converted the Native Americans.

They provide information on homosexuality so people might not be so afraid of it. The tactics they use to spread this information seem overly forceful, but it is about the only way they are able to get people to pull their heads out of the sand and take notice. And for all you parents out there, I know it is hard, but there is a chance that your precious little baby is gay, no matter how much you wish that she or he wouldn't grow in that direction. Sometimes we want to grow up afraid of what they might be, but lot others human beings.

So before you sign on with the ICA or vote yes on the upcoming ballot issue, in whatever form it presents itself, keep in mind that it is not your right to legislate who is to be considered a "less than".
This week, students at the University of Idaho will wear a purple ribbon to show their support in the fight against the attitudes that advocate date and acquaintance rape. One in four women will be attacked or sexually assaulted by the time she finishes college. Men are also victims of date and acquaintance rape, but rarely report it. Over 60% of rapes are committed by acquaintances. Nearly 57% of college females said they had been assaulted by a man they were dating.

Date and acquaintance rape is a problem we all face. It’s time we break the silence and educate each other. It’s time we learn to support the rape survivors and talk about it.

This week is National Sexual Assault Awareness Week. Student are learning to communicate clearly in relationships, respect each other and accept their partner’s decisions.

You can make a difference. Date and acquaintance rape can be prevented when you become aware.

Wear Your Purple Ribbon!

Pick up your ribbon at the Student Union, Library or the Women’s Center.

National SEXUAL ASSAULT Awareness Week

April 17th - 22nd

Presented by
The ASUI Safety Task Force,
Greeks Against Rape,
and the Women’s Center
No rose-colored glasses for U.S.

Terrorists. To many in America, the word sums up images of angry men shooting at some musclebound action hero in the latest Hollywood megaspectacle. Popular media would have us believe that terrorists are Arabian, Irish or German, blowing up people and buildings in the name of political correctness or Allah. Terrorism is something that happens somewhere else, we think.

Not any more.

The bombing of the Federal Building in Oklahoma City Wednesday changed all that. As of this writing, the number of dead stands at 39, with perhaps 200 still missing. Attorney General Janet Reno offered a reward of up to $2 million for information leading to the capture of the men responsible, as composite drawings were broadcast. President Clinton denounced the terrorists as “evil cowards,” and vowed to turn all resources towards their capture.

But the damage has been done. Whether or not the terrorists are caught, the bombing was a success. Confidence has been transferred from terrorists as citizens, to being wanted as criminals. America has always been like being base in a game of tag. Once you're here, you're free from threat of harm, with the rare exception such as the War of 1812 or the balloon bombings of World War II.

Recent history has shown us that this is no longer true. With the World Trade Center bombing of two years ago and the Oklahoma City bombing, it is apparent that America is not the fish out of water, as terrorists we have learned to hate it to be. It's time to admit that we can be attacked in the same way that England and Germany and Israel can be and have been for decades.

It's time that we listen to the experts and naysayers who have warned us of this day for years. If terrorism can strike in the heartland of our nation, with no warning or known reason, we've been too complacent. Perhaps it's time for more stringent security at airports, docks and other ports of entry. Milk and other foodstuffs will be more closely inspected, higher levels of cooperation with Interpol; all these and more are necessary precautions that have been ignored in America too long.

It's time, also, we need to acknowledge that we have been lucky until now. It has happened before. It can happen again.

—Brandon Nolta

Do you want to be rebellious? Drink two percent milk!

T

There are many things in this world that we enjoy: Smoking. Drinking alcohol. Doing drugs. Trying to cross Third Street or the Pulaski Highway on foot. But now a new menace has crept up: two percent milk. And as the norm is an increase in cost, some guy with too much money and too few brains is trying to push his fake health benefits on the rest of us.

Phil Sokolof is a millionaire Neozoologist who sees his personal fortune to fix fat in the American diet. According to an article in The spanish-Review, Sokolof's mission is to drive people to drink two percent milk. He promises that two percent milk is not low in fat.

Most of us are familiar with the ad campaign by the dairy industry featuring celebrities sporting milk "mustaches." Well, now millionaire Phil Sokolof is fighting back with his own ads, featuring a plump woman with a milk mustache and the caption: "Would you let your child eat skin milk?"

"We just switched from two percent milk to skin milk. We'll all be healthier, and I'll lose weight." Well hey, baby, I've got news for you. It doesn't matter if you switch from two percent milk to skin milk if you're just going to sit on your butt all day and eat junk. Skin milk claims that skin milk has as many nutrients as skin milk, and that skin milk is just one of those factors.

So there's the truth. I am one of those thick-skinned people who only cares for food that's good (ok, much better) for my health. My doctor claims that skin milk has as many nutrients as skin milk, and is less fattening. Well, goats milk may have a plethora of nutrients, but I'd be willing to bet that it doesn't taste very good. And yet, this rich guy want to shuck don the yummy qualities of two percent milk for the urinary qualities of skin milk.

I was once forced to drink skin milk when the caffeine was out of good #2. Being naive, I thought that skin milk would like similar to real milk. I was wrong. Skin milk tastes like stale water. In fact, it probably is stale water. It's probably the water that dairies use to flush out their milk storage tanks, and then they sell it to health nuts who are dumber enough to buy it.

Comparing two percent milk with bacon (as Sokolof's ad's do) is just plain ridiculous. Two percent milk has more of everything. Two percent milk has more fat. Two percent milk is just as good as the other guy's. Switching to skin milk will not be a cure-all for obesity. (And yes, I would let my child eat nine strips of bacon a day, if he was an active person. My great-grandfat-ther ate bacon and eggs every morning of his life and lived to be ninety-four years old).

While we're on the subject, who does this guy think he's fooling by saying that skin milk makes you fat? My roommate drinks WHOLE milk (pew!) and is one of the skinniest people I know. He's even been known to run marathons. Skin milk doesn't even exercise regularly. There are many convincing factors on obesity, and the fat content in milk is just one of those factors.

And then there's taste. I am one of those thick-skinned people who only cares for food that's good (ok, much better) for my health. My doctor claims that skin milk has as many nutrients as skin milk, and is less fattening. Well, goat's milk may have a plethora of nutrients, but I'd be willing to bet that it doesn't taste very good. And yet, this rich guy want to shuck don the yummy qualities of two percent milk for the urinary qualities of skin milk.

A

Aaron Schab

Nazism refusing to stay dead

A residents of Northern Idaho, we need to pay spe- cial attention to the ceremonies planned for May 8, 1995. This day marks the end of Nazi Germany uncondi- tionally surrender- ed their claim to the Allied Forces, effectively ending World War II in the European theatre. These ceremonies will expose the message that Nazism was a miserable failure, and that the Final Solution ranks among the worst heinous crimes ever com- mitted by humanity.

We need to pay attention to and echo voices of those who cry out against the ideology of this failed system. We are living around here who seem to think that Nazism is still a viable politi- cal and racial system, which most certainly is not.

Fifty years ago on May 8, Nazism died, and we must deal with the fact that it's dead. Requiem Reapers' Ghost is still festively hiding in our own backyards.

Neo-Nazi confuse me. Why do people buy into a philosophical system that is inculcated with the slaughter of six million Jews, of twelve million Germans, of millions of citizens of the countries of Europe must still sellers who come to fight what some have aptly called the "Good War"? Nazism is at the root of a philo- sophy of hate, destruction and death. It is the product of a philo- sophy of a "pure" and slab- damed Europe.

My father was a twelve-year-old boy living in the Netherlands when the war broke out, and was forced into a concentration camp, out of the nine in his family, only one survived.

We are living here with the memory of Nazism for the next five years. It is an eyesore to the grim, hor- ror reality that Nazi terrors. These Aryan's were in general, to be feared, not emulated or sup- ported as the "master race." "We the Gestapo got you in one of your vans," Dad tells us, "you were never seen again." A five to six year old family was stopped by the Gestapo, but was allowed to escape from the back of the van by a Dutch collaborator. "The man ran like crazy, trying to find a place to hide," Dad continued. "He died. Lucky for him."

I was lucky enough to be able to go with him and my brother and sister in a vacation to Holland in 1990. We stopped by the Bay of Haarlem, and the Anne Frank House in Amsterdam. Both build- ings stand as testimonials to the fight against racial persecution. Jews were hidden in the Bly by the Ten Bosch family, who also participated in an underground ring that smuggled Jews and ration coupons. The Anne Frank House is a monument to those who died to fulfill the ominous Nazi ideology of a "racially pure" Europe. "Dad said little at the Anne Frank House; he simply stared out of the fourth floor windows that the Prussians were forbidden to enter, in fear of being caught. As we left the place, I saw tears in his eyes and heard him whisper, 'How could anyone let this happen?'"

I asked myself the same question as we visited the remnants of Camp Westerbork, a concentration camp located in Holland. "Fifty- four thousand Dutch and Jews were sent to this camp, and from here to Germany," Dad told us, reading from the Dutch signs in the camp. "Ninety-six of them came back alive."

We are living here with the memory of the war. "We are willing to pay to make friends with the Nazi's..." are the words of a mechanistic, grocery store clerk, engineer, mayor or queen who does not deserve a kind word, a smile, and protection when their lives and liberties are threatened. We need not Neo-Nazis, the sellers of hate. The system they're selling is a system of death.

The death of sole legacy that Nazism left to us, is the American system, and does not, repeat, does not have any rational place in modern society. The template that led to the Final Solution and the Final Solomn is a gross and scaring example of what we are. Our need for hate.

Those who believe that tolerance, calm, and freedom will save the future's lies are deluding themselves. We need to help out to make sure that hate of this magnitude never shows again. Our uly faces again on this side of earth.

Brian Davidson

Point of View

Friday, April 21, 1995

32