Sock her Vandals pommel PSU, 5-0
BY DEBI CAIN
year-end

The University of Idaho women’s soccer team stopped the Portland State Vikings 5-0 Sunday in the Lady Vandal home opener. The Vikings fell to 0-5-0 overall and the Vandals moved to 2-1-0.

The old saying that defense wins games proved true in Sunday’s match up. The Vandal defense stepped up and didn’t allow Portland a single shot on goal throughout the entire game.

The Vandals outshot the Vikings 22-4, including 11-0 on goal. The Vandals controlled the game from the start.

In the first half, to keep the game tight, Cummings scored the second goal, five minutes before the half ended off a pass from Democrat.

In the second goal, in the second half, Cummings scored on a penalty kick. The second goal was the Vandals first penalty kick scored all season.

The Vandals outscored the Vikings 2-0.

Apple pickers hold 48-hour hunger strike

BY NICK RATERMAN

Apple pickers in Eastern Washington began a 48-hour hunger strike Friday to protest declining wages or orchard owners. Pickers, who are employed by subcontractors of Beris & Sons, said they are being paid $4.50 an hour, just above the minimum wage, but do not have any benefits, such as health care and retirement plans.

Farms owners feel that wages paid at the Flat Top Ranch, just outside the Tri-Cities area, are too low, according to results of the Washington Apple Commission's annual survey of farm workers. In past years, farm workers have said wages were too low by the same amount. However, this year’s survey said that wages had been shifted to hourly wages at minimum wage. While pickers said they were being paid more than minimum wage, they still feel that wages are too low. "We’re making more than that due to an hour’s work, but we’re still working too much," one worker said.

"The orchard workers receive wages from January to April for the harvest season and from May to July with varying weather patterns and in inclement weather. It pays $6.50 to $8.00 an hour in June," a worker said.

"They’re working six days a week on average during the harvest season. They spend $300 to $400 a month for room and board. They have no benefits, such as health care, retirement plans, or other benefits," another worker said.

"I’m working this year because I’m living at home and they’re paying $6.50 an hour, but it’s not enough to get by. We’re making a living, but not enough," said another worker. "I have to work 12 hours a day, six days a week, to support my family.

"We’re working too much, and we’re not getting paid enough," another worker said. "The boss doesn’t care about the workers. We need to work more, but we’re not getting paid enough."

"We want to work for a living, not a job," a worker said. "We need to work for a living wage, not a minimum wage.

The workers also said that they had been working in the orchard for years, but had never been paid more than minimum wage. "We’ve been working in the orchard for years, but we’ve never been paid more than minimum wage," a worker said. "We need to work for a living, not a job."

Moscow police ask students to help identify suspect

BY DARA YATES

Moscow Police are asking for help in a credit card fraud case involving several pictures in Memorial Gym of a suspect who allegedly stole a credit card from a locker there and charged over $500 worth of goods.

The suspect is described as a white man, 5'9" with a stocky build.

When the crime was committed, the suspect was wearing a T-shirt and shorts, and was wearing a sweat cap. Police also noted he had the initials "JK" on his sweat cap.

Officer Jim Kouril, of MPD, said, "Michael Smith, a freshman and Weekend Warrior Student helps at the University, said he saw a young man wearing the sweat cap in Memorial Gym around 10:30 a.m., Aug. 19th, but he said he would be unable to identify the suspect."

The suspect was last seen on the 2nd floor of the Student Union near the Student Store.

Smith was unavailable for comment.

Close to $310 in merchandise was purchased, collectively with Smith's credit card at Wal-Mart and the Emporium in Moscow.

The suspects picture was taken by security cameras at Wal-Mart.

If the suspect is apprehended, he will be charged with a felony. In the case, misdemeanor/civilian charges are investigated by the Id. Police Department.

The suspect, if charged and found guilty, may serve up to one year in prison.

"We're hoping students might be able to identify the suspect, and help us out," Kouril said.

"There has been no other cases of credit card fraud reported to MPD. Last year Smith was very often, but often enough to make it a problem for college students," Kouril said.

"We're trying to work with other colleges on a program to help fellow students," Kouril said.

Smith's cell phone number is 885-7074 at the MPD city offices or 885-0161 or 885-7074 at the Janet E. Poley, Ph.D., likes to talk about technology in Dr. Seuss terms.

Poley, the president of the American Distance Education Consortium, will give a presentation entitled "Technology and EthiCs: Connections—Oh, The Places You'll Go!" Thursday in the Moscow Community Center.

Poley is a pioneer in blending children's literature, technology and education together.

In this particular presentation, information technology and distance learning, Poley informed a mostly attended group that the use of technology, education and literature can be combined to benefit the students.

"It's a great opportunity for students," Poley said. "Those things, when put together, have allowed connection to the world.

"It's a great opportunity for students," Poley said. "Those things, when put together, have allowed connection to the world.

In the entertaining speech, which contained quotes from children's writer Dr. Seuss, Poley discussed e-sources and Web 2.0 tools. E-sources, Poley explained, included e-mail, e-readers and much more, including a mention of the amount of information about the Internet in the college classroom.

In 1994, Poley was recognized as a National Educational Computing Computer Week as one of the 100 outstanding information technology leaders in government, business and academia.

That same year she became CEO of ADEC, a distant education consortium of 50 state universities and land-grant colleges.

Her work is based on national science policy, and teaching government, as well as training, international situations, and in-service education as the world changes and moves around the world.

Poley has received many honors and awards for her work. She has also written many journal articles and presentations.

Her presentation was made possible by the Margaret Ruth Kirsche Enthasized Speaker Fund and was sponsored by the Margaret Ruth Kirsche School of Family and Consumer Sciences.

KUO!
Where diversity will never reign

Dear Editor,

As the two teasers are arguably the most popular TV shows on the West Coast, the Super Dave Show can provide some adventures. I was informed, via television, that Super Dave Smith is 30 percent African American, 30 percent Italian American, 30 percent Jewish American, and 10 percent Native American. Three students who listened to my show over the past two years know that I planned on using diversity and rock music. However, now I am going to teach them from a different perspective. In the past, the students who enjoyed popular music daily thought that the music presented everything they could not get in Moscow or Cuba on a radio show, which played the kind of rock that has been around since the days of the Beatles. In your show, you presented a new mix of music and radio formats each week. Your diversity.

When I move into KUO! I have the same thing. There is no diversity. Whatever 15 percent of the students think is good music; we therefore must pass it on to all students. This is our only reality.

Dear KUO!
I think it is possible to call itself a diverse station when the station manager and music director pick who gets on the radio. I have been there.

Keep in mind that a per- son does not have to go to the semester to find this station. If I have made a drink of the hard-earned tuition dollars, I am very pleased and music is very important to me. These are the only values, I just would be quite perturbed.

The only diversity you will hear now are commercials on which DJ is creating, playing your favorite songs, which are not for the losers.

Editor's note: This is part one of a three-part series about Wal-Mart with a focus on its impact as a port of entry, corporate culture, and its impact on local economies.

Why Wal-Mart?

Editor's note: Wal-Mart is a worldwide retail giant with a presence in the United States and over 200 countries. It is known for its low prices and wide selection of products.

Wal-Mart is often criticized for its impact on local economies, particularly in small towns and rural areas. However, the company has also been credited with creating jobs and lowering prices for consumers.

The controversy over Wal-Mart's impact on local economies has been ongoing for several years. Some argue that the company's presence can lead to increased competition and lower prices, while others believe that it can cause businesses to close and lead to a decline in local economies.

Wal-Mart's impact on local economies is complex and multifaceted. On one hand, the company has been able to attract new businesses and provide jobs for local residents. On the other hand, it has also been accused of driving local businesses out of business and lowering wages.

In recent years, Wal-Mart has faced criticism for its labor practices, including its treatment of workers and its use of sweatshops. The company has also been accused of contributing to environmental degradation through its use of non-renewable resources and its contribution to climate change.

Wal-Mart's impact on local economies is a topic of ongoing debate. While some argue that the company has helped to create jobs and provide low prices for consumers, others believe that it has contributed to the decline of small towns and rural communities. The controversy over Wal-Mart's impact on local economies is likely to continue as the company continues to expand and face new challenges.

"Don't care if it's staged or not, it just entertaining. It still art and violence," Art said.

So if WWF and WCW wrestling is really fake and not real but just entertainment, is it in the right to aide it? The reason is we've been conditioned to accept it.

Really, a lot of scenes, TV shows and even the news shows rely on a large amount of sex, violence and bad language.

Television programming is very diverse. Sex and violence is what a lot of people want to see. That's what's entertainment and media industries give us.

Moreover, we have to argue sex and violence at an early age. Who can forget Lenny Tunks and Tim and Jerry? WWF view-estimates it is a sort of sport and service meets are great event. Here are a simple mimes of Mrs. Evergreen.

ASUI senator seeks input on driving program
BY ANNETTE HENKE

ASUI Senator Leota Assifi wants to give drunk University of Idaho students a ride home on Friday and Saturday nights. Assifi wants to speak with the safety feedback for a US designated driver program, which she hopes to start sometime this school year.

The program would provide a safe ride home to UI students who are under the influence. The program would only work if a friend has a car and has been approved by the ASUI Safety Board.

She said the program is the result of the recent push to make UI a safer place to be.

She said she thinks a dry campus will mean parties off campus and cause DUI's and alcohol-related accidents.

Currently, Assifi has no funding for the program. She said the funding would come from somewhere between $50,000 to $12,000. She is looking for sponsors and potential sources.

She said she hopes that if a grant is not sufficient, ASUI will match the grant, money from the General Reserve.

Assifi does not know what the program would look like.
