Hispanic student pursues college dream

Vandal victory current history with second consecutive win over border rival WSU

Quick facts

What the win means for UI, WSU

BY LEAN ANDREWS

Seattle Times

When Washington State representative George Carreiro was president of the National Hispanic Association of College Students, he pushed for a resolution to officially recognize September 15 as Hispanic American Day. Even though the resolution was passed, he still feels a sense of accomplishment. "I'm very happy about this," he said. "We've come a long way, but there's still a lot of work to be done."

Film helps students exhibit Hispanic heritage

by Yvonne Woodett

In celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month, about 50 students from various production companies on campus will present the film "The Price of Glory" Friday in the Bergh Theatre of the Student Union.

The movie, sponsored by the University of Idaho's Hispanic Heritage Group, is the Latin American story of a young man who is a member of the G.I. Fisti family, which exports illegal drugs to the United States.

Cecilia Angelino, a student at the University of Idaho, is working as a field producer for the movie, which is expected to be released in about 10 years.

Farmers' children choose beers to "preserve the stories of their families" and "realize the dreams of their ancestors," said Angelino.

Clinton taps oil reserves
First oil tap since Gulf War

BY ANNETTE HENKE

Reuters

Dec. 28 (Reuters) - President Clinton became the first President since 1990 to order the release of supplemental oil reserves.

With regular untold gas shortages threatening the Pacifica and winner abroad, publicists are seeking to reassure their clients on the nation's oil reserves.

The Department of Energy, a ring of crude oil currently costs $30 per barrel, more than twice its cost at the end of 1990. Gulf War.

Clinton announced the release of 60 million barrels from the United States Strategic Oil Reserves into the market. Currently, the United States has approximately 1 billion barrels in the reserve.

The U.S. President didn't tap into the oil slush, and at that time, many observers assumed this was a possible emergency move.

The total release of 60 million barrels of crude oil is an unprecedented step by the United States Energy Administration to try to prevent possible shortfalls of heating oil in the winter months.

With a monthly consumption of 1.5 million barrels of oil, the United States would need a half billion barrels to cover the needs of the coming winter months.

The release, however, is a symbol of the high price of oil, with the price of crude oil in the North American market at $30 per barrel, more than twice its cost at the end of 1990.

The release is also a symbol of the high price of oil, with the price of crude oil in the North American market at $30 per barrel, more than twice its cost at the end of 1990.
Don't freak out: ruling will help

Hey lady kids… your fun isn’t over yet! Deluge from the heavens is within a week. (Yes, that’s right, students have been making plans for almost 18 months for this, you know.)

During the summer, we’ve all been acclimating to the idea of the end of the United States, which is due to begin currently. We have all been waiting for this moment for so long, and it is finally here.

The calculations have been made, and the atmosphere is ripe for the event. The sky is filled with clouds, and the wind is swirling, indicating that the deluge is about to begin. The people of the United States are ready, and they are eagerly waiting for the moment when the deluge will start.

But what will happen once the deluge begins? Will the United States be able to recover from the flood? Will the people be able to make it through? These are all questions that are being asked today.

However, there is reason to believe that the United States will be able to weather the storm. The people have been preparing for this moment for so long, and they are ready.

So, dear lady kids, don’t freak out. The ruling will help you through this challenging time. You will be able to make it through, and you will emerge stronger and more resilient.

More sex than can I stand; I'm quoting

I have dealt with more sex than I can handle for one lifetime. I am tired and I want to end all this.

I have tried to understand the reasons for this sexual energy, but the only answer I can come up with is that sex is a necessary evil. Sex is a way for people to release their energy and to connect with each other.

But the rest of the world is against me, and my sense of morality is finally ready to be flung out of my control.

So, dear lady kids, don’t freak out. The ruling will help you through this challenging time. You will be able to make it through, and you will emerge stronger and more resilient.

More sex than can I stand; I’m quoting
Citizen's obsession with sports unhealthy

The qualities of dedication and passion are admirable in a person's attitude towards their work, hobbies, or family. However, when centered on a personal life, including all other activities, things could go wrong. Passion for sports is no exception, but it can be healthy.

It is important for a person to involve themselves in various forms of exercise in order to live a healthy life. Where one sport becomes an obsession, be it work, alcohol, money, or sport, it becomes counterproductive. Recently, new interest has gained our culture in the past 30 years to recognize the value of fitness and physical health. Some have surpassed the healthy personal daily awareness of nutrition and athletic participation in a healthy, fun, and balanced lifestyle.

There exists today an overwhelming pressure to not only participate in athletics, but to excel at it. Some people have the potential to become normal humans that can become top athletes of the world. It seems as though the rest of us are trying to catch up with those lucky few.

I say luck because it is only human that we cannot express our athletic abilities in a way that allows dedication to a sport, and has the inclination to do so. On the other hand, I believe, these lucky few1 achieve the attitude that "nurture can do it, if the environment is right."

This indicates that those of us who are not athletic are merely lazy or dispassionate; we're not trying hard enough. I have nothing against sport; I played seven seasons of high school sports, and I have attended sports, managing, and refereeing that I do believe that consistent dedication and passion could make the most determined, persistent, or reader.

Moreover, I want to acknowledge that those who are not athletic, athletes in management, and I believe, this attitude that "nurture can do it, if the environment is right." This, in the excerpt from his new book, 'It's Not About The Pipe,' Armstrong said, "I want to own the last five holes of our wife and my daughter, my son's..." applied. A slow death is not for me, don't do anything else, not even healthy. I do everything at a fast cadence: eat fast, sleep fast. It makes me crazy when my wife, my son, and my kids break all of the yellow caution lights, which I always impose, especially in the passenger seat. Come on, don't be a slut, I tell them.

Where did this guy get the idea that he's better than the rest of the world? A "trial wife and 10 children"? Here comes Armstrong standings to be surprised by a man who loves his wife (300).

And the recurring system of telling his wife a "trial" as an excuse to me that no matter how many challenges he's been to overcome, nothing in his life has made him a better person. He respects no one and no one.

There are any number of examples of the classical view our society has taken sport instead of taking interest in the skill of the athlete, our media, the Olympic games, and our country that this inordinate pride in the Olympic Games for which country is the most valuable because the economic status, population, and culture of different countries greatly affect the different sport events and what is the most valuable?

The next year of the Olympic games for which country is the most valuable? Perhaps the view of the superiority of athletes in hold-up, as the United States and the athletes like Lance Armstrong. Perhaps it is still for his entire society.

Eve 6 future looks good

By Andy Townshend

One of the biggest challenges for new bands is to catch on or to successfully debut album. Eve 6 has met these challenges with aplomb. Their first album "Amphetamines" was a major hit, and their second album "Nightmare" has also been successful. The band's success is due to their ability to appeal to a variety of tastes and to maintain a strong visual image. This has helped them to stand out from other bands in the music industry.

The band's success has also been aided by the support of their record label and management. They have been given the opportunity to perform at numerous venues and to work with some of the biggest names in the music industry. This has helped them to establish a strong fan base and to gain exposure for their music.

Eve 6's future looks bright. They have the potential to become a major force in the music industry, and they are sure to continue to succeed in the years to come.
Vandals shut out Nevada Wolf Pack

The University of Idaho women's soccer team is hitting its stride. The middle of a three-game stretch at home, the Vandals have faced two strong teams improving their record to 5-4. The women's soccer team defeated the University of Nevada 5-0 Friday at Guy Wiles Field, improving the team in goals for the past five games, with an assist from Jamie Lewis. Following the game, head coach Davey bothy thanked the players for their efforts.

It took three minutes out of the game for the Vandals to lead, with a goal from Jodi Howard at the 3:30 mark. Howard scored on a pass from Jamie Lewis. Following the goal, the Vandals continued their offensive efforts, with white, while the Wolf Pack offense was stopped by the Vandals defense.

The second half played out much the same. Both teams scored a goal in the first 30 minutes, but the Vandals scored again, leading by a 5-0 margin. The Vandals continued their offensive efforts, with neither team scoring another goal.

The Vandals continue to have four straight games, including Friday's shutout against University of Nevada.

BIG WEST CONFERENCE OFFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK

The game started strong with the Vandals out in front, 28-17, and 30-21. The Lady Vandals dominated the first set, winning 25-13, and led the way to a second set victory, 25-17. The Bulldogs came back in the third set, but the Vandals were able to pull away, winning 25-12.

ARNAU DUND / ARGONAUT

It takes respect to be a good Vandal

B eing a Vandal is something that I have always been proud of, until recently. Standing in the middle of the stands at football games, I would always want to dress to blend in with the rest of the Vandals. I would wear a black shirt, black pants, and black shoes. I would then stand among the crowd and cheer on the Vandals as they played. However, I found myself standing out among the crowd.

As Arizona State started the football season, I found myself standing out among the crowd and cheering on the Vandals. I felt like I was the only one in the stadium cheering on the Vandals. However, I soon realized that I was not the only one.

The Vandals are a team that has been struggling in recent years. They have had some good seasons, but overall, they have not been able to come together as a team. This season, the Vandals are looking to turn things around and start playing better.

It is not easy to be a Vandal. You have to have respect for the team and the tradition. You have to work hard and be willing to put in the time and effort. It takes respect to be a good Vandal.
Intracoastal in this run was freshman Anna-Marie Illmensee who tallied four consecutive kills in the third set. Household Kies was in the same in five game limitations with a .600 hitting percentage and the 15 kills in four sets. Vandals blocking was also strong with a .728 per cent blocking to 0.106.

To top it off, the Vandals killed the Huskies in the third set, 25-9, to make it 25-18, 25-11 for the sweep.
