Presidential race closest in 40 years

BY DIANE Bauer

Both Texas Gov. George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore are spending across the country, stopping in key states before Monday's election.

The Nov. 6 Gallup tracking poll rated Bush at 49 percent, with Gore at 48 percent, a margin of 1 percent. The last time such a margin occurred was 40 years ago, in 1960.

The news is that most polls taken recently have been closer than a margin of error, giving little reason for a clear idea.

Throughout the weekend, the polls bounced up and down. The Gallup poll showed that Bush had gained since its last survey, but Gore's percentage remained unchanged.

The issue in the campaign remains the same. Bush has been leading throughout the race, but Gore has been gaining ground.

In addition to the Gallup tracking polls, the most recent is a mid-week poll by ABC News/Washington Post, which showed Bush trailing by 4 percentage points. A new poll by Newsweek/Washington Post showed Bush in the lead by 3 points.

The national vote in the first two weeks of November is now being watched closely. The polls show a close race between the two candidates, with Bush leading by a margin of 1 percent.

The estimated electoral vote as of today showed Bush at 268 votes with the support of 50 states, while Gore has 265 votes with 22 states. The remaining 25 states with 12 votes are undecided. The winning candidate needs 270 votes to win.

The unemployment rate in Idaho is now at 5.2 percent, down from a high of 6.7 percent earlier this year.

Tutxinnepu Pow-Wow promotes community, understanding

by Lindsay Redfeer

ARGONAUT STAFF REPORT

The Tutxinnepu Pow-Wow finished off a four-day Native American conference Saturday at UI, bringing a taste of the culture's dance competitions and demonstrations in the Kibbie Dome.

Tribe members of all ages and regions came to the pow-wow to dance, eat and share their culture with UI and the Moscow community.

The event began with a grand entrance dance, in which every dancer present danced out onto the floor in an assortment of styles and costumes. The song they danced to was used by one of the tribe's ancestors.

The floats were given from all of which sang in their traditional styles.

Dancers ranged from brothers who were too young to walk and were carried by their parents to those older than the UI president. The dancers included costumes, items with feathers on the floor. There were moved in both that swinging in waves of silver. Male dancers were heavy bells on their ankles and women would be advertised in their style, giving the illusion of wind dancing was done in a big circle moving playshop. The dancer were simple, regular movements of the feet, with some being incorporated to more elaborate dances of the central tribes and all of the dances are often based on a regional history.

"We've had pow-wows before, but this year I think it's particularly momentous because of the conference," said Kyle McFadden, UI student professor. "It's added to the thrill of the drum with the procedure of both of the different styles and their culture. Most of the women who were in the same group, they've been to things around them.

Rose Anne Abraham, the base female dancer, chose to express some of the diversity that took place in the dance floor. "What you see here is cultural identification. You see the platoons dance versus the Danes of the Shoshone dance versus the Jicarilla, or a family symbol," she said.

There are real cultural dances within that category where each individual represents something different. There's a main theme in the way our culture is combined. "The Anishinaabe style is looking back at the tribe's history and the people's lives."

The dance was also the dancing styles represented the different regions and tribes.

"There was an old man who had a vision," Abraham said, "and in his vision he saw all of the creator's children of all races dancing around a great fire. I think this is a part of that, our unity and we all together having a good time.

After the first dance, an invitational was given and the pow-wow was introduced. The Eagle Staff, a large wooden staff, was entered in another round.

Other dances were performed by the drum group and lead dancer for the first dance and then given to a crew member to keep it safe.

The Eagle Staff, the pow-wow emcee explained, is a Native American tool for freedom and represents the land. The eagle was also present and represented lead dancer every time a group dance took place.

Paul Sandefur, special assistant to the UI president for diversity, introduced the dance to the floor to a few words, with which went in Spanish. He was then invited to dance with the lead dancer and then introduced the second dance.

"We're a society with a lot of diversity, and we do not think of it as a bad thing. It will be reported in the newspapers. The dance was advertised to be more inclusive of all of the groups and we should come together," he concluded.

"Memorandum of Understanding that was signed in front by a number of Native American groups and UI President Hoover was present to announce the fact. The UI English Professor Kerry Miller with the strength of the event was made by the students who took place during the week.

"We've had pow-wows before, but this year I think it's particularly momentous because of the conference," he concluded.

Gary Schroeder for Idaho Senate

The most important issues to Idahoans are Education, the Economy and the Environment.

I have always said that education is my top priority.
I promised the voters that I would work for good jobs, a strong economy and a clean environment.
I have delivered on my promises and I am proud of my record in the Idaho Senate.

Gary Schroeder’s Record:

Education: As Chairman of the Senate Education Committee, I’ve fought for our public schools and the University of Idaho. I have been endorsed by the Idaho Education Association.
Economy: I am a small business owner and I understand the importance of business for a strong economy. I have a strong pro-business voting record. The Food Producers of Idaho recently heralded my excellent voting record on agricultural issues.
Environment: I also believe that resource utilization and a healthy environment are not mutually exclusive. My voting record on environmental issues is #1 in the majority party during my eight years in the Idaho Senate.

ASUI to vote on expensive bill

A bill before ASUI proposes spending over $45,000 from the Reserve Fund

By ANNETTE HENHE

The ASUI Senate will vote Wednesday evening on whether to spend over $45,000 from the ASUI General Reserve Fund.

The money would fund four bars at the student体育馆 and provide food for at least 400 people living in the dorms at one time.

The bill SPDKANE, 52, presented at Wednesday’s meeting, said that the money would be used to support student life and to improve the student experience.

The committee on which it was introduced said that 75% of students living in the dorms have purchased ISU Night Ticket passes.

The Senate will vote on the bill on Wednesday at 5 p.m.

The bill will be posted to the Argonaut website for anyone interested.

The budget for the ASUI Reserve Fund is $155,000.

At its meeting on Wednesday, the ASUI Senate discussed the budget for the next year.

The budget is expected to be released next week.

The Senate also approved a $500 budget for the ASUI Student Senate.

Quarters connects UI with community

BY NICK REYNOLDS

Jars with coffee labels are in place around town as part of the first annual ASUI anti-lupus therapy project, called Quarters for Shires for Kids for Christmas.

The project is a push by the University of Idaho Relations Board to improve connections between the City of Moscow and the University of Idaho student body, as well as raise money to pay for shoes for local children through Whitman's Community Relations Board chairperson. According to Whitman, jars were placed in local business about two weeks ago in hopes that members of the Moscow community would pass them along to other businesses. And there is still a jar in the top three living community members, Whitman said.

Members of the Community Relations Board distributed the jars to the local businesses, presenting the jar and the quarterback, who came up with the Quarters for Shires for Kids for Christmas idea, explaining the purpose of the project.

Whitman said the project had been well supported by the local businesses.

One local business, however, has been more than happy to place a jar in their store, not only because of compassion, but because it is still not clear whether restrictions have suggested applying to the regulation rules for donations, Whitman said.

Businesses have also been integral in the project that has been on the ground, she said.

The United Savings Corporation donated the jars for millions of the area and First Security Bank agreed to assist in the change process as needed.

The jars will be taken from all the business and brought to Whitman for the first of December Whitman said.

She said the money will then be provided as the basic sizes of children's shoes to be given to the Department of Human Services for distribution with their Christmas gifts just before the holiday.

Whitman said she hopes the effort will encourage others to give more than money to show their love for many children throughout the Palouse, in addition to getting adults, and members of the community interested in giving.

Leftists struggle with Nader, Gore choice

By Kim Murphy

SEATTLE—John Foss, a commercial fisherman who was his town’s landlord, is running for president with Green party candidates from the United States and abroad.

Foss is a member of the United Steelworkers of America and has been working for two years on the issue of environmental policy.

He said he decided to run as an independent in order to get his message across.

“We need a third party, and we need to support independent candidates,” Foss said.

Foss, who is running on his own, is one of several candidates from the United States who will be attending the Green Party’s national convention this weekend in Seattle.

The convention is being held in conjunction with the third annual National Green Party convention.

The Green Party, which was founded in 1991, is a political party that advocates for environmental, social, and economic justice.

The party has endorsed several candidates for office, including presidential candidate Ralph Nader.

Nader, a former consumer advocate, has been a prominent member of the Green Party since the 1970s.

Nader has run for president three times, most recently in 2000, when he received 4.5 million votes.

The Green Party’s platform is based on the principles of sustainable development, social justice, and non-violent action.

The party’s candidates often run as Third Party candidates, and many of them are running for office in local and state elections.

The Green Party’s recent victories include the election of several candidates in state and local races.

The party’s candidates have also made significant gains in local elections in recent years.

The Green Party is one of the most diverse and inclusive political parties in the United States.

The party’s members come from a wide range of backgrounds and perspectives, and it has a strong commitment to social and environmental justice.

The Green Party is committed to fighting for a better world, where everyone has access to the resources they need to live a healthy and fulfilling life.

The party’s candidates are working hard to build a better world, and they are making progress every day.

The Green Party is one of the most exciting and inspiring political movements in the United States.

The party is dedicated to building a better world, and it is making progress every day.

A man of character, integrity: Al Gore for president

Unbelievably, a battle of the wits, an intellect, an excellent politician, a leader of the future. The run for the office of president has been full of questions and few answers about who will make the best president for the next 4 years. After all, we could not have a president of the United States qualify as a "stranger" in politics. As vice president, Gore has seen much and knows much. He will experience our president will need to lead a united nation into the new millennium. He has learned from mistakes. Gore possesses the background knowledge on, not only foreign policy, but also those situations in the past 8 years. He has not been afraid to speak his mind, as President Clinton was.

While Clinton dropped in this country through personal matters, conducted deeply, Gore has his character. Throughout the debates, it was Gore who fixed things. Bush that the most ringing he put an end.

The most important time of a woman's life is when she is pregnant. The time before a child is born, the birth, and the first months after a child is born is the most vulnerable time for a newborn baby.

According to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the incidence of abortions is decreasing, from approximately 1.1 million in 1990 to 1.1 million in 2000. This is a significant decrease in the number of abortions performed. The decrease in abortion rates since 1973 has been attributed to increasing availability of family planning services and improved contraceptive methods. The availability of birth control options has increased, and women have more choices about their reproductive health.

U2 leaves nothing behind in newly released album

By Eric Pog

"It's hard to deny U2 is one of the biggest names in the rock business. With their 20th studio album, All That You Can't Leave Behind, just released, they've done something most good things come to age.

U2 has been playing the 23 years, and have successfully released popular albums throughout the band's history. In fact, they have sold over 90 million records in the U.S. alone, which is an astronomical claim. However, a more refined collection of tracks is based around this album.

The first single off of this album entitled "Beautiful Day" was a massive hit, topping the world's charts and being downloaded more times than any other song on the Internet. The song begins with a mournful saxophone video, which is followed by a song about the band's upcoming tour. The band's fans are excited and waiting for the release of the new album.

The fact that U2 can keep their music popular and up with the times in this ever-changing music market is a testament to their talent and dedication. If you're a fan of U2, you shouldn't miss this opportunity to see them live in concert. If you're not already a fan, U2's new album is definitely worth checking out.

All That You Can't Leave Behind is just the beginning of what's to come from U2. If you haven't seen them in concert before, now's the time. If you have, you're definitely going to want to see them again to experience their new material. It's clear that they're still going strong, and it's exciting to see what they have in store for us in the future."
Pow-wow expresses Native American family values

Native Americans from the Pacific Northwest descend to Kibbie Dome

"Tutxinmepu" is what Moscow was known as to the Couer d'Alene Native Americans. From this Native tongue comes the name of our new favorite "Tutxinmepu" is what the Nez Perce called the Pinecone region. Native Americans flourished in "Tutxinmepu" and "Peachtree" much longer than Moscow has existed.

Saturday, at the Tutxinmepu Pow-Wow, Native Americans exhibited their passion, which has empowered their longevity. Generations from many proud cultures throughout the Pacific Northwest and beyond descended on the ASU Kibbie Dome Saturday night to celebrate their family, friends and homelands. Any visitor to the pow-wow saw that the Native American people place high-value on family. Saturday's pow-wow children swirled between legs, while adults decked in colorful costumes and elders were honored for their wisdom. Master of Ceremonies Otto Helfroin, in a friendly way, joked with many of the dancers as if they were his own. Helfroin, a Nez Perce elder, author and Nez Perce speaker, brought all the dancers to a respectful encore in order to bow and thank all the participants.

Afterwards, a long line-up in a Native American regi-mented in every seat. It was the first time they heard a language indigenous to the land which they live.

The host dancers were the Little Owl Cree from Island Lake, Saskatchewan. They inspired the Healing, Friendship, and Medicine dances.

Nez Perce were honored as a Pow-Wow dance. A Pow-Wow dance is not a beat that had all the power to invoke the party-goers. People were giv- ing their best for the other people of the pow-wow. The Little Owl Cree are world champion hand-drummers.

The beautiful women participating in the pow-wow and proudly adorned them. The women and men danced, sang, and had fun with the music. The people were all happy and proud to celebrate the traditions.

Pow WOW is an American Indian dance that involves singing and drumming. The pow-wow is a traditional Native American dance held by different tribes and nations.

100% of the proceeds from the Tutxinmepu Pow-Wow will be donated to the Nez Perce students.

Dancers competed at the pow-wow Saturday.

Action-packed trio revamps old TV series

by Keith Roth

"Another movie from an old TV show" is one of the Charlie's Angels characters recognized just before jumping out the airplane.
Charlie's Angels is a rather light-hearted action movie. It is meant to be fun and the plot is rather simple. While there is a lot of action anyway, filled with crafty baddies and a dose of broken skin, it succeeds in what it wants to do.

The plot of the movie is really simple. "Another movie from an old TV show" is the case, ultimately an attempt to kill Charlie, whose face is never shown in the movie.

The three girls with same identifications - Natalie, Alex and Dylan - save the day, as they are "Another movie from an old TV show". Without firing a single shot, they save Charlie from a car explosion, jump out of a plane, all while nogging along a very movie-like tendency of scoring low-blood strokes outcomes as they fight for their lives, but they manage to deepen on their characters beyond their generic roles as a team of internal fighting machines.

They appear like real human beings. To prepare for the movie, the three actresses, Cameron Diaz (Natalie Portman), Drew Barrymore (Alex), and Lucy Liu (Dylan), trained hard to be able to do the martial arts sequences.

They bonded, tried and competed with each other in a once-a-day, five-days-a-week training sessions. As a result, they did excel, all of them own stunts in the movie. Therefore, when their bladder, their younger brother of the action choreographer for "The Matrix", revamps the action sequences in Charlie's Angels portrays the highly noticeable.

The action sequences in Charlie's Angels portrays the highly noticeable.

If you are really a movie buff, you might wish on the fact that the house Barmm, which briefly for more clothes is the same one she worked in for her first movie, "E.T."

McG, the director of Charlie's Angels, has formerly made a movie "Ghostface" which is a continuation of "Waking the Dead", for which he received the guy music video of the year award. His accomplishment is evident with highly fluid stunts and camera angles.

BY KELLY DAVIES

The University of Idaho women’s soccer squad continued its success with a 2-1 victory over Gonzaga University. The win moves the Vandals to 6-1-1 overall and 2-0-1 in conference play, with junior Megan Cummings, who is leading the conference in assists, making her own two hands. Cummings scored a direct kick goal, winning the game 2-1 and following up the first half. Jenny Kiel, who scored the lone goal, led the team in goals.

The Vandals have scored 2 goals so far. The victory over the Vandals was a no-brainer, and the team is now at 11-4-1 overall and 7-1 in conference play.

After last week’s win in Cal, the Vandals are now 1-1 in conference play. With the win last week, the Vandals were able to remain in the top 4 of the Big West conference. This week, however, the Vandals were unable to keep up and fell to San Diego and San Jose State.

In the game against San Diego, the Vandals were able to keep up for a few sets, but eventually fell in three sets. The final score was 25-17, 25-19, 25-23.

In the game against San Jose State, the Vandals put up a fight, but were unable to come out on top. The final score was 25-15, 25-19, 25-17.

The Vandals are now 11-2-2 overall and 3-2 in conference play.

Idaho steals another win on the road at North Texas

by Gary J Smith

Vandals football head coach Larry Smith said this week that he was happy with the team’s performance against the Mean Green. The Vandals had a successful offensive performance, averaging 360 yards per game, and held the Mean Green to just 170 yards.

Smith said he was pleased with the team’s performance on both sides of the ball. The defense held the Mean Green to just 9 points, while the offense put up 28 points.

In the game against the Mean Green, the Vandals were able to dominate from the first possession, and never gave the Mean Green a chance to catch up. The final score was 38-10.

Managing to stay consistent with season standouts Idaho allowed five losses to the Vandals in 6-2 conference play.

At half, Idaho was up 10-9 with 265 total yards, while the Mean Green were held to 66 offensive yards. This victory was crucial for the Vandals as they look to keep up their winning streak.

Sporting in cyberspace

Webcasters make a great program on the Internet, says University of Idaho student. The Vandals have been working for over two years on their Internet broadcasting initiatives, and the result is impressive.

The team has a great website with information about their games and events. The website can be accessed through the University of Idaho’s official website or directly through the Vandals’ website. The team’s website is well-designed and easy to navigate.

The Vandals have a strong fan base, and their website reflects that. The fans are able to purchase tickets online, view game schedules, and access information about the team’s upcoming games.

The Vandals are also active on social media, with accounts on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram. They use these platforms to promote their games and events, and to engage with their fans.

The team has a dedicated website, Idahofootball.com, which is a great resource for fans. The website includes information about the team’s history, coaching staff, and players. The website also features highlights from past games, and live streaming of upcoming games.

The Vandals’ website is a great resource for fans, and a testament to the team’s online presence. The team is working hard to create a strong online presence, and their efforts are paying off.
