The march on Moscow

That's the way it was in days gone by, when the ancient football rivalry between Washington State University and the University of Idaho included this time-honored custom.

As an aftermath to each game, the students from the losing school walked to the winning campus for appropriate ceremonies.

And it was exactly 20 years ago—1954—that the event was featured in Life magazine when Idaho celebrated its first victory over the Cougars since 1925. This photo, courtesy of Life, shows 1,000 WSU (then WSC) students striding towards Moscow on the highway east of Pullman.

Since then, however, the annual walk following the battle of the Palouse has fallen out of practice. Part of the reason, of course, has been Idaho's football misfortunes—the Vandals last beat the Cougars in 1965.

Despite some predictions that this might be the year for Idaho to reverse that trend, ASUI President Dirk Kemphorne apparently wasn't optimistic enough to issue a challenge to revive the tradition.

Nonetheless, this year's Idaho-WSU football game is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday. And the sentiments of most U of I students are on the side of the Vandals—even if a nine-mile hike isn't at stake. Details on the game are on page 8.

Hiiiiyyaaaahhh, karate

For the fans of television's "Kung Fu," northern Idaho's first annual karate championship is scheduled for tomorrow on the U of I campus. Argonaut special correspondent Marshall Hall dons his black belt to bring us a report on the martial arts in today's centerspread.

Amnesty: take your pick

Did you think that there were just two sides to the question of amnesty for draft resisters and deserters? It turns out that there are three and Argonaut columnists Bruce Spotteson, John Hecht and Dean Wullenwaber (from left to right) present their opinions on page 5.

Miss the election?

Get your absentee ballot now

It's not too early to apply for absentee ballots, according to the county clerk's office. Requests for absentee ballots should be mailed to the county clerks' offices throughout the state four to six weeks prior to the election.

The deadline for absentee ballot applications is 5 p.m., Nov. 4, but clerks urge voters to mail their requests for absentee ballots now.

The absentee ballot is available for voters who wish to vote in their home localities but will not be in the area on election day. This procedure makes it possible for students to register their feelings about local issues and candidates while away at school. It is advisable to apply for an absentee ballot even if "home" is within driving distance from Moscow. A hectic schedule, or a spontaneous get together could make voting on Tuesday difficult for some Moscow voters who may be out of town or unable to get the polls on that day should arrange for an absentee ballot by picking one up at room 101 at the courthouse by requesting a ballot by mail from the county clerk.

Standard procedure for voting absentee requires the registered voter to request an absentee ballot from the county clerk of the county he or she is registered in. This can be done by filling out the form provided in this issue of the ARGONAUT and mailing it to: County Clerk, County, Idaho.

The application must be signed by the voter who will be using the absentee ballot. The signature on the form will be compared with the signature on his or her original registration form for verification.

The application for an absentee ballot asks for the precinct of each applicant. If the applicant is unsure of his or her precinct number a question mark may be put in the blank and the clerk will add this information by referring to the home address listed on the application. A lack of information about precinct number should not prevent the application from being mailed.

Activity cards available for non-student spouses

A non-enrolled spouse can obtain a student-spouse activity card for $15, said Harry E. Todd, Assistant Manager of the Student Union. This card entitles the holder to attend all student activities and athletic events only at student ticket rates which includes football and basketball games, concerts, plays, swimming and golf. However, limitations cause the card to be different. The card denotes spouse (husband or wife) use of the library, the information and classroom instruction. The identification number on the special holder card will be the social security number rather than a registration number.

A red background on the photo signifies those people who are in free or at a student discount.

Part-time students holding identification (ID) cards with a blue background who wish to take advantage of student events and activities also may purchase this card.

Committee applications available

A number of positions are currently available on several U of I student committees. Vacancies need to be filled on the programs, art, coffee house, films society, SUB films, graphic arts, issue and forums, people to people, public relations, and parents weekend committees.

Interested students may pick up applications at the programs office in the SUB or at the SUB information desk.

Evaluation due for student services

An evaluation of the University Student Services program and the Office of Student Advisory Services was initiated at Tuesdays meeting of the University Faculty Council.

An eight member student-faculty committee will be appointed to look into the program. According to Bert Cross, journalism, department, the committee is being appointed in response to a “statement of assumptions” issued last spring by student services. These assumptions, Cross said “raise some questions” with regard to U of I, student services.

Vice-President for Student and Administrative Services Richardson told the council that his office would welcome such an evaluation, and that “it must be performed now.” Present student and administrative services, Richardson said, are working well but there is little thought about where they should go from their present point.

The committee which will conduct the evaluation will be made up of five faculty members and three students, and will be named by the council at a later date. Council member Kathy Wicher said such an inquiry would be effective “only if it were a three way operation, encompassing faculty members students and student advisory service personnel.

The evaluation will be charged with defining who is responsible for academic advising. Because of an overload of students, Cross said, “there is some pretty bad academic advising going on here.”

Richardson called for wide faculty input in the evaluation, without which, he said, it would be a “sterile and meaningless exercise.” He added, however, that with a wide range of faculty contact, the evaluation could provide “valuable input.”

In other business the council referred to the committee a proposal to let students declare “academic bankruptcy” for one undergraduate semester and drop all classes taken that semester from their permanent transcript.

The council also delayed action on a report on audio visual activities until next week. The report calls for creation of a learning resource center, under the dean of instructive services, and for centralized records of audio visual materials.

Kemthorone to pay visit to living groups

ASUI President Dirk Kemthorone announced at the senate meeting September 16 his intention to begin a personalized effort to visit each living group during the next three weeks of the new school year.

In announcing his program of living group visitation, Kemthorone told the Senators, “We made one visit to the living groups last February in an effort to become elected. Now it is our duty to return to the students.”

The reasons sighted by Kemthorone for his visitation program were to orient new students into workings of student government, to encourage greater participation in student government of members of the student body, to familiarize new students and returning students with the problems facing Idaho students and to answer questions regarding ASUI programs and activities.

He also encouraged the senators to meet with their living groups according to the living group assignments initiated at the beginning of the present senate term.

Sign those petitions

We need an election to fill the vacancy on the ASUI Senate. ASUI Senate.

Students deserve to have their voices heard in this selection. In addition, it will test the advantages of fall election.

Roughly 700 signatures must be gathered by Tuesday in order to get an election.

Petitions are also being circulated to restore the University of Idaho dairy processing center.

Both petitions are worthwhile, and should be supported.

The architect's plan looked so great in print blue,

What if they gave a debate?

It's milktoast so far, the idea of a Frank Church - Bob Smith debate. Not that it's a bad idea. It isn't. But the suggested one-hour television premiere now being discussed would prove even less than the Kennedy-McCarthy debate of 1968. And calling that discussion a debate is invoking the use of nonsequitur.

The idea has great potential, at least in theory. For no forum allows more give and take, more actual conflict of ideas than a rough and tumble debate. The problem is that nothing of that nature is being suggested.

What it looks like we're going to do (if indeed we do get anything at all) is a one hour, sterile, studio presentation. Candidate one will rise, face the cameras and read his lines. Then number two will try. Both will smile, shake hands, and go home to bed.

No questions will be allowed, no real clash of ideas will have taken place. We and they will be no wiser as to what this election is all about.

I now admit the mistake I made at the thought of politicians discussing issues in depth. But it does happen. And a real debate between Bob Smith and Frank Church could be a case in point.

Consider for a moment not the one hour prime-time special now being promoted, but half a dozen to a dozen verbal battles in front of live audiences with, as Ponce participation in the form of question and answer periods.

There ought to be a debate in Pocatello over OSHA or labor perhaps one in the Canyon County area or Federal policies or ecology, another might be stated in Boise relating to business and monetary policies.

Along with this, consider the questions those two should be asking each other - face to face. As for a for in stance, I would be interested in having Bob Smith explain if his philosophy of getting the government off the back of business extends to Idaho's system of state-owned liquor stores.

This, then, is the question of what the John Birch Society really, and why is it giving Mr. Smith those campaign contributions?

As for Senator Frank, I'm mighty curious about what he is doing with his ever-swellling war chest. If I remember correctly he had a few comments on the impropriety of Jim McClure's enormous campaign expenditures of 1972.

The list of questions, the number of issues that could and should be discussed, goes on and on. Ranging from the serious to the humorous, they cover matters about which people have a right to be informed. What is more these matters should be aired in public, not in the controlled atmosphere of a television studio. We should have a right to expect that in Idaho's union halls, in the Grange meeting rooms, the candidates could meet with the people to discuss the serious business of government.

Yes, that's what could be done, and that's what we should expect. Idaho in 1974 should be the scene of a real debate or two. But so far they're trying to get by with feeding us milktoast.

KUOI, KUOI, Where are you?

To the editor:
I'm writing this letter with hope that it will stimulate others to write against the action taken by Jones.

From what I extracted from Jones' letter to the Argonaut and from my own listening experience, it is sad that a station manager of a student FM station would have such a limited vocabulary for modern music. By modern music I mean hard rock, soul, country and rock, country rock, folk, blues, jazz, bluegrass, and any type of variation or experimentation of any of these fields.

When you limit a radio station to just the top 40 or whatever number it may consist of, your music becomes stagnant. I realize that within the Top 40 there does exist some variety, but the degree of that variety does not exist enough so that all varieties of music on a regular four hour listening program are heard equally.

So if all daily programs are basically the same type of music, it becomes repetitious like most AM stations.

Music seems to be a monopoly, while we were an announcer, showing a degree of variety which is genuine to FM stations. But KUOI seems to be lost in its top 40, whereas the spirit of much of the fresh experimental and obscure music in their syntheses may be compared to the churning of fresh, golden butter, the repetitious monopoly of pop 40 comes across the radio as the stale buttermilk left over.

And Olavarria To the editor:
If the only beef that Matt Shelley has with Mike Jones is Jones' taste in music, then Matt Shelley is making a mistake in this jockey. While I have not heard Jones program (I do not own an FM receiver, I am in complete agreement with his taste in music as he described it in the Sept. 13, Argonaut.

When I do purchase an FM receiver, I will be disappointed to find that KUOI programs contain the same content contributions.

To the editor:
This is a letter in response to Michael Jones' letter "KUOI listeners no advertisement". I would like to say that I appreciate the type of music that Jones plays. Though this is my first letter here I have turned off at least 50 per cent of the time when I turn my radio on to KUOI and the only reason I stay tuned in is the Top 40 variety that can be heard. Perhaps AM rock station in the vicinity. I would really like to hear music that has some artistry and perhaps behind the lines.

Faylor illogical

To the editor:
I would like to question the full logic of Richard Faylor's letter of Sept. 17. I do not dispute the fact that the actions of President Ford are outrageous and in Faylor's words, infuriating. But that is not why I am writing this letter.

In his letter Faylor states, "in essence Nixon was the war, the lies, and the tragedy of Vietnam." I would remind Faylor and everyone else that it was the Johnson administration that escalated the war in Southeast Asia and it was the Nixon administration, that de-escalated the war and withdrew our troops from Vietnam. Nixon may have done this because of pressure from here at home but the fact remains that he did do it.

Also stated was "the death and devastation Nixon visited on Vietnam and Cambodia." I would remind Faylor of "the death and devastation," not to mention the terrorism that North Vietnam visited on Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Three view amnesty

Forgiveness? Forteiture? Forgetfulness?

No conditions wanted

There is, or should be, only one sane opinion on amnesty.
- The kind of dissenion this country went through—indeed that some of us literally grew up with—the issue should have been solved long ago. (Of course, amnesty was hardly likely in the Nixon administration. After all, VFW Nixon had to turn to support much of the time, and one doesn’t bite the hand that feeds him.)

And in light of the way we pillaged North Vietnam with various anti-personnel weapons (a euphemism for some pretty inhumane devices) and bombs, how can anyone oppose total amnesty and call him or herself a rational human being?

Amnesty for a war such as Vietnam is on a different level than a war in which the U.S. is endangered. The Vietnam war was space-age genocidal technology at its finest, or certainly its most brutal.

In how many past wars has the United States government been in collusion with a foreign government that was one of the most singularly corrupt in the history of the world? Oh, our age-group tried, mind you, but we just couldn’t force ourselves to believe that we, defending a perfectly innocent, absolutely delightful regime from hordes of oprion-minded heathens who were anxious to run amuck over our Gulf, wrecked their bodies—for no other than to rape, pillage and enslave them under the dreaded Communist system.

I didn’t know then, and I don’t know now. But I’ve learned enough. And so has the rest of the country. Who knows what else.

For the rest of the world, it’s too much to ask—and rightfully so. The idea of going to war simply because a mindless, far-removed military career-buffoon says you must is ridiculous. On such principles was Nazi Germany assembled.

(All of which reminds me of a William Westmoreland story I read a few years ago in which he told of how beautiful it was to march into battle with the sounds of gunfire permeating the air. Westmoreland worried about Vietnam, however; you can bet your bullets he was miles—maybe even light-years—away from any action.)

In many ways, those that deserted the military or avoided the draft are potentially some of our best citizens. They’re not about to hasten to disprove their somewhat deep feelings, however, and the admission of guilt that a new amnesty program seems to want to squeeze out of them might not work all that well. I don’t want them to say that they were wrong, because they weren’t. It took as many or more guts to kiss it all goodbye as it did to be conscripted. The FBI didn’t haunt draftees or enlistees. It was a crooked war, and there are enough good people in this country to live with the least amount of integrity at all in a uniform in that theater.

I say it’s time we don’t worry about the VFW and ex-Members who think war is one of the greatest things going. Making the returnees admit any kind of guilt is a crime, a war crime, and it’s a grossly upsetting those whose brains got scrambled from wars long since ended.

Bringing back—freely—those men who said no to immoral policies is the first step the U.S. can take towards removing a uniform it donned in World War II.

But the "conditional" nature of the amnesty program is a sad joke. In its present form, the program is not enough. Not nearly enough.

Veteran looks at plan

The ground rules for amnesty have now been promulgated. An amnesty home will have to work for it. Anything that offends both the churls in the V.F.W. and those members left can’t be admitted.

In our two-party system, compromise between two positions is the usual way to get things accomplished. But between two extremes has been considered the American way. But should such an important moral issue as amnesty be treated as a game of Russian roulette, subject to crossover? I don’t think so.

President Ford is sincerely working on bringing the country to a new (or at least) he has been subject to the quixotically distasteful compromise national politics of Washington D.C. and his mind still looks to attaining a goal within that system.

Unfortunately, this is not a program that is best served by adding to its list of acceptable candidates to those already two. It might just work out that you lose the sum and keep the divisor. The executive order will probably stand, so let us examine the methods for re-entry.

The basic outline is for those who resisted the system demands to swear an oath of fealty, then confirm the oath by working. This labor is being called an "alternative service labor." The premise is to make those who were unable to resist through acceptable channels, conscientious objector draft classification, to do the same type of work that the COs did.

Unemployment in Vietnam veterans is now running among those not in school (under the minimal G.I. Bill) at least 10 percent. Minorities are much higher. How many job calls are there for a point man, or a demobilized specialist?)

Who will obtain the jobs? Employment bureaus, public and private are swamped with applicants for non-existent jobs. Who will fund the jobs? Hospitals, rest homes, and facilities of that nature are the places where the resisters are supposed intended to work. But these are the very establishments that are presently most strapped for funding.

The maximum period for working will be 24 months. This time spent working alternative service can be reduced under "mitigating circumstances." Mitigating for what and it found nothing. Better is that there are three possible answers.

Probably the most important and unexplained feature is that of the January 31, 1975 time limit. Some resisters have been absent from the country for six, eight, even ten years. They have reason to be suspicious of our government. I think Ford is acting in good faith, and they probably hope so. But there is no way to determine how the clemency boards, from the national level on down, will treat the returning man until some time has passed. He will be a brave, considered mitigate? Even recruits are given room and board, plus money for the family, if there is one. What happens if a position is eliminated?

When a deserter returns and surrenders, he will be given an "undesirable discharge." After completing alternative service work, he will be given clemency discharge. If he doesn’t end up working, he keeps the undesirable. But the military, and thus the law, will not see him.

In many ways, those that deserted the military or avoided the draft are potentially some of our best citizens.

Justice or discretion

Now President Ford has granted amnesty to draft-evaders of the Vietnam war. The complicated question whether he ought to have done so is therefore academic, but constitutional non-ethereal.

For this instance, there is a passing issue in the life of our republic, but the deeper issue of justice by law is fundamental. Constitutional judgements have been handed down from Environmental and the collective conscience of the law-abiding populace ought to be satisfied that justice has been done. In this same vein, one recalls a week ago the proposition put forth by those who vehemently criticized Mr. Nixon’s pardon: no man or group of men ought to be above the law in our republic. This is exactly what the critics of amnesty are saying.

The proponents of amnesty, however, assert that draft-evaders, and upon deeply conscientious motive and I don’t think he would be at right to doubt that assertion. But see the complication emerge: only just a month ago I heard essentially the same "conscientious motive", assertion stated by Mr. Nixon.

Where is the consistency?

This is exactly the point. In our republic allowable offenders are supposed to be immune from amended laws, not by individual discretion; whence the blindfold on the Goddess of Justice.

Now, I don’t say that this system of law over discretion will deliver our republic into paradise. I agree with Thoureaux when he says, "The lawyer’s truth is not Truth, but consistency," and I have no fault to find in the absence of Divine intervention. It is the most equitable system yet devised.

This is the reason that, within the life of an ongoing republic, consistently upheld justice by law is the greatest mercy. To the extent that laws are not upheld, constitutional republics fall and die.

A further and more severe complication arises. Proponents of amnesty contend that the very "war" itself broke the laws of the land. Because the "war" was never constitutionally declared, it is argued, therefore draft-evaders ought to receive amnesty.

I am inclined to agree with this charge of the unconstitutionality of the war. Section 8 of the Constitution states that "The Congress shall have power to declare war."

Yes, yes. I know the 1964 Tonkin Gulf Resolution provided 636.7 with power to open armed conflict. But our vast efforts in Vietnam can hardly be classified as merely repelling armed attacks.

Because wars are to be determined by Congress, the presumption is that, when our country is heavily involved in an armed conflict without such a declaration, then Congress shall have power to declare war.

Does it follow through that draft-evaders ought to be granted amnesty because other laws of the land possibly have been infringed? Because of my initial reasoning, I say no.

Not sticking rigorously to the law will not immediately underwrite the foundations of the republic, but it is certainly a step in the wrong direction. To argue for any step when we have taken then it is OK to take another wrong step I, submit, fallacious.

Amnesty is not an isolated issue. See the trend: a war is fought undeclared by Congress; an ex-president, amid criminal allegations, is pardoned prior to judgment by those politicians who irrefutably broke the law are excused.

Those who criticize and who ascribed Mr. Ford might expect the real question: at what point in time do we shun rule by discretion and return to rule by law?

U of I to get kara

BY MARSHALL HALL

KAAARRRAAATTTEEEE! Northern Idaho's first annual Karate Championship will find it's way to the University of Idaho this Saturday, Sept. 21. Open to all styles of the martial arts, the eliminations begin at 11:00 a.m. with the finals scheduled for 7:00 p.m.

The tournament is sponsored by Master Chin Ho Lee, a sixth degree black belt, from Seattle, Washington.

"We expect most of the competition to come from the Northwest and California," said Bill Tew, director of the tournament and instructor of Moscow's School of Judo and Karate.

Tew said participation would range between 200 and 300 people, and approximately 75 or more of them would be black belts.

The tournament will include exhibitions of the martial arts by masters from the United States, Canada and the Orient. Most masters have usually been in martial arts for over 10 years, Tew said.

The martial arts competition will be governed by the Northwest Tournament rules. "Contact to the head is not allowed, but moderate to full contact is allowed to the body. It's up to the referee to decide if a contact is legal or not," Tew stated.

Officialing for the tournament will include the chief referee and four side judges.

After the chief referee signals the start of the match, it will be stopped when a point has been scored or the contestants leave the fighting area.

Referees will raise one of two flags, red or white, to indicate in their opinion who has scored a point. If the flags are crossed before the judges eyes, it means he was unable to see what took place. If the flags are crossed at the judges waist it indicates a clash, and no point will be awarded. Three officials must agree to award a point.

Actual competition in the tournament consists of two contests. The Kumite Contest (fighting), or the free sparring, is a contest between two persons. A point is scored by landing a controlled attack to one of the target areas i.e., face, torso, and back. The participants must, however, control their attacks.

Contact to the body is permitted but not encouraged. No contact to the face is allowed. A light touch will result in awarding the one touched one point. If, in the judge's opinion, the contact is severe or blood is drawn, the offender committed foul will be disqualified.

All matches will be two minute three points, whoever comes out the blackbelts will fight for two minutes, and the match will end at a decided total number of points.

The second contest is called (pattern), a systematically organized series of offense and defense techniques performed with limited opponents.

Judges consider techniques, and strength, as well as the stamina and awareness of the elements forming. The techniques must be performed as a separate and continuous routine, without breaks. The procedures are to be performed in the total body of the individual. Throwing, hitting and kicking styles are roughly divided into the martial arts, with each style being practiced in the world of the martial arts. The tournament is open to all styles of karate. Therefore, there would be no conceivable that the opponents would be different styles of karate; each style would be a different belt.

Opponents will be matched by other people in air class, determined by the rank and color of the belt, black belt considered the highest ranking, but there are various degrees within the belt itself.

"Black belt does represent one reality," said Tew. "He is a disciple of the art. He does know everything, in fact he realizes all he really knows," said Tew. "Black belt," degree black belt.

Martial arts originated in the Orient, but there are uncountable style variations because of the differing modifications that have occurred around the world. The word "KAI" is a Japanese word, and the Orient uses for martial art. According to the major styles in Korea, and probably the most dominant in the US is Tae Kwon Do.

The Tae Kwon Do style of the martial arts began in Korea under the name of Qi, known who believed to be the best aspects of folk arts, and developed them into a style of Tae Kwon Do. General Choi's school began training the army under the use of Tae Kwon Drafter WW II. When karate started to become popular in the United States, somone General Choi's junior officers began teaching this style of karate.

karate show

In the United States we’ve watered it down into a sport. True martial arts are for personal benefit, and mental and physical discipline,” Tew said.

The Moscow School of Judo and Karate is helping coordinate the tournament, as well as counting many of the participants among its ranks. Classes in Judo and Karate are taught every day, and Tew also instructs” classes at the University of Idaho twice each week.

“This tournament is the typical sports concept, and that’s to see who is the best,” Tew said.

Karate, one of the more mystery-shrouded sports, will be presented in a realistic light, and in the environment of individual combat. HIIIIIIYYAAAAA! To you all.

Vandals vs Cougars

Someone will get skinned

By KEVIN KELLEHER
of the Argonaut Staff

The Vandals face another tough game this weekend.
Coach Troxel will take his squad into Martin Stadium on the WSU campus to do battle with the Cougars. It will be the 74th meeting of these Palouse rivals.

"The Battle of the Palouse" is expected to attract a capacity crowd of 22,000, and the Cougars aresmarting for a victory after dropping a close opener to powerful Kansas 14-7. The Vandals are hoping to erase the memory of last weekend's bombing by the Air Force 37-0.

The Vandals have not defeated WSU since 1965, and if they lose Saturday, the Cougars will sport a decade of grid victories over their cross-border foe. Trojan believes that it will be a violent game. He said
"It'll be kinda like an ole neighborhood gang brawl."

Dennis Ballock will be the starting quarterback for the Vandals. There had been speculation that Comstock would start, but Troxel said "I am going to start Ballock and Schrom will also see some action, but I definitely will not start Comstock." Marshall Brantley and J.C. Chadband will be the starting running backs.

Last week's same backfield had several timing miscues and Troxel hopes that Ballock and his crew have ironated them out. Troxel said
"Ballock had trouble reading
the various defenses at Air Force, and what resulted were missed plays and two fumbles."

The Vandals were fortunate even to come out of the Air Force game with no injuries.
Defensive back Chris Mooney is hospitalized at the infirmary with a Staph infection of the right knee, and consequently will not play. Mooney is not a regular, but he sees considersable action as a fifth defensive back incorporated into the defense on obvious passing plays. Replacing Mooney will be junior Bill Kelly.

If any aspect of last week's squad deserves praise it is the defensive backfield - by co-captain Johnny Sims. The Vandal deep backfield lead the Big Sky conference stats in pass defense. Air Force completed only two passes for a total net yardage of 51 yards. This same Vandal defensive backfield will have to play superb defense to thwart the passing of Couger quarterback Chuck Weck and stop the outside thrust of Vaughn
Williams on the option.

The Vandal defensive line will have to stop hard charging fullback Andrew Jones at the line of scrimmage, or he will break the game wide open. The 6-2, 220 pound Cougar fullback rambled for 81 yards against a highly regarded Kansas defense. Troxel said "We'll have to stop Jones at the line or he'll wear out our defensive backs.
Me's the toughest running back that we'll face all season."

The Vandal defense will have to play superbly and contain the potent Cougars. If the defense breaks down then the Cougars will devour the Vandals. Troxel said "If we give him (Sweeney) the chance to run away with the game, he'll roll up 100 points.
He has to get some morale into that ball club before he takes them into Illinois or against Ohio State."

The Vandals don't plan on letting the Cougars shake the change out of their pockets.
Troxel said "If we beat WSU we'll ruin their season and their morale." Obviously, a loss to the Vandals would not give the Cougars too much confidence when Woody Hayes brings his "machine" to the Evergreen State. On the other hand, a Vandal victory would sky rocket the team's morale and the support of skeptical Vandal fans. Well, don't hold your breath. Idaho will have to get their offense going if they even plan to stay in the stadium. The Cougars highlight a destructive defense that forces mistakes.
Last week they jarred the ball away from Jayhawk runners four times and recovered the fumbles twice. The Vandals can't afford to fumble the ball on backfield misues. The Vandals can't afford costly illegal motion penalties and delay of game assessments."

People in Pullman are snifting those "roses" of speculation, hoping that those sniffs will bloom into a New Year's reality for the Cougars. Last week Cougars supporters got a bit light-headed when the Arkansas Razorbacks hog-tied a highly rated USC team 22-7. Many Cougars supporters seem to be taking Troxel's Vandals lightly.
After all they have Illinois, Ohio State, USC, UCLA, and the rest of the Pac-8 to ponder.

Earlier this month, the Pullman Greyhounds defeated the Moscow Bears for the first time in nine years. Ring a bell?
Well, the Vandals are not the Greyhounds, nor the Bears. It's just a coincidence.

An upset of WSU by out Vandals would really be neat.
Everybody would go out and get drunk, and talk about those amazing Vandals and what a hell of a game they played.
From the other perspective, everybody goes out on a Saturday night and gets drunk everyway, but a Vandal victory would "give you an excuse", which you didn't need in the first place, but would be glad to down.

Let's go, Vandals.

Rock climbing...

A precarious challenge

Last Sunday 35 daring Idaho students assembled at the apron of Granite Point near the Snake River to test their nerves and confidence in the art of rock climbing.

The climb was sponsored by the ASUI Outdoor Program, which is starting its second season at Idaho. The program is designed to orient students to outdoor activities and wilderness sport.

It is quite a challenge to rock climb. The sport requires teamwork, self-confidence and consideration for the safety of all involved. More importantly, it turns a person onto the potential of one's inherent ability and the useful value of a simple rock.
People's Park to be paved?

"Completion date on the People's Park Can be an day now, as soon as the plantings arrive — which should be by the end of September," said George Gagnon, physician plant director.

Comments concerning the depthness of the gravel have been heard. The reason for this excess of gravel is due to the fact that a truck load of it was brought in and had to be utilized.

SUB Board Director Gorden Slyter added that the Board suggests blacktopping the gravel to make it more solid. Dedication ceremonies or a celebration for the opening of the park are being considered, however, no date has been set, commented Slyter.

Portland firm submits low bid for doming of stadium

Bids for construction of the dome for the football stadium were received and announced at an administration building meeting held Thursday. The sealed bids were opened and read by George Gagon, director of the U of I's physical plant.

Emerick Construction of Portland submitted the lower base bid of $3,936,000. The other bid submitted was for $4,-100,000, and came from Vern W. Johnson and Sons, Inc., of Spokane.

The base bids submitted did not include costs for necessary additional items, such as team shower and toilet facilities, sound equipment and an asphalt parking lot. Bids on these items were submitted separately.

A decision on which company will be awarded the bid is expected within a week. "Hopefully, we can decide who'll be awarded the contract in the next few days," Gagon said.

Record Review

SHF band is no supergroup

By ED GLADDER
of the Argonaut Staff

John David Souther, producer of several Eagles albums, Chris Hillman, formerly with the Byrds; the Flying Burrito Brothers, and Manassas, Richie Furay, an original Buffalo Springfield and once with Poco; Jim Gordon, formerly with Derek and the Dominos; and Al Perkins, also an ex-Flying Burrito Brother. I don't know about anyone else, but a line-up like that impresses the hell out of me.

Ah, yes. But then I listened to their album, "The Souther-Hillman-Furay Band," and what it had to play for me. The best description I could come up with was a semi-energetic yawn. Thankfully, I did like it better after I listened to it a few times. And too, the more I thought about it, I'd never heard of any musicians or their ex-bands, I would have thought, "Hey, this is alright!"

There are cuts on the album that really are good. "Border Town," "The Heartbreaker," and "Rise and Fall" all sound great to me. Perkins' dobro and steel guitar are exceptional; Gordon's drumming is powerful; the vocal harmonies are noteworthy. And I've always dug Richie Furay's high-pitched, country-rocking voice.

Aside from these high points, and a few other border-lines, mediocrities best describes the Souther-Hillman-Furay Band in their present stage. Undoubtedly they have super-group potential; but better off in their old bands.

(Note: I welcome any suggestions for late-release albums to review. I have access to a wide selection of albums through local radio stations. Send the names of LPs to the Argonaut or bring them down personally. Thnx. — E.G.)

The Three Advent Speakers

The advent Loudspeaker

The original Advent was designed to compete in every audible respect with the most expensive speakers available, at a fraction — often a very small fraction — of their cost. Its useful frequency range is as wide as any speaker's, its sound is clean, clear, and beautifully defined, with a musical balance that is satisfying not just with the best recordings or one kind of musical material, but with the whole range of music and the various ways of recording it. Its bass response is approached by only a handful of speakers at any price, and surpassed by none.

It cost $115 to $130, depending on cabinet finish.

The Smaller Advent Loudspeaker

The Smaller Advent was designed to do exactly what the original Advent does, at half the size and two-thirds the cost, except that it will not play quite as loud. Its range and overall sound are the same as the original (not close, but the same), and for anything short of roof-raising volume levels in really big rooms, you would be very hard-pressed to hear any difference between original and Smaller.

The Smaller Advent costs $79.

The Advent /2

This is the newest Advent and it sounds just like the other two except that it doesn't have the final half-octave of bass response that they do. It's designed for an absolute maximum of useful performance at a lower cost, and its own low price is made possible by the fact that it works superbly with low-cost, low-power amplifiers and receivers. It comes in a beautiful, warm-white molded cabinet instead of the usual low-cost imitation wood finish, and since the enclosure does what a wood one does at far lower weight, it's much easier to mount on a wall or shelf.

The Advent /2 hasn't had as much time as the other Advents to get word-of-mouth going. But it will. What it does is enable people to put together a stereo system for $350 or less that isn't a "starter" or a compromise for a tight budget, but a joy to live with ever after.

The Advent /2 costs $59.50

To check the accuracy of the above statements, just bring along your eyes and ears and (whatever shape it's in these days) your common sense to STEREOCRAFT.

STEREOCRAFT offers complete systems using ADVENT speakers, priced from $299.
