Nixon back to normal; still faces dangers

Former President Richard M. Nixon's personal doctor said Thursday that Nixon's vital signs had reverted to normal and that "there are dangers lurking in the background."

Dr. John C. Langen, echoing a statement made Wednesday by Nixon spokesman Ron Ziegler, said that Nixon could have died if emergency measures had not been taken to stop internal bleeding that sent Nixon into shock after surgery on Tuesday.

He said Nixon's vital signs, including pulse and respiration, have "pretty much returned to normal," but the doctors added, "There are dangers lurking in the background, imminent dangers, real dangers.

Langen said fluctuation detected in Nixon's hemoglobin level were probably not caused by internal bleeding, as indicated earlier. Dr. James A. Harper, a surgeon who participated in Nixon's operation for phlebitis Tuesday, said the former president could remain on the critical list from 24 to 72 more hours.

"I'd say as long as he continues this way, we can expect a gradual improvement," Harper said. But he warned, "It's a matter of monitoring for several days. I know Dr. Langen said that he could turn sour on us at any time, but we have no indication of that." Dr. Eldon B. Hickman, who also operated on Nixon, said Nixon "seems to be handling it well... his outlook is cooperative. He is somewhat annoyed by the constant monitoring by medical instruments at Nixon's bedside, but that is normal.

Langen, Nixon's doctor for 22 years, said the low hemoglobin count was caused by transfusions of whole blood obtained from the Red Cross and the hospital blood bank.

He did not say how much blood Nixon had received. Earlier, a hospital spokesman said Nixon had received three pints of blood and a unit of packed red blood cells.

Hickman said a possible reason for Nixon's hemoglobin count to have dropped Thursday was "hemodilution from increased urinary output."

But Langen said that slow internal bleeding was still a slight possibility. Hemodilution means thinning of the blood from body fluids.

In a statement earlier, Langen said Nixon was in excellent spirits and was "alert to all that is going on around him."

But in that statement he said: "The possibility still exists for further complications. It is still premature to offer a prognosis..."

Senator, administration reach roof solution

Salary and wage increases for many persons who work in the SUB and Coffee House on irregular hours will be paid in the future, and an administrative assistant's position will now be paid. In other ASUI Senate business Tuesday, salary increases totaling $2086 were granted to keep up with the state minimum wage law.

Last meeting a proposal submitted by Grant Burgoyne suggested that a card asking students whether they would be willing to pay the $18 athletic fee be placed in next semester's registration packet. He withdrew the proposal this meeting, stating only that "after further thought, I decided against it and the whole idea."

Three bills proposing purchase of $2373 worth of photographic equipment were put before the senate. One bill, authorizing a purchase of $400, was passed, but the senate tabled the two remaining bills until people involved in the project could be interviewed.

Mark Beatty reported that an agreement was reached between his committee and the administration on the stadium roof. A bill was introduced by Dirk Kempthorne suggesting that the names and addresses of U of I students be released to the National Student Association. The Association would send students information through the mail on life insurance. The bill will be considered next week.

Wage increases will go to U of I personnel

The ASUI Senate's stadium roofing committee has finally reached an agreement with the administration, represented by Financial Vice-President Sherman Carter.

The set of resolutions, basically similar to those approved by the senate last week, was agreed upon. Copies of the resolutions will be placed in all living groups. Students with questions or comments are urged to see their senator.

The agreement will be voted on by the Senate on Tuesday Oct. 5 only two days before bids open for the construction of the roof. The fund raising drive has yielded no definite results, so an senator remarked, "It's a do or die thing."

If the bill was not approved, it would go to the Novemver regent's meeting. If it was approved then, however, construction on the roof would be delayed at least one month and possibly two. This revised agreement still includes the $5 fee increase and retains the overall structure of the governing board. The only important changes were made in the area of appealing decisions made by the board to the president of the university and to the regents. Mark Beatty, chairman of the senate stadium roof committee, pointed out at last Tuesday's meeting that the football team may have nearly exclusive use of the stadium from September through November. The reason is that once the turf is set down in the fall it will probably stay down all season because a large cost is involved in rolling it up. Also, there may not be any concerts in the stadium, if there are, the audience must stay in the stands.

Candidates air views

The Democratic nominee for Idaho’s 1st Congressional District seat charged Thursday Rep. Steve Symms, was a quitter.

J. Ray Cox told a Boise news conference Symms “chickened out” on proposed television debates with him at the University of Idaho and Coeur d’Alene “and he has quit campaigning on the issues because the issues cut my way. I don’t think Idaho likes a quitter.”

Cox also charged that Idaho voters have been “subjected to a barrage of radio and television commercials designed to present a false image of the incumbent congressman...It’s the false TV image we have been running against. The real man dropped out of the race some time ago.”

Cox said if the “real” Symms were still campaigning “we would still be exploring our differences in debate, as he once promised the voters we would. We would both be flooding the press with releases. Instead, my opponent is letting him do the talking for me.”

Meanwhile, the GOP candidate for governor, Lt. Gov. Jack Mason, said he is looking forward to the new leadership during the next four years “to bring the state out of its economic and political doldrums.”

He said inflation and apathy toward the political process are the most crucial problems facing Idaho today.

The incumbent governor says there’s nothing that can be done on a state level to combat inflation and statements like that only contribute to apathy,” Murphy said. “That apathy results in the voter simply turning off his concern for government, and good government is the only tool we have to deal with the problems confronting us.”

Murphy said there are several things Idaho can do on a state level, such as a cutback in the size of government, reduction of state employees and elimination of the sales tax on groceries “which would free quite a bit of money for the needs that it is, and for the people who have paid more taxes than the state needed.”

From STEREO REVIEW, Jan. ’74:

An important benefit of the integrated arm/cartridge design is the low mass of the system. A severely warped “test record” we keep in stock, one which causes virtually all pickups to lose contact, presented no problems to the B&O unit. No other pivoted arm we have ever used has been able to play this record. The B&O Beogram 3000 is, by any standards-aesthetically, technologically, or just plain audible—a superior record player. In today’s inflated market, even its price does not remove it from the “bargain” category.

Will the turf roll up?

To the editor:

Buried under the enthusiasm for the completion of the stadium roof, an important consideration has been forgotten. This is the problem of student use versus the varsity football team.

The stadium is supposed to have a roll-up turf, but it cannot economically be rolled up every night after football practice. The football team practices until almost December, and then again for six weeks in the spring. Except for an occasional big event, such as a concert, the artificial turf will be down for that entire time, eliminating the use of the tennis, volleyball and basketball courts of the special under-dome.

The total time the turf would be down is at least four months during the normal school year. I seriously question as to whether it would truly be a "multiple use facility" if I fear that the complex would remain essentially a football stadium, which no student control board could change. It seems ridiculous to spend four million dollars on an extremely limited multiple use stadium. I feel more students would benefit if the money were used for a truly full time student facility.

If you do not want to pay for a part-time facility, contact any ASUI Senator you can find, or better yet, go the Senate meeting next Tuesday, 7 p.m., Chief's Room of the S.U.B. That is the last chance to change any minds.

ASUI Proxy supports Munson

To the editor:

It was with a great deal of dismay that I learned of the pending controversy regarding the alleged improprieties of Dr. J.P. Munson, President of the State Board of Education. His reputation and his concern for students certainly disprove this claim. No inappropriate allegations against him. He is certainly above the political passions that have attempted to draw him down.

It is refreshing to find a gentleman in his position not only willing, but insisting upon learning what the students have to say. He has a quality which is rare but cherished today among people—the gift of listening.

In my capacity as President of the Associated Students of the University of Idaho, I have witnessed the sincerity and devotion of this man. His performance before the State Board of Regents purges him of all the accusations against him.

Certainly we find issues on which we do not agree, but when there is respect for all included, we can intelligently accept the decisions. Dr. Munson is respected, intelligent, and devoted to the well-being of the student.

We know that he is doing the best for all parties interested in education in Idaho—the students, the parents, the legislature, and the citizens.

I find the very circumstances surrounding the situation in question indicate that Dr. Munson's devotion to the well-being of the students. His desire to assure a safe and sane graduation party for the seniors of Sandpoint High School demonstrate that valuable concern. It is unfortunate that some students in the mood of celebration unknowingly put Dr. Munson's reputation in jeopardy.

I commend you, Governor Andrus, for the wise decision in appointing Dr. Munson to the State Board of Regents and urge you to reaffirm your confidence in Dr. Munson that I feel is so deserving.

I urge you to view Dr. Munson in the light of these qualities which prompted you to select him originally, and not in the light of recent unmerited allegations.

Symms, Smith solutions misguided

To the editor:
The problems of some government programs seems to lend support to the arguments of candidates Steve Symms and Bob Smith that government should not interfere with the “free” market system, as it can work successfully alone. What they ignore is the problems of stability and responsiveness in the market system today.

Even in a pure competition, the price system does not reflect the true costs of all products. Thus the benefits of social goods like highways and the “external” costs of actions such as environmental pollution are not included in market transactions, but accrue to a third party.

In today’s economy of big business and labor and massive advertising, traditional concepts of consumer sovereignty over the market and in most cases the system is more stable and “responsive” that in the first half of the century.

The need for balance is illustrated by energy problems. Both Symms and Smith have blamed the environmentalists and the government for energy problems. Government price controls, import quotas, lack of energy planning, and some environmental restrictions helped precipitate the shortages. However, energy companies have played a major role in restricting energy development and conservation to increase profits and reduce competition from independents.

Effect of environmental restrictions has been regional and is often overshadowed by problems like labor disputes, economic conditions and production delays that delay power plant construction. Both men support increased energy production with reap of most environmental legislation. But in mounting our energy needs this way we will suffer serious social, environmental, and resource problems and conflicts.

Instead we need a balanced program of production, conservation and research in a manner not to create new and serious problems. With the massive energy developments of the future, as in Montana and Wyoming, no government or company can adequately plan and coordinate such development alone. Instead we need to work together the individual, business and government without name calling, to meet the economic, social, and environmental needs of this nation.

Endorsements not needed

To the editor:
I was very disappointed last Tuesday when the Arg came out and endorsed some candidates who are running for public office. I see no need for the Arg staff to use the school newspaper to endorse candidates which they favor. Most students resent being told how they should vote. Instead of using the school newspaper as a tool for expressing their own political opinions, they should help inform the students of how the candidates stand on the major issues.

Idaho needs Bob Smith's common sense

To the editor:
I read your recent endorsement of Senator Frank Church. Your two most important reasons for supporting him were his seniority and his openness. Perhaps we have become more obssessed with his seniority. Is he really all that open?

It is unfortunate we could not see the candidates debating the issues. Those who heard Bob Smith on T.V. or have personaliy met him can witness his frankness, honest views and clarity on all issues. The people know where Bob Smith stands on the Lettuce Boycott, fiscal economy, government roles and responsibilities.

I wish to point out that two thirds of Church’s contributions are from out of state sources. Can he vote continually in the best interestis of Idaho?

Idaho needs Bob Smith. Smith has new ideas and a relevant program for the problems now facing our state and nation. Above all he has common sense which I feel is sorely needed at this time. Don’t forget this when you go to the polls.

Cox endorsement blasted

To the editor:
In your editorial failure to endorse the re-election of Steve Symms, our First District congressman, you cited his "environmental voting record" as a motivating factor. That calls for a short comment.

Steve Symms is a real environmentalist. He knows that our futures depend heavily on the wise management and use of our natural resources in the years ahead. Recognizing that a sound economy and a healthy ecology can go hand in hand, he wants to move forward in the tapping of new energy resources and the better utilization of existing ones, consistent with common sense environmental safeguards.

In Congress, he was a prime mover in getting the government to combat the pests that had already harmed nearly a million acres of forest. His timely action probably saved many million more acres from destruction.

Steve Symms is an honest, thoughtful, hard-working man. He deserves support on election day.

Remove Orval Snow from Boise

To the editor:
When considering the Senate race in District 5, one should ask the incumbent, Orval Snow, just who he is representing. He certainly is not representing the people of District 5.

For instance, while posing as a champion of law and order by voting for a bill to make possession of three grams of marijuana a felony, he actually voted to hinder local law enforcement duties by protecting individuals and their property. If you have no police protection on the night of the big "bust," remember Orval. That kind of law enforcement was brought to you by his compliments.

And then there was Orval's legislative pet - a bill of questionable constitutionality which would require newspaper editors to sign their editorials. Other than obviously infringing on freedom of the press, this bill wasted legislator's time, and more importantly, taxpayer's money. This is the kind of representation our taxes pay for.

Senator Snow claims to represent the university community too, why he even voted against changing Boise State's name to Boise State University. By this fruitless gesture, Orval Snow managed to alienate sentiment in the Boise Valley.

sentiment reflected in its legislative delegation which support the University of Idaho badly needs if its programs are to be adequately funded. Mr. Snow cannot be called a strong, reasonable voice for the University of Idaho inside the Idaho Senate.

Orval said last month that he would not debate his opponent, Glenn Miles, because Mr. Miles has no legislative record to debate. Orval Snow has scored no record, and perhaps his record should be debated. 1974 is no time for mediocrity in Boise. Let's not be fooled this time by the Boise Snow job; it speaks for itself.

Humanitarian Morken

To the editor:
Knowing your bias and prejudice for the conservative candidates in the coming election of Nov. 8, I never could imagine you will misinform the readers by giving lesser coverage and misprints about Ed Morken, a candidate for State-Representative from Laton County.

I know Ed Morken for the last six years. He is a gentleman and knowledgeable farmer ever since I met him. During the severe winter of 1965, I got stuck with my car in front of his farm-ranch and was helpless. Ed came out of his nice warm house to help me in the sub-zero temperature and pull my car with his cat so I could make it back to Moscow. I will never forget this humanitarian act of Ed. He is human indeed.

Ed is not only human, he has a college degree, served as a Naval officer, and runs a farm-ranch in Genesse. He is a friend of farmers as well as of University of Idaho. He is particularly interested in the colleges of agriculture, forestry, and mines.

Let us send Ed Morken to the state house where he could serve our interests best.

Close the distance with Miles

To the editor:
On Tuesday, November 5, the citizens of H tot county and the students here at the University will select their state senator for the next two years. The choice is between a stand-pat, follow-the-leader, incumbent and an innovative young graduate student. The incumbent's biggest moments were as the sponsor of the 'step the editor's press bill and voting to keep parts of the "Sunshine Initiative" buried in committee. On the bright side, challenger Glenn Miles has pushed the President's Initiative almost to success and well liked in the Republican party. Sen. Peavey and Lt. Governor candidate Vern Rawenscroft both have endorsed him, as has former Governor Smiley.

As a graduate here, Glenn Miles can be expected to speak for the students. A vote for Glenn Miles is a vote for the University of Idaho.

Ex-intern supports Evans

To the editor:
Through his outstanding legislative record, John Evans has demonstrated that he believes in the future of Idaho and is willing to work hard to help make that future a bright one. Of particular significance, he is opposed to any despoilation or misuse of our priceless natural resources.

John Evans knows that Idaho's future depends on its most valuable resource — its youth. He is strongly proponent of all phases of the educational process and wants all Idaho youth to attain their highest educational goals regardless of financial ability.

As a farmer and businessman, John Evans is familiar with the needs of Idaho's family farms and is dedicated to helping meet those needs.

When Governor Andrus was on campus earlier this week, he said, "John Evans is a man of integrity and honesty, a man I can rely upon. It is very important to me that the man who presides over the State Senate, the man who has the opportunity to work very closely with a man I can trust. John Evans is that man."

Governor Andrus and John Evans are a great team for you, Idaho.

Symms stands on the environment blasted

To the editor:

As the election draws near the voters have a choice as to whether they will support candidates that will support a free flowing Snake River, no Asotin Dam and no dams in Hells Canyon or those who wish to further degrade our local environment and economy by damming the Snake River.

Let us examine the record. Vernon F. Ravenscroft said Friday, Nov. 9, before the Subcommittee on Parks and Recreation of the United States Senate, and I quote, "We concur with the protection of Hells Canyon proper, but 'summit' start the proposed wild, scenic, and recreational river classifications extending all the way down the river to Asotin, Wash. are too extensive.

To impose river classification restrictions on numerous private owners along the lower reaches of the river is undesirable. Considering the present state of our economy—a national focus on the shortage of energy, food, fiber, and mineral—the desauthorization of the Asotin Dam is in my opinion overkill to the point of irresponsibility.'

Why does Steve Symms refuse to support the McClure-Church bill to establish a Hells Canyon National Recreation in spite of the overwhelming support for this bill by the constituents of his congressional district?

Miles opposes in-state tuition

To the editor:

The constitutional status was originally put there by brilliant Republican representatives during the early days of the Snake River, and it can be preserved with effective representation.

In order to insure that student enrollment stays high at the University, we must insure that residents of the state themselves have paid the taxes that funds this University, do not pay in-state tuition.

I would suggest, that the University of Idaho, and all opponents of in-state tuition need an effective voice who can work with South Idaho Republicans on this matter, as well as Democrats. It's time District Five had a senator who concentrates on bread-and-butter issues for our district.

Tony Park has done a good job

To the editor:

Why is it that people always look to the bad side of everything? That question has bothered me for a long time—it seems to be a human need to have to find something negative in a situation or go away vaguely disappointed.

Ask a person about Tony Park and NARC seems to be uppermost in their thoughts. Doesn't anybody think that Tony's office has turned out 752 decisions in the past four years? That's more than any other attorney general in the state's history.

Even better, only three of these decisions have been overthrown by the courts. That's 749 to the good. Legal expertise like that can be envied by any attorney, but rarely achieved. To quote Governor Andrus, "that's better than 99 and 44/100 per cent—better than Ivory Snow."

Tony has admitted that he has made mistakes, but then when one looks at the overall performance of his office, one must recognize that Tony Park has done his job diligently, with the welfare and well-being of Idaho citizens in mind.

Tony Park is a good man. Let's not turn a good man out of office because of a single, regretted error in judgement. I urge all Idaho voters to study his record as Attorney General, and find out for themselves the many contributions that Tony Park has made to the state through this office.

Criticism on wilderness use unjustified

To the editor:

I read with much interest Mary Helen Furguson's account of her encounter with the Learn to Backpack class from the U of I. While she is certainly entitled to her opinion, she does not constitute a wilderness experience, perhaps a little further clarification is necessary before anyone finds it necessary to don a hair shirt.

The "campspot" Ms. Furguson refers to is Huckleberry Flats which is located on Boulder Creek about four miles from U.S. 12 along one of the most heavily used trails into the Selway-Bitterroot. This popular spot has many acres suitable for camping and it certainly has the ecological carrying capacity to handle 30 backpackers and one horse for many nights.

It is hardly the type of place one seeks for solitude because, by nature of its location on the edge of the wilderness, it frequently is used as a first and last night campsite and dozens of hikers and riders pass through it each day.

After spending one night at Huckleberry Flats the backpack class did break up into smaller groups to hike further into the wilderness. At no time did they break any regulations or violate the terms of their permit. They did not violate any restrictions as to size of party because, at the present time, there are no restrictions as to size of party in the Selway-Bitterroot.

Control of size of party is being considered in the management plan now being written, but no final figures have been settled on. It is interesting to note that research concerning size of party people will soon. In the wilderness indicates people feel that the "right" size party is the size of the one they are travelling in—be it 2 or 30. Unfortunately, until a registration and campsite allocation system is established, conflicts between users groups with different objectives will continue to occur.

Ms. Ferguson gives her address as Sula Ranger Station, Sula, Montana. However, when I tried to contact her there, I found she no longer held her seasonal job and that she actually was a student at the U of I at the time she wrote the letter.

Perhaps you can get further insight as to why she found it desirable to make an emotional appeal through the Argonaut rather than to give constructive criticism to the people and agencies involved.

Stones revisited:
It ain't rock'n' roll
By David Nieuwelt

This letter is being written to take exception to Mr. Randy "Boo" Stappius' record review which appeared in the Oct. 28 issue of the Argonaut; perhaps an apt title for this letter would be, "It's only rock 'n' roll... (but I hate it.)"

The latest album released by the Rolling Stones has got to be one of the raunchiest albums put out by any "big" rock group in years. I suspect that the Stones decided to see just how dirty an album that they could release and get away with.

To begin with, the engineering on the album is very poor; very rarely is anything balanced correctly. Often Richard's guitar will almost over-dub Jagger's voice; other times his guitar is barely present.

I cannot see how Mr. Stappius can call Keith Richard's guitar work on the title cut "brilliant." I know people who have been playing guitar only a few years that can do that well, and it is certainly an original piece of instrumentation. I suggest that Mr. Stappius listen to some of the guitar work done by Parkinson, Leo Kottke, Steve Howe or Jimmy Page. Richard seems to be merely trashing around on this album for a guitarist of his reputation, I would imagine that he could do better. By comparison to the other artists previously mentioned this is not mere opinion; these men are truly talented—Richard is merely a young punk playing his monotonous chord progressions.

Perhaps it is my main objection to the album; it is monotonous. Come to think of it, that's my main objection to the Stones' music in general. On this album, however, they really outdid themselves. I feel that I can place the Stones in the same category with other musical groups like Black Oak Arkansas and the Osmonds. The music, composition-wise, is basically the same which has been the Stones' legacy to their wide audience. We've been listening to this same garbage for over a decade now, and I feel that it's about time that they get out of here. Jagger and his group hang up their instruments and quit feeding on an audience that is the remnant of a fat that died several years ago. The Stones' music is no longer valid nor is it interesting. They are victims of the "Chuck Berry Syndrome"; they are still playing the type of music that made them popular several years ago.

Jagger's "singing" (or is it just a case of a "Willie Bob" rap?) is at its most monotonous; the album boasts some fine back-ups—Billy Preston, Dan Stewart, and Nicky Hopkins among them—but they all are not used to the potential that they could be.

The cover actually is an invalid point, because the cover has no bearing on the quality of music on the album didn't exactly turn me on. Classic? Oh, yeah, classic trash.

As far as lyrics go, the Stones' lyrics have always been among the feeblest attempts to carry a social comment; the lyrics on this album are the feeblest yet.

Sorry Randy, but my overall view of this album is that it is merely the latest crock (or censored) from Jagger, Richard and the gang. If this album reflects rock 'n' roll music today, then I can be genuinely sorry for its present state, which could be summed up in one word, decadence.

I would like to add a little side-note to this letter. You see I am Mr. Stappius' roommate, which is how I got to listen to the album in the first place. You may be asking yourself, "How come you were able to hear it, then why am I writing this letter?" Instead of telling it to his face (which, incidentally, I did). The reason is this: I felt that, since there was one person who was taken in by the Stones and feeled out of his six bucks, there were bound to be others especially an original piece of guitar music. I suggest that you'll disagree with me as the Stones' ripping the public off to the tune of several million dollars by releasing garbage like this and then calling it "music." Muzak, maybe?

Go to hell, Stones.

Santana finds success with new jazz record
By ED GLADDER of the Argonaut Staff

Carlos Santana's band has been on the music scene in one form or another for quite some time now. The Woodstock rock festival and it's motion picture probably should take credit for Santana's first break. It introduced America a funny Chicano rock that Santana would continue to popularize throughout his first three albums. And then Carlos became spiritually enlightened, cut off about two feet of his hair, and turned his music in a jazz-like direction. The "new" Santana released the LP "Caravanserai," which no doubt lost a lot of his rock fans, but gained back as many jazz followers. Last year he went a step further with his album "Welcome," which went even deeper into jazzland with definite Coltrane McCoy Tyner influences.

With his brand-new album "Borboletta," Santana has created an impressive hybrid of both "Caravanserai" and "Welcome." His guitar is still bending and stretching notes in at times sourful way, and at other times sounds like John McLaughlin. The band's percussion has never sounded stronger, with Santana originals Michael Shrieve and Jose Chepito Areas on drums and timbales; and veteran Armando Peraza hammering away powerfully on congas.

After a two year absence bassist David Brown is back; keyboard man Tom Gorder is joined by pianist Leon Polo who also is the group's main vocalist now supersaxophonist. Jules Broussard is another recent addition. And to make things even better, an amazing Brazilian percussionist named Airto Moraes and bassman extraordinary Stanley Clarke sit in on several cuts.

The combination of these talents adds up to a sophisticated, tight sound that can come on heavy, as in "Give and Take," or mellowed out as in "Practice What You Preach" and "Cantos De Los Flores." The song that really makes the album great, however, is a powerful eight minutes and five seconds of "Promise of a Chamberman." It is simply one of the finest jazz instrumental I've heard this year.

The current Santana band has smoothly integrated his jazz influences with his ever-present Latin base, and the result is a creative style of music. But if you want to hear that another "Old Ways," I would suggest you save your money for an Eic Chico disc.

Loggins sets performance
at Lewis-Clark State

Folk-rock singer Dave Loggins will be appearing tomorrow night at the Lewis-Clark State College Gymnasium at 8 p.m. Loggins hit "Please Come To Boston," streaked to the top of the pop chart this summer in his singing debut. He had earlier gained national attention for his songwriting with "Pieces of April," a song that exploded for Three Dog Night and was later recorded by Andy Williams.

Although he is no relation to Kenny of Loggins and Messina, Dave's last name has helped him. Loggins' mother, Dan, who is a CBS record executive, went to a show of Dave's, was favorably impressed, and arranged a recording contract for him with Epic. Loggins had earlier done an album on an obscure label that didn't sell well, but has just released his album that includes "Please Come To Boston." A local rock group, Whiskey Jack will be appearing with Loggins. Tickets are on sale at the SUB Information desk.

Evidence against Munson not enough for charges

Idaho’s director of liquor law enforcement said Thursday he does not believe there is any evidence to justify filing of criminal charges as result of a high school graduation party at the Sandpoint home of Dr. J.P. Munson, president of the State Board of Education.

Richard Cade said un-doubtedly there was beer at the barbecue Munson held for Sandpoint High School graduating seniors, “but there’s not enough evidence to go into court.”

Cade said he was closing the state’s investigation into the Munson incident and was turning the information over to the Bonner County prosecuting attorney.

“I’m quite sure that after the prosecutor reads it he’ll be able to make up his own mind without any recommendations from our office,” Cade said.

He said, “I personally don’t feel there’s any evidence to warrant arrest of anyone, but that’ll be up to the Bonner County prosecutor.”

Cade said his investigation, ordered by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, showed five pony kegs of beer had been purchased by Munson’s son, Mark. He said he understood Munson and his wife were cooking the barbecued chicken and that the beer had been placed down by the barn away from the house.

Cade said investigators had not obtained statements from any youngsters at the barbecue who would admit drinking beer at the event.

Munson said he hadn’t realized beer had been consumed at the party by any of the teenagers.

Munson said he had invited the Sandpoint graduating seniors, including his daughter, to the barbecue to keep them off the highway.

Andrus has said he would ask for Munson’s resignation if the board files charges are filed and Munson is convicted. No charges have been filed.

Hang Gliding

If you ever dreamed of being a... text by kevin kellieher

The cost of lessons is quite reasonable.
The first session, which includes the group school costs $20, and includes a full day of flying. Each additional day-session will run you ten bucks. All the kites are provided by Tom's "Sport Flight" training school. His kites are the proven reliable Rogallo, or delta wing design.

A Rogallo design is an extremely simple aircraft, comprised of four main tubes, a triangle bar and king post, fabric sail, wire and fittings. This aircraft gets its name from Francis M. Rogallo, who was working for NASA and this was a design for a re-entry craft. His design was subsequently copied and a sport was born.

There is another type of hang glider referred to as rigid wing design. It greatly resembles the ancient gliding crafts of the prepower flight time era. These are more complex birds to fly, and previous experience is a must.

There has been talk of making hang gliding an Olympic sport. Believe it or not, it is a sport. Contestants are judged for time, maneuvers, and landings. There have already been several organized meets in the U.S.

The longest hang gliding flight on record lasted over ten hours. A hang glider pilot can stay up as long as he wants if the wind is blowing right. All endurance flying proves is that the wind is blowing hard all the time.

The longest flight on record, besides that of Daedalus, was a journey of 17 miles. Comparable to flying from the Administration Building to Pullman and back. Not too shabby for a simple kite plan... The Tom Stromer, like many crazy personalities, has some good hang gliding stories. Once, while flying near Dayton, Wash., the sheriff department responded to a call from an ecstatic old lady, who claimed she had seen spacemen land on her property. It turned out to be Tom in one of his rainbow colored kites. The sheriff had a hard time explaining to the old lady exactly what was going on. Meanwhile, Tom snuck off for another flight.

How about those fantastic Rainier Beer commercials? Well, if you see a white kite on the tube with a big red 'I' embroidered on the sail it's a flying Rainier in the guise of Tom Stromer. The beer franchise has hired Tom to ski-flying at various ski resorts in the Pacific Northwest.

If you want to be a bird, or get about as close as you can to becoming a bird, check into Tom Stromer's "Sport Flight" training school. His training headquarters are at Northwestern Mountain Sports, which is located next to Team Electronics on Third Street.

"So if you want to be a bird, just fly away so lightly, it'll get you highly..."

Idaho to host hard running Utah

The Vandals will try to come off their first Big Sky loss tomorrow afternoon when they host the Utah State Aggies in a black and blue non-conference clash.

Kick off will be at 12:30, an hour earlier than usual, because of the recent switch back to normal time. Coming into the game the Vandals own a disappointing 1-5-1 record, while the rival Aggies boast a 5-1 record, their lone loss coming from Oklahoma.

Coach Ed Troxel said that his Vandals will be playing a more wide-open style of ball and speedster Marshall Brantley, who gained 144 yards against WSU, may be starting. Troxel said Utah State uses a pro-set slot "T" offense featuring a man in motion to confuse the defense. He added that the Aggies are a no nonsense club, which has displayed sound exeecution thus far this season.

The Vandals will be banking on the Csonka-like running of J.C. Chadband and the outside speed of Marshall Brantley. Mark Fredrick who has gained well over 200 yards in the last two games will be seeking heavy play also. Foult weather tomorrow might give Idaho a slight edge because of their dynamite running game, but Utah State happens to have Louie Giammona, fourth in the nation for major college rushing statistics.

Giammona is on his way to becoming USU's all time leading rusher and his zig zag lightning running style is enough to thwart any defense. He also poses a punt and kick-off return threat, something that has hurt the silver and gold more than once this year.

Aggie quarterback Bill Swanson is a quick and clever ball handler, who can pull a bootleg or spring out pass exceptionally well. The Utah defense has been giving up consecutively fewer yards each week to their opponents and will be tough. Utah State and Idaho have excellent field goal kickers and both have consistent yard gaining backfields. Idaho will have to contain Giammona and Swanson as well as pile up points. The Vandals will face a solid and polished Utah State squad and there will be no slack allowed for mistakes such as fumbles or penalties.

Idaho holds a narrow 11-10 edge in their series against Utah State that started back in 1916. The Aggies won the last meeting, 51-7, back in 1972, but the Vandals will be seeking to avenge that thrashing. Incidental ly the only common opponent for both teams this year was West Texas State. The Texans beat Idaho 21-6, while the Aggies came from behind last weekend to beat them by the same score, 21-8.

Big Sky games set for tomorrow

Montana State, an early season co-favorite for the Big Sky football crown, can just about hand the flag to Boise State this weekend by whipping arch rival Montana.

Meanwhile Boise State entertains Weber State in the only other conference action Saturday.

In non-league Idaho is host to Utah State and Idaho State plays Portland State.

Montana State has two conference losses which just about puts the Bobcats out of the title picture, but Coach Sonny Holland’s club can do Boise State a big favor by knocking off Montana, which has only a tie with Idaho marring its conference record.

But a Montana victory at Missoula Saturday would set the stage for a showdown Nov. 16 when Boise State invades Missoula.

Grizzly Coach Jack Swarthout said, “You just throw away the books: when the two Montana rivals school meets.

“Having the right at home should be to a great deal on emotions. We know we’ll have the biggest crowd ever for the game and it’s going to be broadcast statewide by the commercial television stations, too,” Swartzout said.

“This is a game that both teams look forward to with a great deal of anticipation,” Holland commented. “Both teams plan for it and this year both are very good football teams.”

Defense will be the key to the final outcome, Holland predicted.

“Both offenses are very similar in that they control the ball and roll up a lot of first downs,” he said. “With the capability to move the ball, I think the winner is going to score at least three or four touchdowns.” Boise State, fourth ranked among the nation’s small college teams, will be heavily favored to beat Weber State and rack up its 10th consecutive Big Sky conference victory.

The Broncos’ big running threat, John Smith, has been bothered with an injured ankle, but is listed in Coach Tony Knap’s tentative starting lineup. Boise State will again be relying heavily on the passing arm of Jim McMillan, All Big Sky quarterback, who is leading the nation’s small college performers in passing-and-total yardage this season.

Weber State Coach Dick Gwinn said he hopes his Wildcats can get started a little earlier than in the last two games.

“We’ve waited until the fourth quarter to really begin playing ball against both Northern Arizona and Idaho State,” Gwinn said. “Our mistakes have been the biggest problem though.”

Weber lost to Northern Arizona 21-20 and Idaho State 10-8.

The Wildcats are primarily a running team and Knap said they “use Don Reddick, Chad Drackless and Brian Gladwell quite a bit.”

Gwinn said it’s hard to predict both teams will react when meeting what he termed “a total football team” in Boise State.

“We’re just asking our team to perform at its best and if you get beat under those circumstances there’s not a lot to complain about,” he said.

Idaho State Coach Bob Griffin said Portland State has probably the best team in the school’s history.

“This will not be the Portland State team people around here are used to seeing. They are competitive with everybody in the Big Sky except possibly Boise State,” Griffin said. “We will have to be at our best to win.”

He noted the Vikings outgain Montana last week but lost on mistakes.

“Portland State is going to have to turn over the ball as they have in the past if we are to win,” Griffin said. “It’s up to us to force those turnovers.”

J. C. Chadband wins Big Sky honor

Vandal fullback J.C. Chadband has been named Big Sky Offensive Player of the Week. Chadband garnered the honor after his second straight game of 100-plus yards in rushing.

Despite Idaho’s 36-21 loss last weekend to Montana State, Chadband led the Vandal rushing attack picking up 142 yards in 27 carries and one touchdown. A week earlier he had carried 17 times for 145 yards and three touchdowns against Montana.

Chadband now stands third in Big Sky rushing with 572 yards in 110 carries and has an 81.7-yard-per-game average. Last year he played in only four games and gained a total of 309 yards. Chadband and teammate Mark Geddes both are averaging 5.2 yards every time they pack the football.

Film Society to host movie "Pygmalion"

George Bernard Shaw is probably one of the most famous writers of modern times. In 1914, he wrote the play "Pygmalion." When it first opened in London, it caused a scandal, because of the humorous way it depicted the British aristocracy. In 1938, "Pygmalion" was made into a movie under the personal supervision of Shaw himself, who wrote the screen play and dialogue. It was directed by Anthony Asquith and Leslie Howard. On Monday, Nov. 4, the Film Society will present this rare motion picture. It is the story of a modern Pygmalion, a phonetics expert named Henry Higgins (Leslie Howard), who molds a cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle (Wendy Hiller), into a lady fit to meet an archduchess. It is the same story as the well-known "Pygmalion," only it is not a musical. In fact, this movie has not been shown for a number of years because the producers of "My Fair Lady" had all copies of it removed from circulation.

When "Pygmalion" was premiered in New York 36 years ago, George Bernard Shaw said he would teach America what a "film should be like." As Frank S. Nugent said in the New York Times film reviews a few days later, "Mr. Shaw truly has taught the American film-makers something."

It Sounds Incredible

BUT EVELYN WOOD GRADUATES CAN READ

THE EXORCIST IN 58 MINUTES

At That Speed, The 403 Pages Come Across With More Impact Than The Movie.

You can do it, too. So far over 550,000 other people have done it. People who have different jobs, different IQs, different interests, different educations have completed the course. Our graduates are people from all walks of life. These people have all taken a course developed by Evelyn Wood, a prominent educator. Practically all of them at least tripled their reading speed with equal or better comprehension. Most have increased it even more.

Think for a moment what that means. All of them—even the slowest—now read an average novel in less than two hours. They read an entire issue of Time or Newsweek in 35 minutes. They don’t skip or skim. They read every word. Instead, they let the material they’re reading determine how fast they read. And mark this well: they actually understand more, remember more, and enjoy more than when they read slowly. That’s right! They understand more. They remember more. They enjoy more. You can do the same thing—the place to learn more about it is at a free speed reading lesson.

This is the same course President Kennedy had his Joint Chiefs of Staff take. The staff of President Nixon completed this course in June 1970. The same one Senators and Congressmen have taken.

Come to a Mini-Lesson and find out. It is free to you and you will leave with a better understanding of why it works. One thing that might bother you about your reading speed is that someone might find out how slow it is. The instructors at the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Free Speed Reading lesson will let you keep your secret. It’s true we practice the first step to improved reading at a Mini-Lesson and we will increase your reading speed on the spot, but the results will remain your secret. Plan to attend a free Mini-Lesson and learn that it is possible to read 3-4-5 times faster, with comparable comprehension.

SCHEDULE OF FREE MINI-LESSONS

You’ll increase your reading speed
50 to 100% on the spot!

TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY
4:00 p.m. or 8:00 p.m.

MOTHERS HAVE HAPPILY NURSED their babies since the beginning of time. Breastfeeding is a natural and unique system of supply and demand which best serves mother and baby.

Breastfeeding has not become complicated, but attitudes toward it have created problems. It was to help solve these problems that the La Leche league came into being.

The international organization is non-profit and non-sectarian. Its members are dedicated to helping mothers who want to breast feed their babies.

La Leche League holds a series of four meetings covering the following: 1. advantages of breastfeeding to mother and baby; 2. the art of breastfeeding and overcoming difficulties; 3. baby arrives; the family and the breastfed baby; 4. nutrition and weaning.

In Moscow the La Leche League group has begun meetings this month. Mrs. Barbara Truka has recently obtained her leader's qualifications and will be the group leader. The first series is already under way and the second meeting in the series will be on Nov. 1 at 9:30 a.m. at Terrace Garden Trailer Court 67. Later there is a possibility of evening meetings for working women if there is enough interest.

Any interested mothers or mothers-to-be in the area are welcome to attend. Children are invited also. For information call Barbara Truka at 835-2783 in Troy.

The candidates were asked to give their name, hence many of those approached (460) did not wish to participate.

The following questions were asked:
1. "What are the two most important issues the federal government has to face?"
2. "What are the two most important issues the state of Idaho has to face?"

Among national problems the economy was most mentioned (150) by 103 specifying inflation. Clean government was mentioned by 50, and the quality of life by 26. The number of respondents totals more than 127 because respondents were asked to name more than one problem.
