Tuition

State Board’s definition in House; lobbyist’s delay request denied

BOISE—The Idaho House of Representatives Monday voted to print a bill using the Idaho State Board of Education/Board of Regents definition of tuition as the basis of a student fee which would be used to pay costs previously considered unconstitutional.

After the bill is printed, it will be assigned to a committee which will then make a recommendation to the entire House. If approved there, the bill would move to the Senate for consideration.

ASUI lobbyist Jack Gerard asked the Education Committee for a week in which to come up with a definition of tuition that would be satisfactory to both the State Board and the leaders of student government. His request was turned down when Rep. Tom Stivers (R-Twin Falls) said tuition was an old issue and moved to print the bill immediately.

At the same time the House Education Committee was meeting, the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, also discussing tuition, decided to work with the State Board to propose a ceiling on the percentage of student funds which would go to pay instructional costs.

“We are currently paying anywhere from 6 to 18 percent of our fees,” said Gerard, “but if in-state tuition were imposed, it could be around 25 percent above and beyond what we are paying now,” he said.

State Senator John Barker (R-Buhl) is comparing the fee ceilings used in other western states, such as 25 percent of total costs in Colorado and 23 percent in Oregon, as the basis for a possible ceiling in Idaho.

Senate allocates $1,000 to obtain legal opinion from Boise attorney

by Bill Will

The ASUI Senate voted Sunday night to seek a lawyer’s opinion regarding the legality of the definition of tuition submitted by the State Board of Education/Board of Regents to the Idaho Legislature.

The House Education Committee voted Monday to print the definition proposal as a bill amending the Idaho Code. The measure may reach the House floor before the end of the week.

The ASUI Senate, meeting in an emergency session called by ASUI President Eric Stoddard, debated for nearly two hours before passing a resolution authorizing ASUI to spend a maximum of $1,000 for a lawyer to formulate an opinion.

According to Stoddard, ASUI will seek to challenge the definition on one or both of two points:

 Approval of the definition by the Legislature would be equivalent to legislative interpretation of the Idaho Constitution, which may in itself be illegal. The lawyer will also try to determine if some parts of the definition violate the Idaho Constitution’s prohibition of in-state tuition because the definition includes funding provisions for academic support.

Stoddard has tentatively chosen Boise attorney William Mawk for the job.

Stoddard contacted Mawk Monday and reported that he is “definitely interested.”

Stoddard hopes that Mawk can deliver an opinion to the state attorney general or the House Education Committee by the end of the week.

The resolution authorizing the hiring of a lawyer passed the ASUI Senate by a 6-2 vote after a lengthy debate. Senators Scott Biggs and Laurie Cranman voted against the proposal, citing ASUI financial problems.

Biggs asked that the bill be referred to the Senate Finance Committee, of which Biggs is chairman, to determine if ASUI was in a financial position to commit $1,000 to legal fees.

“We have to look very seriously if we can afford this,” Biggs said.

Stoddard assured the Senate that legal costs would probably be far below the $1,000 figure and that ASUI would receive help from the student government of Idaho State University and possibly Lewis-Clark State College.

Stoddard said the ASISU Senate was scheduled to vote Monday night to approve funding to back the UI legal initiative.

The ISU body voted last week to commit $3,000 toward a lawsuit against in-state tuition aimed at the State Board. Stoddard said ASISU President Tim Smith told him Monday he was “very confident” that the ASISU Senate would vote to use that money to support the new ASUI plan.

That will not rule out the possibility of a lawsuit against the State Board at some future date. Stoddard said that a favorable legal opinion “could very well be the grounds for a lawsuit.”

UI alumni seen as important in effort to increase funding

by Lori White
of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho is getting some much-needed help from alumni members in its quest for state funds, said Philip Kleffner, director of alumni relations.

In effect, alumni all over the state are lobbying for more money for UI. Since last June, newsletters have been sent to alumni to inform them of the needs of the University. Individual alumni members use the information to educate Idaho legislators from their districts about the financial condition of UI. Much of the lobbying is done during informal talks. “This is not a deluge of letters,” said Kleffner.

Actions of the alumni are only part of a concerted effort begun last June to raise state funds for the University. Members of the UI administration have contacted all state legislators to inform them of the University’s needs.

Also, UI President Richard Gibb travels statewide to speak on behalf of the University, and two members of the UI alumni board work directly with the Legislature.

Kleffner feels that the efforts of all concerned are having an effect on the legislators. “By and large ... they (the legislators) really are listening and are willing to help."

Efforts on behalf of UI will continue throughout the legislative session. “Everyone is working hard at it,” said Kleffner, “and will continue to do so.”

State tax auditors to scrutinize budgets of ASUI departments

Officials of the Idaho State Tax Commission will arrive from Boise sometime this week to conduct an audit of the ASUI, officials learned Monday.

The main thrust of the audit will be to determine if the various ASUI departments have been complying with state sales tax laws, said ASUI President Eric Stoddard. The auditors have just completed a similar audit of the Associated Students of Boise State University. ASBSU President Sally Thomas told Stoddard that the auditors would be in Moscow “within the week.”

Redford meets with UI, WSU officials

Actor Robert Redford made an unprompted visit to Moscow Sunday to confer with officials of the University of Idaho and Washington State University, the Lewiston Morning Tribune reported today.

“Redford says he probably spent an hour with him and our colleagues from the campus. He was a very cordial person and he was interested in the activities of the university,” said UI President Glen Terrell.

Redford was accompanied by his wife, Sissy Spacek, and their daughter, Shauna. The couple has been living in Moscow for the past few months.

The Tribune said that the purpose of the meeting was to negotiate details of a joint multidisciplinary institute between the universities that might involve the use of Redford’s name, money, or both. The actor has been widely identified with various environmental causes.

UI News Bureau Director Sandra Haarsager discounted a report on a Pullman radio station that Redford was prepared to contribute $5 million to the two institutions.

Redford reportedly was met at the Pullman-Moscow Airport by UI and WSU officials and the group then traveled by car to a location described by Terrell as being “the periphery of the UI campus.”

Redford’s arrival was preceded by a visit from a couple of (Redford’s) people,” Terrell said. Officials at both UI and WSU said formal announcements concerning the visit will be made later this week, possibly as early as today.

 Asked why Utah resident Redford would be interested in the Palouse universities, Terrell said, “that would be obvious.”

Out for a swim

Editor,
Would you like a weekly job helping 5-year-olds enjoy the water and perhaps even learn to swim? No experience is necessary, only willingness to attend regularly and the ability to hold yourself and one or two children up in waist-high water. This semester the morning class will swim from 9:30 to 10:30 on Fridays and the afternoon class will swim time will be 1:30 to 2:30 on Mondays. This program would not be possible without our college friends. Many have assisted in the past and we have sincerely appreciated those volunteers. They tell me a smell and a hug from a kindergarten student is great pay. If you will work for those kind of wages, please come see me soon in Education 102.

For the record

Editor,
I feel it necessary to set the record straight concerning several erroneous statements attributed to me in the Tuesday Jan. 27 Argonaut article "NCAA Out-muscling AIAW for Control". The bulk of the article was fairly accurate and touched on several points in a very complicated issue, but several internal statements were seriously flawed. I do not believe the UI women's athletic program will face near extinction within the NCAA governance structure as stated in the article. However, any alignment with the NCAA for women's athletics would no doubt have a very large financial impact. Large additional resources would have to be identified to maintain existing men's Division I programs and upgrade women's programs to the required NCAA Division I level.

Secondly, the recruiting costs noted in the article were entirely incorrect. The current women's athletic recruiting budget is very small, partly due to AIAW recruiting limitations. The NCAA rules would allow open recruiting and would thereby dictate large increases in that area in the UI women's budget, in order to remain competitive with other institutions recruiting athletes. However, the figure of $150,000 is as unthinkable as it would be unattainable.

Last, but certainly not least, the NCAA action to sponsor championship programs for women is NOT A MERGER as stated in the article. The NCAA has taken unilateral action to initiate women's championships in direct competition with the AIAW, certainly not in conjunction or in combination with the AIAW's program. The AIAW has long urged the NCAA and NAIA to discuss muskegon governance concerns in future governance arrangements. Time after time, the NCAA leadership declined any such involvement.

There may be considerable merit to a complete NCAA plan to govern women's athletics. However, at the present time, the NCAA action is ill-timed, only partially complete, and in bad need of very close examination as regards the motivation for such action. It is my considered opinion that the interests of UI women's athletics can best be served by continued participation in the AIAW governance structure.

More guns

Editor,
I'm sorry I offended the car owners of America. For the most part, I think cars are a good deal, too, and wasn't really serious about car control. The point is that gun control would be just as ridiculous.

How can Ms. Hornig justify the claim that handguns aren't used in hunting? While not as popular as other arms, pistol use has increased enough for some states to set seasons and regulations specifically for handgun hunters.

She didn't define "indiscriminant ownership," but I assume she meant the extreme end of the spectrum, where anybody totes a six-shooter on the hip, dueling over parking spaces, etc. I don't suppose law enforcement officials support arming everyone to the teeth, ready to repel the Red Threat. I doubt they support disarming the law-abiding public, either. Defense with a gun isn't for everyone, but the opportunity shouldn't be denied. That's about all a restrictive gun law would be, mass punishment for the actions of a few. The fact most crime in this country is committed by repeat offenders was recognized. But there's already a gun law that prohibits ex-cons from possessing firearms. Obviously, it doesn't work.

How could defending yourself be a liability? Apparently, Ms. Hornig thinks burg- lars and muggers approach their line of work with the dedication of Kamikaze pilots. Perhaps reacting to an aggressor by defending yourself with a gun (or by any other means), might provoke him further. I mean, really, how dare you resist! Some people are pacifists and I respect that. I wouldn't kill someone over money or property, but I'd do whatever necessary if my family and I were threatened with bodily harm. I'd want that advantage of distance Ms. Hornig mentioned, not hand to hand combat. Yes, the bad guys might have that advantage too, but I wouldn't want any less for myself.

With impulsive crime, the weapon doesn't matter. If handgun were prohibited, the next handy weapon would do. It doesn't matter what it is, someone's going to abuse it, be it guns, cars, drugs, etc.

This all sounds rather violent, and I'm sorry. That's the way the world works sometimes. John Lennon had hopes for a world of peace, passing those dreams along in his song. It's pretty thought, but the fact is that there are people who don't care about peace and love. They're out to rob, rape, and plunder. Some feel the solution is to ban firearms, since we can't afford to keep all these people locked up. I don't see how we can afford not to.

Vandals top Lumberjacks, 72-61

by Kevin Warnock
of the Argonaut

With 54 seconds remaining in last Saturday night's Idaho-Northern Arizona game, Idaho Coach Don Monson left his seat, walked past the scorers table and apologized to NAU Coach Joedy Gardner for something he said earlier in the game. Gardner did likewise and asked Monson to sit and chat for a moment. The game ended soon thereafter with the Vandals taking a 72-61 victory and assuming first place in the Big Sky Conference.

It was a game of extreme intensity and high emotion on both sides. Jeff Brudie had a technical foul called on him. Gardner received his warning early on for leaving the bench and Monson's thoughts were expressed routinely as always.

It all started with Kenny Owens getting shoved hard, and no whistle from the officials, according to Monson. "I'm a little uptight," he said after the game. "My kid got pushed and I became upset."

It was at this point that Monson and Gardner exchanged words and later made up.

"My biggest complaint was with the referees," Gardner said afterwards. "They were leaning on the big guy (Dan Busch) inside—warming on him and the officials didn't call it. He's so young and doesn't understand how to fight back."

Busch stands 6-11, 215 pounds and is one of the Lumberjacks' best percentage shooters. He finished the game 6-of-9 from the field and 4-of-5 from the charity strip to tie for NAU scoring honors with teammate Elliot "Dinky" Jones who also scored 16.

Brian Kellerman led all scorers with 22 points for Idaho. After Kellerman, the Vandals' balance scoring attack resulted in three more double-figure scorers. Ken Owens and Phil Hopson each had 12 while Ron Maben contributed 11.

The crowd enjoyed the most active game of the year, putting to an end the myth that Moscow fans cannot make noise.

"See all those people up there, and I want the kids to play well for them," Monson said. Attendance at the game was 6,400.

The fans had plenty of cause to be excited with Ken Owens' alley-oop passes being converted into baskets and Kellerman, Brudie and Hopson recording slam dunks.

This week The Vandals put their 16-2 season and 7-1 league record on the line with back-to-back games Friday and Saturday night on the road against Idaho State and Weber State.

Idaho rips Warriors in shootout

The scene midway through the opening half of the Idaho women's basketball game against Lewis-Clark State College was not supposed to be happening. The visiting Warriors were handily outplaying their hosts, the defending regional champions, and had assumed a 41-27 lead over the Vandal with nine minutes left in the half. At this point, Idaho's Darlene Davis came off the bench and began to compile her 19 points for the evening. Combining Davis' outside touch and a full court pressure defense, the Vandals had all they needed to make a comeback. Such was the case last Saturday evening as the Vandals took command of first place in the Intersate League with a 70-56 win over LCSC. The Vandals league record is 3-1, while the Warriors hold second place at 4-2. Idaho is now 15-5 on the season. "Our players are fighters," commented Idaho coach Pat Dobratz at the game. "They know what it takes to win. If someone out there is having a bad game, it's nice to know our bunch is ready."

Another freshman who came off the bench to have a big night was Dana Fish. Fish led all Idaho scorers with 21 points and also led in rebounds with 15. In the backcourt, Willette White and Karin Sobotta dished out five assists each, but more importantly, used their quickness to run down LCSC. As to whether or not her team is indeed faster, Dobratz couldn't say for sure. "May be we're in better shape," she said.

LCSC Coach Marigay Schopp agreed Idaho might have been quicker "in some areas," but said cold shooting hurt her club more than anything else.

Idaho track team takes two big firsts

Two members of the Idaho track team came away with individual honors Saturday at the Oregon Invitational Track meet, one of the two biggest track events in the Pacific Northwest. Patsy Sharples, Idaho's champion distance runner, took first place in the women's one-mile run with a time of 4:35.1. Connie Case of Oregon State took second in the event, followed by Cindy Grant of the Vancouver (B.C.) Track Club.

Idaho high-jumper Jim Sokolowski won the jump with a leap of 6' 9 1/4". Washington State's Doug Nordquist finished second with a jump of seven feet even.

Marvin Wadlow also enjoyed a fine day as the Vandal triple jumper finished second in the competition with a leap of 48 feet, one-half inch. No team scores were tallied in the Invitational meet which included some of the best track talent in the Pacific Northwest. Idaho will now host the Vandal Indoor Track Invitational meet Saturday beginning at 7 p.m. Included in the meet are Ron Livers and Ian Campbell two world class triple jumpers. Livers is rated third in the world while Campbell is seventh. Admission to the meet will be $4 for adults, $3 for students and $2 for those who attended the developmental meet in the morning for high school and college runners and kept the ticket stub.

Gymnasts finish second

Even without the services of Karen Ball or Cindy Bedart, the Idaho women's gymnastics team finished second in a triangular meet in the Physical Education Building Friday night. Washington State University won the meet with 131.25 points, followed by Idaho with 118.45. Ricks College of Rexburg, Idaho, was third with 104.60 points.

"I expected to come in second place," said Idaho Coach Wanda Rasmussen. "Washington State has a very strong team and they are a Division I team."

Cougar Patti Warner won the all-around title, compiling 33.7 points in the four events. Teammate Joan Carbaugh was second at 33.40 while Idaho's Shannon Daily was third with 31.35 points. Daily's teammates, Brette Clark and Glenda Nordquist, tied for seventh with 29.50. Idaho was an overall team of 134.85. The meet was held at the Utah State University in Logan.

Idaho's Darlene Davis finished with 19 points in the opening half, helping her team defeat the Warriors.
