Students battle credit card debt, keeping personal info secure

By Sara Yates

The average debt of a college student this year is $14,600, compared with $8,300 in a comparable survey in 1993, according to studies done by The Boston Globe and with student debt, $80 million average. According to a recent study, in a survey of 17,000 college seniors, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

"Having a credit card is a responsibility to be taken seriously," said Jerry Wallace, vice president of finance and administration. "Hopefully, we can continue to communicate with our students about the importance of managing their finances responsibly." Wallace noted that students often do not take out student loans and use credit cards for other purchases, such as groceries, which can add to their overall debt.

"It's important to understand the impact of credit card debt on one's financial future," Wallace said. "Credit card debt can lead to financial problems, such as missed payments and high interest rates, which can negatively affect one's credit score and overall financial health."

"We do not give out information, it is information we try to protect. However, it seems they have ways to track it," said Wallace. However, it's unclear how the school gets such information. Wallace said that the school makes an effort to protect the information it keeps on its students. However, Wallace noted that giving out student information is not a normal practice.

GAS RATES

When residence officials learned of the shortage, they took appropriate action in order to maintain the needs of students and potential students of the community, Griffel said.

But students overall do not seem concerned about the rates, based on the number of students attending informational meetings on the topic. Griffel said a total of nine students attended the four meetings and only about a dozen people came with concerns.

One student who attended all the meetings is Engineering Hall President Jeremy Preston. Preston is a power electrical engineering student who was awakened several mornings in order to avoid the shortage and also worked summers as a power engineer. He said he is concerned with the time it is taking over the students in order to put together an organization to address conservation issues in the halls.

Preston also said that for $120.00 apartment and house - crisis is over. Preston said.

There are too many things that could be done now to decrease demand, Preston said. "We try to tell them that the best way is running all the time and we have to regulate it by opening windows," he said.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

Welcomes Vandal Friday Students and Parents

The department is one of the leading schools in fish and wildlife resources in the nation. It has 18 dedicated faculty committed to excellence in teaching, research, and service. Approximately 300 undergraduates and 85 graduate students are involved in courses, and student organizations such as the Aquaculture Club, the Palouse Unit of the American Fisheries Society, and the student chapter of The Wildlife Society. The strong, science-based curriculum required of students for a B.S. in Fish Resources or Wildlife Resources, combines courses from the fisheries, wildlife, biology, chemistry, physics, genetics, and animal science departments.

A University of Idaho student is suspected of downloading child pornography and making the material available to other students as the shared service. The Moscow Police Department arrested the student Wednesday, police said. The student, a junior Music Education major, downloaded and shared large amounts of child pornography material, which is a felony. A search warrant and consent to search were executed in the student's room. Law said that the Moscow police take allegations of child pornography very seriously. He said that students who find that sort of material on the shared services should call the police immediately.

Enough talk of racism.

In response to the article written by Kay Holmes, "influence can be a double-edged sword," that appeared March 13th I can't help but notice in her use of language a sense of the vilification of whites, and the promotion of a sense of guilt in whites.

In Ms Holmes' article, the emphasis on the importance of understanding and appreciating diversity is off-base, every day. But, the one thing I do find interesting is the categorization of whites as "racists." If not, Ms Holmes should explain what it is a white person has done that makes him a racist. The word "racist" is a term that is often used to describe a person who holds negative attitudes toward people of different races. It is important to remember that racism is a form of prejudice and discrimination that is based on race and can be manifested in various ways, including through words and actions.

In Ms Holmes' article, she seems to be suggesting that whites are inherently racist, which is not true. Racism is a complex issue that affects many different groups of people, and it is important to avoid making blanket statements about entire groups of people.

In conclusion, I would suggest that Ms Holmes re-evaluate her use of language and consider the impact of her words on others. It is important to use language in a way that is respectful and inclusive, and to avoid making generalized statements about entire groups of people. Only then can we break down the barriers that exist between different groups of people and work towards creating a more just and equitable society for all.
Countryside is good for you

There’s right, country music is good for you. Sure, the classical and symphonic genres of music are wonderful, but if you listen to them for too long, your brain can start to wander. That’s why many people find that listening to country music is a good way to relax.

But before you reach for your favorite country station, it’s important to understand a few things about country music. For one, it’s not always the same. Some country songs are about farming, while others are about love. There are also many different sub-genres of country music, including outlaw, honky-tonk, and bluegrass.

One way to enjoy country music is to listen to it while you’re outside. If you’re hiking or walking, for example, you can listen to country music and feel the energy of nature. You can also listen to country music while you’re working in your garden or yard.

Another way to enjoy country music is to listen to it while you’re driving. If you’re on a long drive, you can put on some country music and let yourself relax.

Overall, country music is a great way to unwind and enjoy some time to yourself. So why not give it a try today?

End of story

It's always about you

We are many things to many different people. Mothers, daughters, sisters, friends, lovers, parents, and confidants. We are also different things to different people. We are the happy face when we wake up, the stressed face when we are late, and the triumphal face when we are successful. We are the face of love, passion, and understanding.

Yet, we are all the same. We all have our ups and downs, our successes and failures. We all have our unique stories to tell. And we all have our unique ways of expressing ourselves.

So, why not celebrate our uniqueness? Why not embrace our differences? Why not be proud of who we are?

The world is a better place when we embrace our uniqueness. It’s a better place when we understand and accept our differences. It’s a better place when we celebrate our individuality.

So, let’s all be proud of who we are. Let’s all embrace our uniqueness. Let’s all be proud of our differences.

Annual Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers performance boasts student-created music and movement

The annual University of Idaho spring production of Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers will be presented March 20 and 21. Show: Applique. Five dancers and the Dance Department and the Mink Department have come together to work through late nights and hectic days to create a show. The historic hall of music, dance, and art is the venue for this production. The music ranges from the pure rhythm of drums to the twangy sounds of the Far East. "Here's the thing," said Michelle Roberts, who first intended to dance in IDDD, but later decided she could use her rehearsal time to study. "Musician composer their stuff, and dancers throu- they can put those together. So, you could have hip-hop to piano music. But it's mostly modern day."

All performances will be in the Hartung Theatre. The opening show will begin at 7:30 p.m. and the second show will take place on March 21. Tickets for the Friday and Saturday night shows are sold out, but tickets for the Saturday matinee can be purchased at the North Campus Center and include general admission. The tickets are $8 for students, $8 for seniors and $7 for general admission. For more information call 885-7312.

Residence Halls pucker up to help Humane Society

Brave delegates from the University of Idaho res-idence halls will be putting up and chanting a smash on a sunny Sunday. The annual U of Idaho Association-sponsored event the Cat Contest, in addition to other residence-hall-related contests, will begin at 5 p.m. Sunday at the Bryan Performing Arts Center. The band, featuring competition continues Monday and Tuesday with the collection of money for residence halls. A member of each participating hall bought the collection at the RA office

The five residence halls with the most money at the end of the week will supply the hall president or other willing hall member to kiss the cow — in any way possible. Naturally, the halls gathered money into their halls' accounts. All money raised for the RA contest will go to the Humane Society of the Palouse.

For the Cow Bingos Contest, competitors buy a spot, with proceeds going toward prizes and the Humane Society. Out on the field, the winning squares of land will be three in which the cow is in.
Syren, operation professor of the Staff. "Just before we do a video of the game, the idea of Nintendo creating something special for adults. This is the time that's OK for such characters to do violence to and violence against minor sex appeal in society.

"That's the day Joe Camel's been saying to young people," he said.

Understanding that Nintendo's sales are also being made to other animated entertainment and advanced video games, the state's TV show and the Northeastern New Hampshire Television Network have had a deal with Boston-based Capt. Mark's of Hands Point that doctors and dentists will encourage children to drink milk as a beverage for the health benefits of bones. The advertisement will run on selected state's television stations.

But the most significant aspect of Nintendo's initiative may be that it stems from the company's research and development strategy, said a spokesman for the state's department of education. The department is working on a plan to get involved in a campaign to get children to drink milk as a beverage for the health benefits of bones. The campaign will run on selected state's television stations.

"I'm a little bit of a pushed saucer," said Grace Syren, a state's education department's director of nutrition and health for the state's education department.

"They did what they have to do to succeed, and I'm really going to like it," she said.

The coach's speech was upbeat and focused more on how the program will build in time. "It will get better," said Davis. "You've got to have confidence, and we're building with it. We've got a lot of people who want to help the program. But it's going to take a while."

The crowd of about 300 fans and players was smiling as they left the gym. Davis had said he was happy to be building something from the ground up. And the fans were happy to support him. The Vandal basketball team will be back next season, and they will be ready to fight for their team again. The program has a long way to go, but there's hope for the future. Tax-deferred solutions from TIAA-CREF can help you reach your retirement goals faster.

When you're saving for retirement, the advice "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" doesn't apply to taxes.

That's because investments that aren't needed by taxes can add up to significantly more money for you—money you can use to supplement your pension and Social Security.

Let our consultants show you all the advantages of tax deferral, or call us for a free tax-saving calculation.

Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRA), PII and other tax-saving solutions—along with TIAA-CREF's low expenses and solid history of performance—can help you invest your tax-savings so that you can reach your retirement goals faster in the years to come.

*Under certain tax laws, withdrawals prior to age 59½ may be subject to taxes, and a 10% additional tax.

In this hypothetical example, inning wise $10,000 every 6 months in a non-deferred account in a 401K will likely be taxed three times after 30 years. In the same time period, a tax-deferred investment will likely produce more than a tax-savings retirement program because you deposited part of your income into a TIAA-CREF account, and did not pay taxes on your contributions.

UI offers vast resources for making the most of college experience

Greetings prospective Vandal! On behalf of the Associated Students, University of Idaho, I would like to welcome you to Vandal Friday.

This is a very exciting time of year for the university as we prepare for yet another class of incoming students to attribute to the richness and diversity of this fine institution.

I encourage you to take advantage of every resource of information while visiting the UI campus, because nothing is more important than selecting the right college for your educational experience.

The University of Idaho has much to offer to every individual, whether it be in academics, leadership, sports, recreation, or entertainment.

But the one thing the University prides itself on is the residential campus atmosphere. Currently, over 90 percent of freshmen live in one of our 23 residence halls, 17 fraternities, or 8 sororities.

Living on campus opens up many doors for meeting people, getting involved in various campus activities, and provides convenience for getting to class and utilizing our study facilities.

Also be sure to inquire about upcoming attractions at the University of Idaho, such as the new Student Recreation Center currently under construction. UI is continuously moving ahead and expanding in order to provide quality education as well as quality experience and living.

At the same time, the University of Idaho is recognized for providing professional degrees while keeping the costs of higher education affordable to its students.

So, I welcome you to what I consider the greatest institution in the State, and I look forward to seeing your faces across campus in the fall.

Good luck, and have a great weekend here at UI.

Sincerely,

Leah Clark-Thomas
President, Associated Students University of Idaho

Finding your home sweet home

by Jennifer Markoff

Home sweet home. Even current students wonder whether or not there could be something better for incoming students, as well. I would like to tell you that there are many options when it comes to the type of housing the University of Idaho offers—off-campus, residence halls (dorms) and Greek houses, each with very different kinds of home sweet home for students.

Off-Campus Housing

This is the most diverse option for students—choosing to live off campus could mean you will be hanging your coat in 15 different places. There are several throughout the community and some very close to campus, and others further away. Off-campus housing is popular among older students because of the independence, pet rules, and distance. There are fewer rules, and no resident assistants or floor brothers or sisters to complain about living choices (inside view, dirty dishes, piles of laundry). The general cost of living is lower, and the opportunity to live with the student type you choose. Rent in off-campus establishments varies, depending on the number of occupants and what type of place it is, but it generally ranges around $200 a month. Some establishments pay water and garbage services, and some even pay utilities. For the greatest number of living options such as food, transportation and location—off-campus housing is the option for you. To find an off-campus rental, look up the ADAU housing list on the internet at http://www.ada.uidaho.edu/housing.

On-Campus Housing

Residence halls provide a car-free place to live. No cleaning, no making and not taking food in the dorm furniture or roommates. There are numerous hall rules, so there is no need for a curf, alcohol and in some cases no pets. Some residence halls provide a type of suite that is more expensive than living off campus, around $2,000 or more a year with a meal plan, but the halls are often more convenient and there is less to worry about. For more information about residence halls, call 885-6177.

Great Housing

If students are looking for a close-knit home away from home, Greek housing is the place to live. Each house has a unique atmosphere, and provides all the support and friendship that college students need.

Dorm Life

Yo Ho Yo Ho it's the dorm life for me and I wouldn't have it any other way

Community. Where you are going to live is an important decision. There are not many places where you do not need to know anyone you meet. It is important to make many friends and that is one of the best aspects of living in the dorms. You meet all kinds of people, and there is always something to do.

A community develops in the dorms that will help you make it through the first few years. People tend to get along very well. People who live there are friendly, as are the people who work there.

There are also study rooms, which are not as noisy as the main ones as well as studying. I like the rooms downstairs in Wollam, which is open all night. There are also study rooms open all night. You can also find people who are awake all hours of the night downstairs. If you have any trouble with a particular class, the RA try to get you tutors to help you with your class work, and each hall has a RA that you can create study groups for testing.

Residence halls usually reward their residents when they get good grades and don't skip classes. If you live in the other residence halls, there is the "Lipper program." In this program you get a letter when you aren't missing class.

It creates a positive learning atmosphere in the dorms, which is helpful, especially during your freshman year in college.

These aspects of dorm life are similar to the Greek housing system, which also rewards good grades and focuses on the person. You are always rewarded for being involved, whereas in the Greek living groups it is the person who is the proximity. You are close in virtually everything, with a dorm being less than 10 minutes to get to all of your classes.

You do not have to worry about finding a parking spot every morning, and if you wake up 30 minutes before your class starts, you might still make it on time if you hurry. It is also easy to get to class. There are a lot of good activities that are going on, especially compared to others.

Visiting friends in the dorms is really easy. You do not even have to leave the building. And if your friend is gone they probably have a whole bunch of friends here with you the next day.

It is fun to come back from classes and find post cards from your on-line bookstores. Overall, the dorms are a good place to meet people. Everybody is new, and it is easy to open up and find a sense of community in the dorms.

The RA also help you meet people who: share your anger about other halls so. have someone to study with or to go to class with. Full of campus. In the beginning, college can be a scary place, but the dorms make that experience more enjoyable and less frightening.

Off-Campus Life

Greek Greeks offer a home away from home

Everyone's reasons for participating in Greek community vary. Some have family members in college and they see the advantages of being involved, whereas in the Greek living groups it is the person who is the proximity. You are close in virtually everything, with a dorm being less than 10 minutes to get to all of your classes.

Off-Campus Life

Independence: The multi-room, double-sink game

I don't have a boyfriend, I don't have a car, I live in a dorm, and how do I like it? It's sort of like living in a big house with people you don't like. I just come back from the university and see the people, and there are a lot of good activities that are going on, especially compared to others.

UI projects expanding opportunities for education after high school

Dear Prospective Students and Parents:

Welcome to the University of Idaho's Moscow campus! Our community is pleased to have you here and will work to make sure your visit is a pleasant one. Vandal Friday has become one of our premier events; it gives us an opportunity to display one of the truly outstanding institutions in the Northwest.

One thing you will notice as you tour campus is the number of construction projects currently under way. Let me say a formal "barden our dust," and give you some background on the exciting projects under way.

Thanks to partnerships with the state and federal government and the private sector, the Ag Biotechnology Laboratory Building for the College of Agriculture nears completion. A similar partnership has allowed the university to complete renovation of the engineering complex.

Another very visible sign of progress was completion last year of the Idaho Commons Building, where many Vandal Friday activities take place. The university received state funding for a total renovation of the current University Classroom Center — directly adjacent to the Commons — into the Teaching and Learning Center. Construction is under way on the JA Albertson Building for the College of Business and Economics, a facility totally funded by private donors. These projects, along with the construction of the new Student Recreation Center and the expansion of the East end of the ASUI-Kibbie Activity Center, represent more construction and growth than at any other time in our 111-year history.

Bottom-line, though, these projects also represent concrete (pun intended) improvements in the education we are able to offer to sons and daughters of Idaho, our students. The very first goal of our institutional Strategic Plan is to become a residential campus of choice in the West. Facilities and physical beauty of the campus play a large part, especially in terms of fostering a learning environment that extends well beyond the traditional classroom.

Again, welcome to campus. I hope you and your family members enjoy your time here this weekend. The administration, faculty and staff are more than happy to answer any questions you might have.

Sincerely,
Bob Hoover, President

Kappa Delta hosts 17th Annual Shamrock Project

The Phi Delta Chapter of Kappa Delta is proud to host the 17th Annual Shamrock Project. This project is dedicated to the prevention of child abuse. Latah County's My Safe Children & Families Project has been selected as the local beneficiary of a Shamrock Day fund-raising effort in Moscow, Idaho, to be held March 31, through April 2.

Collegiate and alumni members of Kappa Delta will solicit donations and hold a spring project involving a core tournament and a Mr. Kappa Delta Pageant. The core tournament will run all day Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m. at Guy Wicks Field. The Mr. Kappa Delta Pageant begins at 7 p.m. Saturday at UI's War Memorial Gymnasium. The Mr. Pageant is a spring show involving male students from UI's Greek fraternity chapters. The prize will be awarded throughout the evening.

Kappa Delta is looking forward to hosting the annual Shamrock Project. The chapter thanks the community for its continued support of this awareness-raising event. For more information contact Melissa Frey or Melissa Carper, 882-4610.

A sport club is a group of students, faculty and staff organized voluntarily for the purpose of enhancing their common interest in a sport. Participation in sport clubs is meant to be a learning experience and members through their involvement in fund-raising, public relations, scheduling, budgets and competition are developed as well as the development of skills in their particular sport.

The sport club program is designed to serve individual interests in different sports. Students have the opportunity to engage in an in-depth sports experience that is not otherwise available through other extracurricular programs. Clubs participate in interscholastic competitions and conduct practices, exhibitions, clinics and special tournament play. The sport club program is unique because students not only get to play sports at a collegiate level, but they also manage the administrative and organizational aspects of their particular sport. Things like travel arrangements, scheduling, budgets, fund-raising and maintaining public relations are all part of running a club. Many students, frat members, faculty, staff and alumni are also popular.

The Administration is one of the most distinctive buildings located on the University of Idaho's campus. In the springtime, it is especially beautiful because of the decorative flowers that grow out side its landscapes.

Novelist Antonya Nelson to visit UI April 9-13

Novelist and short story writer Antonya Nelson, named by New York magazine as one of "The Best Writers for the Twenty-First Century," will visit the University of Idaho the week of April 9-13, as part of the Creative Writing Program's "Distinguished Visiting Writers Series."

She will give a public reading of her work on April 11, at 7:30 p.m., in the UI College of Law Courtyard. During her week in residence, Nelson will teach an intensive workshop in fiction writing. Nelson is the author of three collections of short stories and three novels. Her most recent novel, "Living in the Internet," has been published in the New York Times, the Washington Post, Real World and the Village Voice. Nelson was named "an extraordinary achievement, blending a lyrical reminiscent of Virginia Woolf with a biting wit" by her own work. Subsequent previous novels include "Nobody's Girl" and "Talking in Bed." Her books of short stories are "The Replacers," which won the Flannery O'Connor Award for Short Fiction; "In the Land of Men," and "Finally carnivorous."

Her stories have appeared in The New Yorker and Redbook as well as in a host of literary journals and the G. Heyer Awards anthology.

Nelson teaches in the MFA program at New Mexico State University as well as in the low-residency MFA programs at Warren Wilson College. The reading is sponsored by the UI Creative Writing Program and the Department of English. It is free and open to the public.
