Task force takes on campus safety

Tim Helmk
News Editor

A new University of Idaho committee is working to achieve one goal set by ASUI Senators on a recent retreat. The ASUI Safety Task Force has been working all semester to establish a list of goals. Laura West, ASUI Senator, said the committee has reached the point where the goals are set and now they need to be evaluated. These evaluations will determine how to implement procedures to ensure safety on the UI campus.

The task force is made up of university faculty, staff, ASUI Senators and students. West said there is a need for more students to get involved in the task force work.

"Input from the students is what is important. They are the only ones who can tell us if ideas are workable or not," said West.

The task force has developed a plan of action which involves targeting the walkways with most night traffic, defining target areas on a map and maximizing lighting in these target areas. West said in order to determine the target areas the task force will need to survey students. This process could be done through night classes, living groups and high-use buildings. High-use buildings are those which are used by students at night such as the Student Union Building and the library.

After these target areas are found, West said they will be plotted on a map. This will allow the task force to visually see which areas of campus need work on safety and lighting rather than only looking at survey results.

West said after this stage, it moves onto the actual implementation of change in safety and lighting. The task force will then work to maximize the lighting in the determined target areas.

In these areas, the task force will map out lighting problems such as dysfunctional lights, burned out bulbs, blinking lights and dim bulbs. They will also map out dense brush and trees in these target areas. This work will be done by taking photographs of the trouble areas and walking through the areas with university administrators.

The task force will then be able to work with the university to fix these problem areas. West said it will be at this stage the task force will work with university officials to see that the problems are addressed.

West said all of the ASUI Senators are involved in seeing the task force work to the end. "Everyone on the Senate is getting themselves involved in the work as we realize what needs to be done and why," said West.

Other goals of the safety committee are to implement a buddy system for residence halls, required safety lights, improved security for tailgate areas, a new form for reporting sexual assault and a new security officer for the National Guard Building.

West said the group would also like to see more support for the survivors of incidents on campus caused through problem areas on campus. She said the task force is also wants to implement a safety beeper program for women’s living groups.

The long term goals of the task force are to provide more lighting on target areas; implement a workable campus escort service; make rape easier to report; implement new education programs to living groups on date rape and violence; support survivors and working on a possible shuttle service through and from campus.

According to national statistics provided by West, first year college women are the most vulnerable to sexual assault. This occurs because it is the first time most people are on their own.

West said with the new alcohol policies in effect on the UI campus, she sees alcohol as a link to other problems on campus. "I think there is a tie between the problems with alcohol and the number of sexual assaults on this campus and we should see them drop off with the new policies being put in effect," said West.

West said the task force would like to get a solid start this spring so it can finish over the summer. The task force meets every Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in the SUB. West said everyone meets in the Senate offices first and then go to whatever room they have to hold the meeting. West added the task force is looking for more students to help with the decision-making process involved.

West said even if someone just wants to have some input in the decisions with no commitment that is all right. She encourages people to get involved anyway they can.

Anyone with questions about the Safety Task Force can call West or Senator Tom Sheffield at the ASUI Senate Office at 885-6331.

Safety Task Force List of Goals:

• Maximize lighting
• Repair lighting sources
• Trim back trees and shrubs
• Brother/sister living group escorts
• Implement new education programs
• Provide support for crime survivors
• Beepers for women’s living groups
• More lighting in high-use areas
• Make rape easier to report to police
• Possible shuttle system
• Define problem areas on campus
• Work with university administration to solve safety concerns

Law clinic aids students

Jennifer Bremley

The University of Idaho Legal Aid Clinic provides law students with practice in the courtroom and gives service to the surrounding communities.

Clinic director Kenneth Gallant said the clinic does not handle bankruptcy law, divorce, taxes or murder cases. In divorce cases the exception is child custody cases.

The clinic’s main focus is general legal aid to people “who might otherwise not have access to affordable legal help,” said Gallant.

The clinic receives many cases that have been handed down from the 9th Circuit of the United States Court. In handling these appeals, the clinic has tried hundreds of cases.

Gallant said the clinic does not charge for their services. Unfortunately, he said, “If there are filing fees they have to pay witnesses” then the client must cover those costs.

Gallant has been the director for five years. His is in charge of about 20 students and said his job is to supervise law students who represent clients.

“I am ultimately responsible for the work they do. If they make a mistake I am the one who is responsible.”

Gallant is also the administrative head of the Legal Aid Clinic. On top of the 20 students he watches over, Gallant supervises the clerical staff and other lawyers who supervise students.

Law students who want to be a part of the legal aid clinic usually select themselves, said Gallant.

Although in the past they have had too many students apply and have had to “flip a coin” or do interviews, he said. In the future, Gallant felt they would probably continue to conduct interviews.

For further questions about the Legal Aid Clinic it can be found in the basement of the College of Law. Gallant can be contacted at 884-6645.

Prosvt search continues

More than 125 educators from throughout the United States and some foreign countries have applied for the University of Idaho’s provost position.

David Lineback, UI agriculture dean and chair of the provost search committee, said the committee has begun screening application materials of all candidates.

“The is about as high a quality pool of applicants as you could hope to ask for,” Lineback said. “I am greatly impressed with the quality of these candidates.”

The UI has worked with the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges, a non-profit organization based in Washington, D.C., to solicit applications for the position, which is being vacated by the retirement of Provost Robert B. Oel. It is the first time a provost search has been participated in a UI search.

Lineback said the search committee and representatives of AGB will narrow the field of applicants down to a dozen or so before holding thorough reviews of these candidates. The committee will begin to narrow its field of candidates to visit the campus beginning in April or May. He estimated the process should be completed and a new provost hired by next summer.

Provost Bell is retiring this October.

Students, alumni to ski together at Brundage

Jamie Emmick

Contributing Writer

University of Idaho students and alumni will hit the ski slopes together this week at Brundage Mountain.

The Student Alumni relations board will help with the UI Alumni Association Ski Week March 6-8 in McCall, Idaho.

“You can ski, and according to UI Ski trip committee chair Gina Brunneriches.”

Alumni Association program advisor Tami Can, said, “It’s a great way for students to meet some of the alumni and to get an idea of what it is like to be a UI alumnus.”

Gallant is the interim UI advisor

“The Ski Week is in conjunction with the McCall Silver and Great Celebration.”

Cann said the Ski Week is held at Brundage Mountain and Silver Mountain on alternating years.

Cann said 56th members are seeking to-and alumini and students. Cann said 56th members are seeking to-and alumini and students.

The Alumni Association Executive Committee meeting is scheduled for Saturday.

Businesses said students will pay reduced ticket rates Thursday through Sunday. UI alumni will pay a group rate, she said.

Cann said interested students can contact Casey at the Alumni Office at 885-6154.

Now required to make calls in-state

Alissa Beier

Staff Writer

Due to Idaho’s rapid population growth and demand for new telephone numbers, residents are now required to dial “1” or “0” plus “208” for all long-distance calls.

The new dialing changes went into effect at 12:01 a.m. on Feb. 28 throughout the entire state.

The new changes were designed for all long-distance calls only, and will not affect an existing outside the “208” area code.

It is now necessary to include the area code when using a calling card, person to person, collect calls and calls to information outside the calling area.

However, this does not mean long distance rates and emergency 911 rates will increase.

The dialing could be effective because new area codes will also be evolving and become interchangeable within the state.

In the next three years, these new number combinations will be available for use throughout the country.

Beginning October 15, 1993, a permisive period started allowing residential and business customers to reprogram their phone systems to include the 208 area code.

During this permisive period, calls were still able to go through.

As of February 28, a recording will be installed instructing callers to redial with the 208 area code.

Local residents may be assisted with these calls by dialing information at 1-555-1212.

Gilbert interns in D.C. office for Senator Craig

J. Richard Rock
Staff Writer

As Congress debates and prepares to vote on the Balanced Budget Amendment, one University of Idaho student is playing a role in helping make sure it passes.

Bill Gilbert, a sophomore majoring in finance and a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, is not taking classes this semester in order to intern in United States Senator Larry Craig's Washington, D.C., office.

Gilbert, who is also a past ASUI Senator and member of the School of Business' Davis Investment Group, started working in Craig’s office Jan. 3.

“I love it,” said Gilbert last Wednesday. "It’s been the most incredible experience I have had by far. It has long hours and little pay, but it is so invigorating that it is easy to put in the time.”

Gilbert’s day normally consists of attending committee meetings to take notes for the Senators, answering constituent mail and calling and collating information on topics being discussed.

“I run the gamut of activity between doing small administrative tasks to briefing Senator Craig,” said Gilbert.

“This is not a normal internship,” said Gilbert, "Senator Craig said his staff do not treat us as interns. We are treated more like staff and given staff level responsibilities.”

Gilbert’s primary concern right now is to make sure the Balanced Budget Amendment passes the Senate. He has been working with other staffs to gather co-sponsors to help pass the legislation.

“There have been several 2 a.m. nights around here on this issue alone,” explained the Boise native.

As if to emphasize the amount of work being put into the effort the interview was interrupted once while Gilbert attended to a “Dear colleague” issue — this is one of the most common forms of direct communication among Senators and members of the House of Representatives.

The mood in Washington, D.C., is almost seven right now as the BBA, co-sponsored by Senators Larry Craig (R-Idaho) and Paul Simon (D-Ill.), comes closer to a vote. According to Gilbert, the bill which would force the federal government to balance the budget, except in times of emergency, is within three votes of the 67 needed to pass the measure in the Senate.

“It’s going to be close. Neither side has the votes to claim victory right now,” commented Gilbert.

Gilbert, and several other interns in the office, were hired from a pool of applicants for the position which runs until May 22.

Gilbert shares a town house with four other men, one of which is also a student at the UI, the others just graduated from the UI.

“Vit has been an experience which will benefit me for the rest of my life,” said Gilbert. “I would recommend to all students, regardless of their major, that they get serious thought to an internship. You learn more in a few days than you do in a month in the classroom.”

Gilbert served on several ASUI boards prior to taking the internship in Washington, D.C. Most recently he was served on the ASUI Production Board.

Quorums, vacancies on ASUI board

ASUI President John Marble informed the Senate last Wednesday that all the boards now have members enough for a quorum, but there are still vacancies.

Boards requiring additional members include the Union Board, the Activities Board and the Communications Board. Students interested in applying for these positions may do so in the ASUI office.

Friday vote on bill in legislature likely

Pre-payment of fees legislation, slowly making its way through the legislature, is expected to be voted on in the Senate Education committee March 4. According to ASUI President John Marble, it would mean the bill will be up for discussion on the floor of the Senate March 7. Several ASUI officials, who have strongly endorsed the measure throughout this legislative session, plan to travel to Boise next week to lobby for the legislation. “The vote will be close. Our presence could have a considerable effect,” said Marble.

Two to vote on Faculty Council alcohol policy

When the Faculty Council discusses a proposed change in the university's alcohol policy and rules governing where first year students can live later today, student Faculty Council member Megan Russell will be joined by ASUI President John Marble as a voting member. Marble told the Senator that he has spoken with several Faculty Council members about the controversial proposal and is certain there will be a great deal of discussion. The proposal is similar to some proposals considered and rejected by the State Board of Education last fall.

Decision of PR, council seats to be finalized

Deadlines passed for both the restructured Public Relations Coordinator position and the vacant seat for the student member of the Faculty Council Friday. Marble hopes to have a decision made on the final appointment by tomorrow.

Marble to submit fiscal year 1995 budget

ASUI President John Marble plans to submit his budget for fiscal year 1995 to the ASUI Finance Committee in the next week. According to Marble, the budget is "real close to being balanced." Balancing the ASUI budget was one of the issues that Marble successfully ran on last fall. The budget, which was $36,000 in the run last year, became even more difficult to balance when it was learned the university intended to begin charging the student government for accounting services. The new charge combined with state mandated salary increases resulted in a deficit. Marble has introduced several cost-saving measures and is expected to see an increase in ASUI fees to eliminate the red.

Senate displeased with Gov. Andrus' budget

The ASUI Senate unanimously passed a resolution last week deriding the governor's higher education budget submitted to the Idaho House of Representatives earlier last month.

Student leaders around the state are concerned about Andrus' decision to include nearly $3.1 million in student fees in calculating the increase in appropriations. The resolution, written by ASUI Senator Steve Wilson and co-sponsored by all but one ASUI official, points to the inappropriateness of including student fees in the budget before students, administrators and the State Board of Education had a chance to discuss fees.

ASUI President John Marble commented, "The governor is using student fees to make it look as though he has appropriated more to higher education than he actually has.

Senate reception to honor campus leaders

The ASUI Senate will be having a reception for campus leaders in lieu of a regularly scheduled meeting tomorrow. No formal business will be conducted.

Radio tower will stay on Paradise Ridge

Tim Helinake
News Editor

University of Idaho students who are fans of country music can rest easy now that their local radio station can still broadcast.

KZZL-FM, out of Colfax, Wash., was approved to receive a conditional use permit from the Latah County Planning and Zoning Commission last Wednesday. The permit allows them to use their radio tower positioned on top of Paradise Ridge southeast of Moscow.

Opponents to the tower permit vowed they will appeal the commission’s decision to grant the permit.

The commission spent another 3-1/2 one half hour last week going through Latah County’s comprehensive plan and the four criteria for granting the permit prior to voting to approve it, 7-3.

Eighteen people attended the meeting to watch the commission come to the conclusion they reached. Radio station owner Bob Hauser and opponent Mary Butters were two of those in attendance. The commission heard testimony from five hours Feb. 9 hearing to work through to document for their decision.

Butters, a resident of Paradise Ridge, successfully shut down Hauser’s first permit in a two-year legal struggle that led clear to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Charles Graham, commission member, argued to have a condition placed on the permit that the tower antenna would not emit more than 15,000 watts as it does now. The extra electromagnetic radiation could increase risk to residents’ safety and health, Graham stated.

“There is no testimony that increasing the wattage 6-1/2 times would benefit anyone in this county,” Graham said. “The benefits to this county are far fewer than the economic benefits to the applicant.”

Other members of the commission pointed out testimony of engineer Bill Gotti who said a new antenna would be placed higher on the tower and send the signal farther.

That would actually reduce nearby residents’ exposure to electromagnetic radiation said Gotti at the Feb. meeting.

Graham voted against granting the permit along with commission members Lorence Shearer and Eric Kurtz. All were not convinced the tower posed no health risk to residents.

Other members pointed to the testimony of a professor from Washington State University who conducted a study on the electromagnetic radiation on the ridge. He found the tower’s emissions to decrease at 100,000 times below federal safety standards.

“The is no far below standards, that even taking it to 100,000 watts is not going to increase significantly,” said Bob Hasoldt, commission member.

Commission member Paul Kimmd said it is quite reasonable for all radio towers to be located in one area such as Paradise Ridge.

There are three other towers on the ridge now besides the KZZL tower.

After commission members decided KZZL met all four criteria for the permit application, they decided they also could prove the tower provides an essential service. They pointed out a letter from Whitman School District officials which stated that KZZL is the only station available in some areas of their district. KZZL is also the only radio station in Latah County with a backup generator in case of a power outage.

The commission placed four conditions on Hauser prior to approving the permit:

• The tower is subject to any present or future state, federal or local regulations concerning electromagnetic radiation emissions.
• Hauser must help any resident who can prove the station’s transmission interferes with his or her telephone, radio or television.
• Hauser must install a monitor to make sure the tower’s light stays on at all times.
• If natural grasses are not already growing under and near the tower, Hauser must plant them.

The grant is for two exhibits due in that Palouse early in 1995.

WSU’s Museum of Art will host “Our Land/OurSelves: American Indian Contemporary Artists.”

“The Joe Felderden Collection of African and African American Art” will be shown at the UI Gallery located in downtown Moscow.

The two exhibitions will feature a total of 43 African American artists. One artist will be involved in a week-long residency at the participating universities and also will visit local public schools.

The 1903 multicultural grants, said MetLife Foundation President Sibyl Jacobson, “are the creative activities of African-American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American culture to a larger American public.”

“The exhibitions and other funded projects express the rich diversity of our culture to promote a better understanding among all,” said Sibyl.

Established in 1976, the MetLife Foundation has contributed nearly $27 million to support health, education, civic and cultural activities throughout America.

Money won’t stop school violence

It helps the average Joe land a job that pays more than minimum wage.
It boosts people’s self-esteem. As it is furthered, it enlightens and adds to the general public knowledge.

But, it is in trouble and fighting a losing battle. Education is a valued commodity in this country and somehow the idea of what is wrong with education in America has been confused with what is wrong with America. At the beginning of this year, Walter Annenberg donated $500 million to public schools and challenged corporations, individuals and foundations to match these funds. He feels the violence in public schools is detestable and if it persists it will destroy our educational system. He is correct, it will destroy the educational system if allowed to continue, but pouring money into the school system isn’t going to stop the violence.

Violence isn’t caused by the educational system, it is a product of a lack of education. The lack of learning on the part of America’s youth won’t be solved with money, it will only be solved by making an education more valuable to them than the outcome of their violence.

The only way to end the violence in America is to bring everyone to the same level. The only answer is to treat every individual equally. Kids are being killed by other kids because one has a pair of Air Jordan court shoes and the other wants them.

They are killing one another because they want the money in the other kid’s pocket. They are killing one another because they are unhappy.

The homes of America must feel a need for a better educational system before the schools of America will be improved. Annenberg has the right idea but alone, he can’t change the world.

One reason for the gift was to help develop and establish an electronic library. When brought on-line, this will break down the imbalance between wealthy and poor school districts, it will bring uniformity to many educational aids available to all students.

This is a wonderful idea and very probable with the technology available today, but it won’t solve the problem of violence.

The only way to solve violence in schools and among our youth is to make everyone in America equal. Greed, unhappiness, addiction, social class can all lead to violence. They don’t start in the schools, rather they develop and are taught in the home.

Standardized testing big joke

I remember the good old days when there was just one high school diploma meant dooming me to failure. Oh sure, I could get a job at the local plastic factory. Nine o’clock and make enough to pay maybe half the rent. But I was told the ticket to hopping prestige and a 24-cent salary meant going off to college.
So I played it by the rules — for the most part. I stayed out of trouble, made sure to pass my high school algebra class when it was a re-take. By the time I was ready to graduate, my future didn’t require UV-activated sun-glasses, but it also didn’t require a magnifying glass.
Then I heard something about a test called the ACT, which was supposed to pin point the amount of smarts jumping around in my head. Talking to my friends about it, you’d think we were talking about the Constellation. Or, closer to home, the DJ playing police.
I didn’t understand what all the fuss was about. It was just a stupid test. I was a relatively smart guy. After all, I watched 60 Minutes almost every week.
But my friends spoke of it as if it were a horrific monster hiding under their bed, which could only be unmasked with a single shared needle. Two number two pencils. They bought books to study from. They held group therapy sessions.

They were even so ludicrous as to take a class at the mall. What a bunch of bongheads, I thought. Losers.

North of these probably were Republicans.
I prepared for the test in my own way. While others facing the same test hadn’t slept in days fearing for their college lives, I rolled out of a deep sleep, found a single pencil with the lead broken and minus eraser, and drove grug- gily to the test center. Wishing I’d smoked some dope on the way just to determinate how utterly unimportant filling in these rows was to me.

Well, needless to say, I didn’t exactly ace the test. I wasn’t real- ly ugly, but I know better than to apply to Harvard so I didn’t really care. Both Kent State University and this place told me to come on down, the latter of which advised me to take a college course on going to college. Thinking the class would be as dumb as the concept, I refused.

For my lack of backwoods logic proved correct in an off- handed fashion. In the four years since I’ve been here, I haven’t met anyone who had a lower score on their ACT, a 19 to be exact. Most of the people bad scores in the low twenties. Now, if the ACT does what it is supposed to do, my likelihood of college survival was iff, especially when combined with my admittedly mediocre GPA. In other words, I probably wasn’t as smart as I thought.

But I’m still here. When I gradu- ate, I should have a CPA just north of 3.0, not that that makes me any smarter than if I had a 2.5 or something. I’ve made it through all four years. I haven’t taken a year off because of grades. I haven’t been placed on academic probation. And unless theDean’s office sees something I missed.

Great new environmentalist tactics better than chains, axles

He walked into the Argonaut newsroom a book in the size of a child’s hand. I had him once before, briefly, and have printed several of his letters to the editor.
His first letter contested my stand against Earth First! environmental terrorism tactics in the Coves/Coastal area and his others have taken similar stances on forest issues. I remember his second points without conflicting with mine.
He pronounced himself as Wade Graham, a member of INWARD, and by the look on his face I’m thinking of publishing.
He brought out this manuscript book, CLEARING: The Tragedy of Industrial Forestry, and started exclaiming that was representing INWARD and wanted to sit down with me, show me some heart, the trees were being deforested and he must get his spiel in hopes of a positive editorial. I looked at the book. We made an appointment.
I took the book home, skeptical of where it had come from, and devoured by the sheer size. One of 12,000, the book, published by Sierra Club Books/Earth Island Press, was supposed to be hand-delivered, with a human-to-human spiral included, to policy-makers and media.
Reflecting on this new tactic, this probably was more effective than banging yourself up to the waist in the middle of a road, shouting and displaying to passers’ attention, but unfortunately not much information is passed in the process. This new method gets people to think, instead of raising their hackles or simply letting people worry about it for them. Wary of blasted material, Dick and I listened. He had a lot to say.
The book contains beautiful and stunning visions of Native American clearcuts — wild land destroyed by the ravages of industrial logging. Among the pages are a few poems scattered here and there, like small saplings struggling to grow. Factual essays abound with information, though unfortunately appealing to the heart, rather than the intellectual mind that tries to drive this society of technology.

An outline of North America gets an impressively big box on the map where the photo of each clearcut took place, with more dots following each page and picture. By the end of the book, the con- gestion of trees seems designed to elicit a subtle impression of a black mass of destruction. The panoramic photos seem chosen for their size and ugliness, and one “before and after” shot isn’t exactly what it appears to be. The “before” shot is green, grey, felt-overlooked, dis- carded or shot-down in the feeding frenzies of environmental naifocism and wimpy owls.
Anyone for who has spent any time in the woods knows we are not heading toward a sus- tainable forestry. The ease at which we cut down trees comes no where near the effort it takes to grow them again. Once we replant, it is often with only one species, that can’t be native to the area and is selected only for its rapid growth rate. Our

Thanks for Winter Week

On behalf of the Winter Week Committee, we would like to thank everyone who participated in the First Annual University of Idaho Winter Week! It was a very successful event, which succeeded in bringing the different living groups together to enjoy each other’s company while participating in fun and exciting events. We would also like to recognize the following area businesses who donated their goods and services to the events. The Porth, Third Dimension, Camila’s Theater, Pizza Hut, Wal-Mart, Domino’s Pizza, Zabar’s Delicatessen, Gambino’s, J.C. Penny’s, Subway, KTFN, Aktie Bank, and Video, Bausager’s, Sticker Station and the Certi Farm.

Thank you everyone who helped with Winter Week. 1994. We look forward to continuing these exciting events next year and hope you will join us next year.

Drinking not UI’s mistake

When I read the cover of the Spokane Review Feb. 10, I could not believe my eyes. It is like the start of a bad joke. This society is totally crazy when...

Unfortunately, I am one of the people who are aware of these dangers and prevent this. I will put the university administrators in the role of “Big Brother” and I will not be expected to keep students, people who are legal, and morally con- sidered to be adults, from making a decision. How could this happen? How can any university agree to hear this case? Hopefully, the judge will not and will let UI and student’s money by allowing this case to proceed. I hope that UI will not give a dollar to settle this case. Regent’s accident was unfortunate, but the fact that alcohol was involved would not be rewarded. She is paying the price of this mistake.

The tremendous misunderstanding between people can never be corrected as long as we consider these stereotypes racist, causing the lack of communication needed. “Right”, everyone walked around campus with bags on their heads, leaving no identifying marks, maybe people could begin learning from each other instead of placing labels on each other. O.K., so that is a little unrealistic...

There is a huge existence between people in the residence halls, Greeks, off-campus students and their professors, and where did these stereotypes originate?

On my way home one week, I rode with two women from the residence halls. One I have known since kindergarten, the other I had just met. We had a great time — it’s amazing, all college students listen to the same music, involve themselves in typically the same activities, the same classes and, you know that we can even speak the same language. It was one of those very rare occasions where it was just three women sitting in a car comparing our experiences.

On the flip side, I have also been discriminated against by students, not because of where I choose to live. Faculty imposed discrimination can never be corrected as long as we consider these stereotypes racist, causing the lack of communication needed. “Right”, everyone walked around campus with bags on their heads, leaving no identifying marks, maybe people could begin learning from each other instead of placing labels on each other. O.K., so that is a little unrealistic...

I live in a brick house. I have lived there for over two years and plan to stay another three semesters. Big deal. Actually, it is a big deal. The house is just a structure, not an extension of myself or any other person. But, the individual people inside these structures matter.

However, even they are just that, individuals. It’s the judgment people make mistakes on the basis of where someone lives.

I am not alone. People through-out Moscow also live in houses, buildings and apartment complexes.

Thousands of students on and off campus, many of whom claim to have a biased bone in their body, are limiting their college education on the basis of where fellow students live. Some facul- ty members are guilty of this, too. For example, people who live in residence halls or Greek houses often take pride in slights and other paraphernalia which direct them on where they live. While displaying their pride, these students are often unfairly being dis- criminated again on the basis of a street address. Greeks are often categorized as “beer-drinking sociopaths” who can’t live outside the group. People who live in residence halls are called “dormie, non-joining loners.”

And off-campus residents, we don’t care about anything to the people with whom they practice. We are not in any other zip code. How are these stereotypes to be alleviated?

I was considered insignificant by the UI’s administration but I’ve been proven wrong.

Perhaps we can make sense of this case by making some hypo- thetical assumptions. Say that a 17- year-old freshman has actual inter- ests in her dorm room. If she gets pregnant can she sue because they did not stop her from having sex? Would we even want the university to have that kind of authority? Or, what if a student commits suicide in her dorm room by taking an overdose of Valium? Can the parents of that person use the university for not intervening? Of course not, if Coghlan was this lawsuit, it will not be a ridiculous and dangerous precedent. It will put the university administrators in the role of “Big Brother”...

Ball rolling for TA cause

During the discussion of TA salaries, fees and health benefits for all graduate students, which took place at the last GSA meeting, it appeared that quite a number of delegates seemed to fear that the slightest protest would call down on their heads the wrath of the fateus. Rather than venture so much as a Dickensian "Please, Sir, I want some more," and risk the Dickensian reply "WHAT?!?" these same delegates subjected the lot of us to more than enough tinacious equivocation, choose to constitute a petition as a survey (no mean feat — few surveys begin "Dear Pres. Ziniao, ") for the executive council to present said petition/ survey to the administration and, in the fullest tradition of legislative inaction, ultimately referred the whole matter to committee. The GSA executive committee has since met with Zinero on the subject (sans petition, of course).

I, and probably others as well, though I speak only for myself, found her quite receptive to our case. She agreed that compensation accorded to TAs has not kept pace with increases in the cost of living she agreed something ought to be done and indicated her readiness to meet with us again once we have gathered certain hard data. She further indicated that no petition was necessary to make our case. This came to me as a great relief, considering the Herculean effort that doubtlessly would have been necessary to extract the petition from committee and run it past the blockade of timid Pigtails. It is now a moot point. The petition equivocated forever in committee. The ball is rolling, something might just get done and even the Pigtails stand to benefit.

I'll be wearing a cap and gown come May. I may even make the Dean's List, like I did last semester.

The point is, these standardized tests do not measure one's intelligence. Instead, they do a crappy job of showing students how to sharpen a pencil and worry tremendously about their future. My freshman year I talked to a ton of people who had much higher ACT scores than I did. I haven't heard from half of them since they dropped out and moved home.

Success in college cannot be predicted by a few numbers any better than it can be predicted by looking at one of those future-telling Eight-Ball toys. Rather, going to college and succeeding takes a three for knowledge, a willingness to work hard and most of all, patience, perseverance or the ability to act turns your back on your political science homework too often in order to go to your neighbor's kegger. I don't think I am smarter than people who had a higher ACT score. I just didn't like the thought of being promoted to attitude toward our forests is how much can we take before they collapse, rather than how much can they give us.

While replanting is great, the product can't be called a forest. Tree farms with cleared brush, which look like parks, can't sustain a diversity of wildlife. A forest is a living breathing thing — currently our spray-on fertilizers and herbicides aren't giving us back forests. Along the Mediterranean Sea and Northern Africa, forests once blanketed the land, which is now desert. Those clear-cuts didn't come back.

Attempting to fix the clear-cut dilemma, which most admit is the easiest, through most damaging method, need tree cuts and partial cutting practices have started on some sales. This is where a few trees are left standing in what essentially a clear-cut. It doesn't work.

Since they are sheltered by others, these trees develop shallow roots. Once their neighbors are gone, they are blown downs, solving nothing.

Grunt offered this analogy: A forest is like a car. They are both complex things with uncountable intricate parts that somehow with a twist of wires or changes of glass, produce desired affects like clean speed or rich-broodingness. You can remove parts of a forest or parts of a car and both will still run. You can remove the catalytic converter, an air filter, smash a headlight, blow a tire, remove the thermostat or rip out a single wire. The car will run, but the question is. For how long?

Assistant Manager of a grocery store after 25 years of loyal service. I once thought the ACT was the end of my standardized testing misery. Ah, youth. Since then, I've decided to join the bottom-feeders of the world and go on to law school. This means taking the blasted LSAT, which means more little ovals and boredom. The problem is, this time, I have to take the test seriously and pretend to be smart. So, does anyone know a way to cheat? I promise I won't feel bad.

Children begin poster design for fair

It's a cinch that the poster design for the Moscow Renaissance Fair will be elementary.

The poster design contest, now underway, is open to elementary school children, grades kindergarten through sixth grade. The win-ing poster will be reproduced and displayed statewide as the official 21st annual Moscow Renaissance Fair poster. The win-er will receive a $50 U.S. Savings Bond. Entries must be submitted no later than Mar. 31.

"This is the start of the fair's second 20 years, and we wanted to signify that by celebrating the renewal of springtime and new beginnings. We think the best way to do that was through the eyes of children," said fair President Lisa Cochran-Kane.

Contest participants are asked to submit entries that depict "a child's celebration of spring." Prizes will be given to all participants and the winner for each grade level will have their poster displayed publicly three weeks prior to the fair at the University of Idaho Pichard Art Gallery in downtown Moscow. Entries may be dropped off at the Moscow Chamber of Commerce, the Pullman Chamber of Commerce or mailed to P.O. Box 8848, Moscow, Idaho, 83843.

All entries must be created on white paper, maximum size 12 X 18 inches. The child's name, address, age, school and home phone number must be written on the back of the entry. All entries should have the words "Moscow Renaissance Fair" and "April 30-May 1, 1994" included in the art. Artwork will be kept until the fair and then returned to those who request it at the information booth during the fair.

Free, high-quality entertainment, a children's activity area, a variety of foods offered for sale by non-profit groups and wide selection of hand-crafted wares will all be part of the weekend celebration. For more information about the poster contest or the fair, please call (208) 882-8345.

‘Latah Legacy’

Journal features history of Palouse citizens during WWII

"The Latah County Historical Society has published a history journal featuring the home front during World War II.

Despite rationing, shortages and a global war on two fronts, most Moscow and Latah County residents continued their normal lives
during World War II.

The latest issue of Latah Legacy, tells the story of those years, published by the Latah County Historical Society. According to Mary Reed who researched and wrote the special 56-page issue, "the records and reminiscences of this period indicate that the hard times of the 1920s and the national depression of the 1930s prepared local people for the inconveniences of ration stamps and small supplies of commodities like gasoline.

In fact, the war years were in many ways a good period for all Americans."

"This was a time of full employment in higher paying jobs. Those affected by the war in our area, aside from those who served in the military or those close friends in the war, were farmers who were forced to find laborers to help during harvest time."

Included in the issue are descriptions of how local citizens responded to the series of war bond campaigns, collected scrap metal and paper for the war effort and learned to cope by growing victory gardens, canning and preserving food and remaking old clothing into new garments.

Recently conducted oral interviews make up much of the articles’ historical information. These personal accounts describe the stresses of moving with a military husband and finding housing in a new city and the challenges of women working in factories and running a household under war-time conditions.

The University of Idaho was also affected by the war, bringing about some important changes.

The ratio of women to men increased dramatically, with women outnumbering men three to one. This changed with the establishment of the University of Idaho.
Friday night’s Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival All-Star Concert kicked off on a high, sappy tone performed by the New Voices. “Love Makes the World Go Round,” as they referred to the mood for the night to come. The group continued to wow the audi- ence with an impressive résumé of numbers, vocals, and improvisations and performances. Each piece had something for everyone; from the strutting, punch- 4ed harmonies and jazzy feel to smooth harmonies and bluesy solos surprising the in the auditorium. By the closing number, the group was singing on a psychic level. Joining their harmonies and cuts to perfection, the rhythm and 60’s sound blending the audience into the very last note which quickly drowned in the audience’s roar.

The next group was the Gene Harris Quartet with Gene Harris on piano, Ron Eschbach on guitar, Paul Humphrey on drums and Luter Hughes on bass. Typical of professional jazz, the number’s beauty, the numbers played were decided the moment prior to playing, with much elaboration on the basic theme. Their pieces took our on an emotional trip. With the first tune mov- ing along, the sounds were like words and were read to the end. The second work was a bass solo. Gene Hughes, master of piano, solaced for several minutes then led in the backup for a tune with rhyth- mic flow. With a Dixie jazz flavor, it carried emotions to a pictorial high

Junior Leaguers, Della Reese live up to rep

Charla Hopkins

Contribution Writer

Thursday night’s jazz performance lived up to the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival expectation, including the exceptional performances by Della Reese and her quartet and Junior Leaguers, Adam Platt and Alyssia Wilson. The evening began with musicians; Elvin Jones on drums, Bryan Bromberg on bass, Herb Ellis on guitar, Oliver Jones playing the piano and Lew Soloff on trumpet. They set a relaxed atmosphere with their smooth style allowing the audience to enjoy various solos, including Greg Abate on the saxophone and Paquio D’Rivera playing the clarinet.

Bryan Bromberg was especially impressive, playing the bass as if it were a guitar, while Elvin Jones made the drums sing. As hour and a half into the show, Lionel Hampton began his musical performance, sharing the stage with Junior Leaguers, 12- year-old Platt playing the piano and 10-year-old Watson on the drums.

Their performance included an illuminating version of “Round Midnight,” and a series of “Let’s give it up for the Junior Leaguers,” by Hampton.

The highlight of the evening was Della Reese’s heavy-hearted blues/ jazz vocal accompanied by her quartet: LeRoy Ball on bass, Tom Sila playing the drums, Lanny Hasley on Piano and Tony Drake on guitar. Reese’s grave, yet humorous version of “Look of Love” gave the audience a feel for jazz while allowing them to hear Reese’s vocal capability. She puts heart and soul into each word of the lyrics she sings, with a sincerity that comes across as she is talking to a Good friend.

In between pieces, Reese gave a comical explanation why musicians may seem “faky” and how life on the road is not as glamorous as it may seem, sharing an RV with other band mem- bers and the driver’s dog.

After encouragement from Reese and the crowd, Hampton took part in the last piece of the evening along with Reese and her quartet. Reese sang the last of the vocal with Hampton and left the quartet, accompanied by Hampton, on stage to end the Thursday evening Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival performance.

Breakfast lengthens life

Are you a member of the Breakfast bunch? If not, now's the time to join! Breakfast is the most important meal of the day, no matter what age you are. Children and adults need to "breakfast right" each morning to fuel up for the activities of the day.

During the month of March you will read and hear a lot about breakfast. This is the promotional theme of "National Nutrition Month" sponsored by the American Diabetic Association.

From Idaho to Washington D.C., public-service announcements, newspaper articles and a variety of silk-screened posters will be informing about BREAKFAST. Now why should that be a hot topic in the 90s? And why should that be important on a university campus?

I'll tell you why. Eating breakfast is identified as one of seven lifestyle factors associated with better health and longevity according to Dr. Lester Breton, a physical education professor emeritus at the University of California, Los Angeles.

According to a 1993 Tufts University Diet and Nutrition Letter, studying the same people for more than 30 years in an ongoing research project shows people who follow these habits tend longer and richer lives: avoid excessive drinking, do not smoke, stay lean, sleep seven to eight hours a night and exercise regularly. Don't eat between meals and make breakfast count.

Now that's certainly a great reason but as a young person I don't really think long term about the quality of my life. So what other reason might there be?

Well, you are less apt to have a heart attack if you eat breakfast. According to a study conducted in Canada, breakfast may reduce the risk of a morning heart attack by decreasing the level of clotting blood.

People who skip breakfast have an increased frequency of heart attacks and sudden death during morning hours (J. Science News). Once again, most college students don't bother heart attacks so is there anything else that might catch my attention as to why breakfast is so important?

Yes! There is a strong relationship between an overweight condition and whether you eat breakfast.

The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, conducted a study which shows eating breakfast helps obese women lose weight by decreasing their daily overall intake of dietary fat and reducing the urge to snack.

Even more exciting is people who do eat breakfast have metabolic rates four to five percent below normal, according to Dr. C. Wayne Calloway, M.D. of George Washington University. As a result of this slump, a breakfast "skipper" could expect to gain one pound every seven weeks (about eight pounds a year) — even if he/she's calorie intake remained the same.

When a person gets up in the morning with an empty stomach, blood sugar is at a "fasting" level. Eating breakfast causes the body's furnace to heat up as it burns off the caloric from that first meal.

This "thermic effect of food" increases after each meal throughout the day. Skipping breakfast keeps the furnace cold longer and ultimately burns fewer calories.

Well, hopefully I have finally caught your attention. Talking about weight issues is a whole different story.

With spring and bathing suit season upon us again, it doesn't have to spell panic.

So if you start working on rousing your metabolism with breakfast and 3 to 5 exercise periods a week, you'll be showing off your new body instead of hiding it.

ears. Moving into the second work was a natural transition. With an R & B accent and phenomenal piano abilities, the audience was held captive in an emotional piece of art. Each player accentuated the piece and Brian Binneweg showed his talent with unique riffs and torque's on his back. They were not subtle sounds but had definite direction and appeal.

Guests included Freddie Hubbard and Wallace Roney playing trumpets. One notable piece was an accent trumpeted by Roney with subtle bass background and piano accompaniment — a true classic.

The evening ended with everyone but the vocals on stage being led by Hampton. Although there were nearly a dozen musicians playing, the number was well guided, moving along and provided a pleasant finish to a fantastic evening.

In addition, the United Services Organization and the American Legion Log Cabins in Moscow became the local headquarters for the young recruits and many local young businesses on the weekends. According to Reed, the final year of the war was a focusing time for people to begin concentrating on the future as a time of new prosperity, when almost every American could hope to buy appliances, cars and different products heavily advertised in newspapers and magazines and on the radio.

"This was certainly the beginning of the great age of cars and television," Reed noted. "Americans were making more money than ever before and could hardly wait to buy the products advertised dangled in front of them."
The man is music

Mark McBealrod

Intriguing Writer

There are moments when the ungodly world of perception slides aside to us, becauses hearing and seeing are geniuses and those who write. The conclusion of the Lionel Hampton Festival in the Kibbie Dome on Saturday night was such a moment. What other word could be attributed to a night of jazz, in the presence of the greats that attended? Greats like Count Basie, oh and that I am Tommy Dorsey, oh and that I am leading my own hand in the 50's, and there I am with Alvin Youngblood Hartman, and then I am having a school named after me... and so on, and so on, and so on. And so on.

Last Saturday night was not simply a celebration of jazz, it was a sight of jazz performed by the people who knew it, who helped it, who promoted it, who helped make it what it means.

Indeed, as Wired's Lord Byron read the final blast of Beethoven concert "You and me" is what Lionel Hampton and the New York Big Band brought to the Kibbie Dome, at Kibbie evening.

"I have written a lot of history," said Loosey professor Carl Schonewe, as he presented Lionel with one of his books as a gift, "but you, my friend, you have made history. See what I mean, historical. And let's not forget "Here's to You" written by the Director of the Jazz Festival, Dr. Lynn Skinner, and dedicated to Lionel Hampton himself. Yet another historic moment to add to Lionel's mbrace. Songs are now written about and for him.

You may think that such a state of affairs could go to a man's head, and you'd be right. But remember, we're not talking about any man. We're talking about the man. And if Saturday night was any indication, the man is first and foremost a jazz musician. Please excuse some generalization, but jazz tends toward impen-
Weber climbs to top with win

Saturday night's matchup between the Weber State Wildcats and the Idaho Vandals once again exemplified the inconsistencies of the 1993-94 Big Sky men's basketball season.

Before the contest, both Weber State coach Ron Abegglen and UI coach Joe Cravens thought whoever won the battle of the boards, would win the game. Idaho easily out-rebounded Weber State by a convincing 41-30 margin. Additionally, Idaho's front line outscored Weber State's by 11 points. "Our inside guys played great tonight," said Cravens.

Weber State, however, was on fire from the outside and at the free throw line, beating the Vandals 81-69 before 8,821 fans at the Dee Events Center.

The Wildcats captured the Big Sky regular season title for the first time in 16 years, and a first round by in the Big Sky tournament to be held in Boise, March 10-12.

Abegglen is now 4-0 against Idaho, and this is the sixth consecutive victory over the Vandals. Overall, the series stands in Weber State advantage 50-18.

With 12 minutes and 36 seconds remaining in the game, Weber State's Johnnie Moore hit a shot to establish a 57-48 lead for the Wildcats. For the next 8:30, they were held to one field goal by the Vandals defense. An Orlando Lightfoot reverse lay-up made the score 70-67 edging Idaho closer. Then came the shot that Cravens said, "break our back."

Wildcat guard Robbie Johns on, the hero in the last Weber State-UI game, scooped up a loose ball and sank a three-pointer with just over one minute on the clock. It left too many points to make up in too little time for the Vandals (16-8, 8-4 BSC).

"We were right where we needed to be," added Cravens. "They were a little bit better than us tonight."

Weber State (20-8, 10-3), not known for their three-point shooting ability, connected on 9-of-12 tries in the first half alone.

Their first four baskets of the game were three-pointers — two by Elroy Miller and two by Johnson. Idaho shot 13 percent from three-point range (2-15). Miller and Shonta Jones added 50.7 percent per game, scored 23 to lead Weber State — 17 by Miller, 6 by Shonta Jones.

"It was a season of ups and downs for the Vandals, producing a 38-38 alltime mark. Free-throw shooting, nevertheless, sealed the game for Weber State.

Although they hit only two field goals in the first 12 minutes, the Wildcats also hit an amazing 19-21 foul shots, ending up 24-30.

The Weber State Wildcats weekend road swing of the Northwest ended Saturday night when they took a 46-29 victory from the Idaho Vandals in NCAA Big Sky women's basketball action in Memorial Gym Saturday.

The Wildcats used a tough zone defense to force 22 turnovers and went down the Vandals in the second half.

We Struggled against their zone.

— Laurie Turner
Idaho head coach

"We struggled against their zone," Idaho coach Laurie Turner said. "We did not have a very balanced attack connected to too many possessions where we didn't play very smart."

Any Detertling's five-foot jumper knocked the score of 48 splice with nine minutes, 50 seconds remaining, left in the second period, but the Vandals would not get closer than four the rest of the way.

Weber State won an 11-2 run over the next two minutes to take control of the contest.

Jennifer Chery single-handedly kept the Vandals alive in the first half with 19 points while Idaho lost 1-19, first half, before Idaho was added to the score on the second half. The Vandals posted more than four, on a total of 92-33 lat and 71-21 margin.

Idaho's largest lead was eight points on three different occasions early in the first half, the last time at 18:10 at the 17:21 mark.

The Vandals, who were lost 45 percent to 49 percent in the game, went cold in the second half, managing only nine field goals in the second 20 minutes. Weber State improves to 6-19 with the victory while Idaho drops to 3-20 overall.

Women head to Pocatello, Pavilion

— The Lady Vandals completed their season home over the past weekend and will now finish the regular season on the road in Boise and Pocatello.

On Friday the University of Idaho will head to Idaho State University. The Lady Vandals look to give them their first victory 67-52. Friday's game will be live on KTIV.

On Sunday, Janes will return to the Pavilion of Boise State University to play.

Lightfoot nears BSC scoring record

Orlando Lightfoot nears one of the largest points in his career as he edges in on the ex-Webber State University Wildcat, Big Sky Conferences all-time scoring mark.

Lightfoot entered last week's games against Northern Arizona and Weber State in fifth place needing only 92 points. He had just surpassed Boise State University's Steve Connor — son of University of Idaho assistant coach Bus Connor.

On Thursday Lightfoot scored 34 points when the Vandals defeated the Lumberjacks. Lightfoot had another game-high 30 point game Saturday in Ogden, Utah, when the Vandals were beaten by the Wildcats.

Lightfoot now stands within 28 points and has two games this week to try and beat that mark — the first of which will be against Boise State.

Men to end season in Kibbie Dome

Men's basketball will complete its season at home this weekend with two very heated games.

On Friday night the Vandals will take on their heated rival Boise State University to whom they lost earlier in the season 64-67. On Saturday night the University of Idaho will tip off against Idaho State University.

The two teams matched up mid-season in Pocatello, it was a battle for first place. Idaho won in triple overtime 92-89.

Friday night's game starts at 7:05 p.m. and can be viewed live on the KTV. Saturday night's game will also be live on KTIV, at 6:05 p.m.

Both games are in the Kibbie Dome.

Some would say it could not have come at a better time and place for a track milestone to be set. Tae Hanegan, in the first heat of 200 meters, set a new school record for the event in the McDonald's Invitational Meet on Friday, March 1 at the Idaho Indoor meet of the season, to lead a trio of track record holders. Her time of 25.12 seconds shattered Carys Chown's six-year-old record set in 1994. Hanegan now joins fellow senior Karen McClenney on being the only other members of the women's track team in the school record book for indoor events. In 1990, McClenney set a time of 50.29 in the 250-meter hurdles and was a member of that year's 4x400 relay team, which school record in time of 51.45 seconds.

"It feels pretty good for me," said Hanegan in a telephone interview. "It was great because we all had a good point day."

The idea of placing the new record was not a goal for the mechanical engineering major until the Idaho All-Comers Meet this week earlier. In that meet, she finished 200 meters with a time of 25.42, just three-hundredth of a second shy of Chown's record.

Also, being the first heat of the record became a priority goal of hers.

For all the following week, she trained to get herself into the next 200-meter heat and while it took over an anxiety-filled hour for her to finally qualify the final time, the new mark is now hers.

Hanegan's record setting the record, both Hanegan and Track head coach Scott Looker credit several new training steps that were used during this season that separated it from Hanegan's previous season. Among those, according to Coach Looker, were the change in body position, technique, form and the addition of having coach Jackie Marren, formerly Jackie Ross, as a track coach and holder of numerous Idaho and ASUI-Kibbie records for helping Hanegan in her training. However, he stresses her determination as the main reason for this new record.

"It all comes down to the mental aspect which (Hanegan's) has been tremendous," said Looker in a telephone interview. "She was able to make the changes and be disciplined enough to keep them down." The record marks the third this season that Hanegan has been under the Big Sky Conference Indoor Championships' 200-meter qualifying time of 26.50. While she has made it to the BSC Outdoor Championships for the past three years, in the finals in 1991, this will be her first time running for the 200-meter championship on an indoor track. Coach Looker, though, believes the change will be to her advantage.

"I think she will run even faster," concluded Coach Looker.

Hanegan's performance was preceded by the four men records which were broken in Friday's 5,000-meter Annual Martin Surfacing Inc. Vandal Indoor Invitational as well as another damn record that was set on Saturday.

Carl Robinson of the University of Washington led off new record holders by establishing both a new ASUI-Kibbie Dome and most record, both in the 55-meters hurled. Her times in both the heat and finals were a total of eight-hundredths of a second off from her career's best time of 7.46. Though the success of the senior's success for she holds the UW school record in the 100 meters and has gone to both the NCAA Indoor and Outdoor Championships.

Washington State's Joseph Kirkby does not need a new 3000-meter record to spotlight his abilities. Last year, the native from Korea won the 10,000-meter title at the NCAA Cross Country Championships and in 1992, he was every 3000-meter event he participated in, including that year's NCAA Indoor Championship.

Washington Rainwater of Eastern Washington not only established a new 55-meter dash record, but on Saturday, the junior broke his own ASUI-Kibbie Dome 200-meter record with a time of 24.48. On February 26th, she was received recognition for her achievements by being selected as one of two BSC athletes of the week. The team of Parrish Woods, Tracey Griffin, Kiko Sandemeyer and Latoya Colby, all of the University of Washington women's 4 x 100 meter relay, vanquished the meet record set by the 1989 Western Oregon team by finishing the distance in 47.56.

Joyce Topping of Idaho State, however, was only runner in the 1600 meter, as she was the only runner in the 1600 meter, as she was the only runner to qualify for the NCAA Cross Country Championships and in 1992, he was every 3000-meter event he participated in, including that year's NCAA Indoor Championship.

Parks and Recreation offers youth soccer

Moscow Parks and Recreation is taking registration for Youth Soccer now through March 10.

The girl's leagues are grades 1-2 and 3-4. Boy's leagues are grades 1-2 and 3-4.

Third grade girls have the option of playing in either boys or girls league.

Fourth grade girls and boys in grades 5-7 will be placed in a combined league. Fees for soccer are $10.

Volunteer coaches and paid officials are also needed.

For further information, call the Parks and Recreation Office, (208) 882-0240.

Palouse Triathlon opens to non-students alike

Catch the fever! Triathlon fever is spreading. Some lucky individuals have caught Triathlon Fever in the earliest stage of the epidemic and are in training now.

The Palouse Triathlon will hold its 11th annual event Sunday, April 24, at 7 a.m., at the University of Idaho. It is open to students and non-students alike.

The event consists of a 1.5 kilometer swim in a 25-yard indoor pool, a 40 kilometer bike over relatively flat terrain and a 10 kilometer run over rolling hills.

If you feel feverish as you read about the 11th Annual Palouse Triathlon, you may have caught Triathlon Fever yourself.

Please call or write Campus Recreation, 204 Memorial Gym, Moscow, ID 83843, (208) 885-6381 for an entry form and start training today.

Half marathon takes place March 5

The Palouse's running season kicks off Saturday, March 5 with its traditional start, the Snake River Canyon Fall Marathon.

This is the 15th year of the race, which takes place along the Snake River Canyon downriver from Clarkston. Giant sized basalt cliffs line both sides of the river.

Runners from Boise, Spokane and Cœur d'Alene are expected again this year.

Although there are always some serious competitors, many of the entrants will be weekend joggers making this their one big race of the year. Usually 150-250 people participate.

And for many others, it will mark the beginning of their training for Bloomsday, the giant Spokane roadrace that May.

The race is organized by the Palouse Roadrunner Running Club.

The race course is an out-and-back. It starts at 10 a.m. at Wawawai Landing, about 16 miles from Pullman. Drivers can reach it by following the Wawawai Road, which leaves highway 195 at the Pullman bypass, or can drive downstream 26 miles from Clarkston.

Registration with a shirt is $18 or without for $8. Entry forms are at major sporting goods stores in the Inland Northwest as can also be obtained by calling the race organizers. Registration race day begins at 9 a.m.

Race organizers are: Ron Klinsky (208) 882-0721 (home); (208) 885-6949 (work); and Gary Bryan (208) 882-9350 (home); (509) 335-6701 (work).

Hall of Fame inducts new members

Officials of the Idaho Hall of Fame, Inc. today announced the names of four new inductees into the Idaho Hall of Fame. Don Haynes, Dar Walters, Jerry "Soup" Collett, and Leonard "Lab" Labine will be inducted into the hall of fame in ceremonies during the Idaho Sports Banquet which will be held at the Coeur d'Alene Resort Convention Center Mar. 23, at 7:30 p.m.

Ticket sales are now at all Schwab Tire stores in North Idaho, the Coeur d'Alene Resort Business Activities Center and the Smoking Lamp shop at the University Inn in Moscow.

Ticket donations are $20 for adults and $7 for students.

The Idaho Sports Banquet is sponsored by Cœur d'Alene Mines, Les Schwab Tires, the Coeur d'Alene Resort, Radio KVNI in Cœur d'Alene and the Idaho Hall of Fame, Inc.
Although convenient, having your desk near the coffeemaker has some definite drawbacks.

"I don't care if it's a nice-looking vest! It was a sport coat when I brought it in here!"

"Yes, I got this beauty used from that amusement park over in Elmira. Made out like a bandit!"
