Women’s Center to hold garlic session

The UI Women's Center is sponsoring "Garbage 101: Reshaping the Way We Handle Trash at the UI" today at 12:30 p.m. at the center. Recent federal mandates impact how people will handle solid waste in the workplace. Jerry Martin, UI coordinator of the Recycling/Solid Waste Program, will talk about new programs and long term plans and goals for recycling on campus.

The presentation is free and open to the public.

Baseball hall of famer to speak tonight

Baseball great Harmon C. Killbrew will visit the UI tonight to deliver a free lecture, "Alcohol, Drugs and YOU!" or "I Just Want to Be One of The Big Guys."

He speaks on alcohol and drug abuse in professional sports and tells how chemical dependency "takes the fun out the win," along with a discussion of the long crawl back to "Success of Self — The Only One Worth Having!" Killbrew being brought to campus by the UI chapter of Beta Theta Pi as part of their campaign to increase awareness of the dangers of irresponsible consumption of drugs and alcohol, the talk is billed as having "something for everyone."

The native Iowahon and baseball Hall of Fame member's talk begins at 7:00 p.m. in the University Auditorium.

Copy centers schedule special weekend hours

The UI Media Center Annex Copy Center will be open the weekends of April 23 and 30 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The SUB Copy Center will have regular weekend hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Special Olympics gains money from cow patty

In a departure from more traditional means of selecting a raffle winner, a UI student project to raise money for Special Olympics will use a cow to make the decision.

At 2 p.m., Sunday, a crowd of ten spectators will wait in the UI Animal Pavilion as a cowmounts a grid, selecting the perfect spot —and the winning ticket —to benefit from a deposit more commonly found in pastures. If a cow is unable to decide on a single square, all squares she designates will share in the price of $250 cash.

The "cow patty" raffle, an organizer delicately term the project, is expected to raise about $2,000 for this year's Special Olympics through the sale of 2,500 $1 tickets. Tickets are on sale now through resident advisors in UI dormitory buildings. Anyone in the Palouse can buy a ticket, right up to the time the cow begins her work.

For more information about the event or how to buy a ticket, contact Dawn Doss at 852-7670.

Birding spots focus of Wednesday meeting

Kaz Dumroese, research associate in the UI Forest Resources Department, will present a program on "Local Birds and Birding Spots" at the April meeting of the Palouse Audubon Society. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Moscow Community Center.

Dumroese will point out some excellent spots in the local area for observing birds in all seasons. There are many good locations between Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene, including the Harrison Marine, Kamiak Butte and Man's Lake. Dumroese will use transparency, maps and handouts to tell how to get there and what to look for.

The program is free and open to the public.

Friends of Library to hold a benefit book sale

The Friends of the Moscow Public Library will hold a Giant Book Sale Saturday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the Moscow Community Center. This semi-annual event offers books at bargain prices: fiction, non-fiction, children's books, science fiction, mystery and many other categories of books will be sold. Proceeds from this event will benefit the Moscow Public Library's Summer Reading Program for children.

The Wal*Mart Company will match the proceeds from the book sale with a grant to benefit the Summer Reading Program.

Sexual Assault Awareness Week

Sexual crimes happen every day around the nation and around the world. These crimes are the focus of a week of events at the UI.

This week is Sexual Assault Awareness Week on the UI campus. The ASUI Safety Task Force has put together a series of sessions aimed to educate UI students on the issues surrounding sexual assault. These events are being held for university students, faculty and staff.

ASUI Senator Laura West is the main force behind this week of events. She said the events of the week are centered around issues involving men and women. Sexual assault involves both genders and both should be involved in the week, said West.

The week of events started last night with a presentation by Jackie Grimey, a representative of Alternatives to Violence, who will make another presentation Thursday afternoon at 12:30 p.m. in the Student Union Building, Gold Room. This session will focus on issues surrounding family safety.

Residents of Guam, Olesen and Stoup Halls will present a mock rape trial from 7 to 9 p.m. in the College of Law Courtroom. This controversial case involves rape and alcohol in which the audience will act as three separate juries.

One jury will be made up of all women, one with all men and the other with a mixture. The decision will then be compared to see how they may differ from each other. There is an expected difference in the opinions of each jury as the issue usually has varying gender standards, said West.

ASUI Senators will be distributing purple ribbons to their living groups to be worn on Friday. These ribbons are to be worn in awareness of the problem of sexual assault. There will also be a banner in the SUB for people to tie purple ribbons on for every person they may know who has been sexually assaulted.

There will be a session on self-defense classes on Saturday. This session will teach techniques through musclecaribic style. This event will also feature how to mentally prepare for a violent encounter. These sessions will be in the SUB from 1 to 5:45 p.m. Each session is free and open to the public.

West and the task force have worked hard to ensure the week is a success. Each event has been scheduled for a high turnout and West said she hopes people get out to these events. Each event aims to educate the general university community on the issues around sexual assault.

I survived it

I don't see any different because of what happened to me. In fact, nobody would ever guess, not even my closest friends. I am a friendly, successful student here at the University of Idaho. I look like the product of a wonderful family, but there is the truth.

I carry a painful secret with me every day. I no longer try to still or hurt myself because of it. I just accept that the pain is there and that healing takes a long time.

"I did not ask to be raped. I did not like black and enjoy it." I screamed, screamed, and blushed, but I did not enjoy it. I survived it.

When I was a little girl, I spent the night at my grandparents' house. When I got up in the middle of the night to go to the bathroom, the bathroom door squeaked and my grandpa came in and got me. I had to lull on his bed while grandma watched with a smile on her face. I screamed for help, but there was none. I did say many awful things to me that I finally blocked out.

I will never forget the way his lips felt all over my five-year-old body, or his sick smile while he told me how much he loved me over and over. I carry these memories every day. But, I am working on healing, so that one day they will finally lose their power over me.

So many of my friends think that rapists are only strangers in the dark. Eighty-five percent of rapes that occur on campus are date and acquaintance rape. These rapists can be people that we love and trust. The purpose I have in writing my story is to warn people to be aware about how damaging rape is, because it could happen to you. It takes a long time to heal. I should know, it has been fifteen years for me and I am still healing.

—Laura West

Want the opportunity to represent the students at UI!

"I am interested in being on the Faculty Council because of the events that have occurred this past year. I have realized the council is an extremely important part of the university and the people on it are making decisions that impact many students on campus."

Chaffee has lived both in the residence halls and the Greek System and wants to be able to share the views from both of those areas.

"I think a major problem with this board is people don’t know enough about it. Members of the council need to have extraordinary contact with the senators to keep students informed," Chaffee said.

"I want the opportunity to represent the students at UI."

-Chaffee said she wants to be involved in making changes on campus. "Everything is constantly changing and even though things seem like a good idea one year, they may not be a good idea the next year. I like to be a leader and keep people interested in the issues at hand. I would like to be involved so that I can help make changes that will be best for everyone," Rush said.

-LaNae Empey Quast was awarded the 1994 Don Watkins Scholarship from the Idaho Press Club on April 16. This is the second year in a row Quast has won the award.

Quast, a UI senior journalism major, is a 1991 graduate of Bonniesville High School. She then attended Ricks College from the fall of 1991 through the fall of 1992. She transferred to the UI in the spring of 1993 where she began work at the Argonaut.

"I think the competition this year was even stiffer, making the award even more overwhelming," Quast said.

-Quast said at the Scroll as section editor for news, opinion, arts and entertainment and off-campus news and production.

-At the Argonaut, Quast has worked as a LifeStyle staff writer before taking over as the Page Design Manager and redesigning the Argonaut. She is currently interested in the Lewiston Morning Tribune and UI University Communications.

-"I’ve been lucky to gain experience through internships and the school paper," Quast said.

"Experience is what makes the difference."
Homosexuals, Greeks meet in open forum

Men, women describe their 'coming-out' experiences to help promote understanding

Mike Cole
Staff Writer

Two stereotyped opposing groups met for an informational presentation last week. The Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Association joined with the Greek leadership class to discuss homosexuality. Dr. Bruce Pitman, leading the class, explained GLBA had been invited in an effort to become more aware of the wide range of "cultures" on campus.

Eric, the organizer for the GLBA panel, opened by stating, "We're only here to talk about our lives and not to push any type of agenda."

The presentation began with the five members of the GLBA panel giving their personal backgrounds. The individual autobiographies were intended to show the diversity which exists in the gay community.

The first member of the panel, Mark, began by explaining how much his life had changed having just started telling people he was gay last May. Mark defined the process of telling other people that one is gay as "coming out." Mark likened his coming out to that of Susan Bannam.

"I ripped the hand-aid off and came out all at once," stated Mark. He then clarified that not living on campus has helped him to escape some of the "bigotry" others experience. Living experience proved to be the marked difference between Mark and Lisa.

Lisa explained she had been "outed" by no choice of her own in her small home town in Washington. She spoke of death threats, vandalism and harassment which forced her to leave town.

In moving to Pullman to attend Washington State University, Lisa pointed out the GLBA community has become "like a family" for her and others who's families had cut them off.

Abbie, the only bisexual member of the panel, began by informing the class that she had originally lived in a sorority house first attending UI. She added to the perspective of the sometimes traumatic experience of coming out.

Abbie pointed out "a person doesn't have to come out to everyone in order to substantiate that person's own homosexuality." She explained a stigma is often attached to homosexuals and bisexuals which can unfairly affect the way they are treated in the classroom and in the workplace. People's perception of homosexuality is what GLBA has consistently had to battle.

The fourth member of the group, Matt, spoke about his individual struggle with people's blurred observations. In coming out to his friends, Matt explained two of his friends rejected him.

"I didn't change, just their perception of me changed," Matt stated. Matt explained although UI is not exactly a "gay friendly" place, it's not as bad as people perceive it to be. Matt cited continued education as being the key to understanding how to coexist in today's society.

Eric concluded the backgrounds by explaining his experience of having lived in the dorms. Having had the label of "gay" circulate through his hall, Eric said a lot of people became uncomfortable with what they didn't know.

"Anytime I was in my room with the door shut, people would walk by making obscene noises. I was really hurt," confessed Eric. He went on to point out GLBA has helped in educating people in order to combat ignorant homophobia.

The panel answered questions concerning gay bashing and the idea of educational classes on homosexuality for junior and high schools.

The panel then countered the forum by asking those present how they respective fraternities and sororities would handle a person living in the house declaring that they were homosexual? One response explained how it would be more difficult in knowing how to act around someone who was suspected of being gay than someone who openly admitted to it. Another point raised was the question of how to handle seemingly innocent jokes about homosexuality. One fraternity member explained some males tend to joke about homosexuality because it makes them feel uncomfortable and they don't understand it.

The panel understood the joking based on being uncomfortable, but still pointed out the reason it can cause. Lisa addressed the use of language in relation to homosexuality by speaking about respect. She pointed out people use certain defamatory words as an effort to attack gays. The only way to deal with the disrespect is to disempower those words. Lisa continued by giving her own personal example of disempowering language.

Lisa has done many panel presentations on the WSU campus hence she is recognized as being homosexual by many people she sees walking to and from classes. At times a person will hurl an insult at Lisa by saying "dyke" as they pass by. Lisa smiled as she explained she just turns and says "that's Mr. Dyke to you."

The GLBA is available to give informational presentations to any classes, living groups, or other interested parties. If anyone is interested in obtaining information, they can contact the GLBA office at 335-4311.

State Ed Board gains partial brains

The Idaho State Board of Education finally relented after UI's departing provost, Thomas Bell, pleaded for token control over how nonresident tuition is raised.

Bell originally requested three years to implement the plan, which was turned down, along with UI President Zinder's earlier four-year request.

Bell then pulled his last card and asked for university control over what percentage the increase will take over the two years. UI may opt for increasing nonresident tuition for incoming freshmen by one third — approximately a $500 increase — followed by a raise of the remaining two-thirds balance the second year — about another $1,200.

This change, at least, gives nonresident students a slightly better chance to plan ahead, though students are just as likely to spend their money at less expensive, lower quality institutions.

The Board's concession acts more like damage control than any change in price, and students know it.

Vote Wednesday

Last Fall only 1,200 UI students bothered to vote during ASUJ elections. That's interesting because there were enough voting stands placed all over campus that nearly every student must have passed at least one sometime during the day.

In their mad rush to class, the other 8,800 students must have been too busy to stop and vote.

Either that, or they don't care.

They don't care about what happens in the Student Union Building. They don't care about campus safety issues. They don't care about tuition and fee increases. They don't care about the facilities ASUI offers them.

Or perhaps those 8,800 students don't know who the candidates are to vote for. That's reasonable. ASUI candidates aren't able to crank out bucks for individual mailings or huge flyers and air time with David Letterman.

What students can do is walk by the UCC and check out the names of all those running and write them down. Then, they can grab a Blue Key Campus Directory and look up everybody's name and give them a call. Challenge the candidates to detail who they are, what they stand and what they represent.

Our ASUI Senate has a little power in a lot of ways to help UI students out and get people interested; next fall, there might be an important issue in which students need representation.

It's a small campus. Vote.

Wilderness leaves America

A bout a year ago, ex-editor and friend Pete Comben signed off to one of his columns with a call to arms that read, "America: we need more wilderness.

Well, here it is Saturday night at almost 11 p.m. and Pete and I just put away a few pitchers of beer at The Plant. After a serious discussion, we've come to the conclusion America still needs more wilderness.

Bitterroot candidates care, Bitterroot candidates care.

Well, I'm not writing in some kind of drunks haze. Frankly, I'm very scared. I'm scared that if we have kids, we won't have anymore to take them to show them wilderness except some overcrowded national parks.

I've always been kind of an inactive environmentalist. After all, I'm from Ohio, where you can't be a environmentalist because there is no more nature to conserve.

As I snaked my car through the Bitterroot Mountains on my way to McCall several years ago, I realized God's country wasn't destroyed. But when I saw the clearcuts in western Oregon, I began to think what I saw was a forest gone.

Lately, the environmentalism I've always been floating around in the back of my head has been thrust to the front again, thanks to the commercials that have been surfacing lately, courtesy of the Idaho Forest Products Corporation in Potlatch Inc. It's my fear that while these are reputable companies, they also have a bit at stake when it comes to timber harvest. These commercials portray Potlatch and the commission as ardent environmentalists who value nothing more than a beautiful sprouting forest. It doesn't take much to realize what they really want is for people to think that they can continue chopping down trees.

I'm against logging. I'm not a member of Earth First! After all, I use as much paper as anybody else and I realize logging is necessary. What I don't understand is how greatly timber companies can be while hiding behind the idea that it creates jobs and the fact that self-serving hippie environmentalists are out to put everyone out of work.

Mandatory yearbook eliminates student choice

Tomorrow, in addition to voting on senate and faculty council candidates, students will be asked to vote on a proposal which, if adopted, would increase ASUJ fees by more than 20 percent in order to provide a yearbook to every student.

This proposal is a bad idea and deserves to be voted down.

There are several reasons why this is a bad idea, but, to be fair, it is important to first point out the Gem of the Mountains yearbook is a good product.

In 1987, it won national awards and honors. It is also a valuable preserver of the history of the University of Idaho, going all the way back to 1903. And for $25, it is a deal.

But the yearbook is in trouble. In the last four years sales have declined from over 1,200 to just over 400 today. This is due in part to a national trend of falling yearbook sales; but more importantly are the changes in UI's registration system.

The Gem book used to be sold to students as they walked through the Kibbie Dome to register. Pre-registration and telephone registration have eliminated this easy sales method.

Forcing students to purchase the book by making it a part of their mandatory fees, however, is the wrong solution.

That is the lazy solution to a marketing problem.

The Gem staff needs to pursue other means of selling the book before resorting to this type of forced purchase. Imagine taking a book that only a percent of the student body purchases and selling everyone that they must buy one.

What's worse is there are students who pay for a yearbook, yet don't bother to pick it up. If we have to throw books away because students won't pick up the book they paid for, how can we expect students to pick up a book that comes "free" with their fees?

Maybe next year we can throw away several thousand books students don't claim either, just a couple of hundred.

Another reason to vote no on the proposal is because it removes the incentive to produce a high quality book. If the sales are guaranteed, why would an editor have to worry if students are happy with the product or not? Students will be stuck with it.

But, the most important reason for voting no is it removes the students' choice in the matter. Some proponents of the plan will tell you that you will wish you had a yearbook 20 years from now, so that makes mandatory yearbooks O.K. Well, we've all grown up now. We can decide for ourselves whether we want to buy a yearbook. If we regret not buying one 20 years from now, it is our loss. But, we don't need to put it on us.

The yearbook is important, and we need to preserve it, but this is not the way to do it.

New methods of marketing the book and inspecting it is meeting the needs of students to be explored. How many students have even seen the yearbook? How many know where to buy one? How many students even know how much it costs?

Until the yearbook makes an honest marketing effort, they should not be trying to take the lazy way out by removing student choice.

The Missoulian
Letters to the Editor

Bennett very approachable

I am writing this letter to share my experience with the student at UI. In January 1993, I came to this institution to pursue my Ph.D. in Range Science. At that time, the international office organized an orientation session for foreign students.

Among the several persons who addressed us, a small, thin, but professionally sound and strong woman introduced herself as Kristen Bennett, an ASUI Senator. She addressed the newcomers in a very simple and understandable manner. Her gentle speech touched the hearts of everybody in the meeting because it was easy to see the genuineness of her warm feelings and positive thoughts. She also announced that she was in the ASUI Senate to serve and help the students.

She also said she would welcome every student on campus into the office, regardless of nationality, race and origin. Like many other international students, I have many problems, such as housing, cultural differences and the like. At this hour of need, there was no one to talk to. I approached Kristen and reminded her about her speech. She listened to me very carefully and patiently. She made arrangements for our stay on campus.

During this period, she visited my family a couple of times to help us adjust to our new surroundings. Her constant encouragement and sincere support made our social and academic life very favorable and pleasant. My wife loves to talk to her for hours and my kids consider her their affectionate friend.

Later, when I involved myself in GSA, I closely saw her representing ASUI as a Senator at our meetings. She always impressed me in GSA meetings with her positive attitude. She is a very strong and useful link between GSA and ASUI. Her intellectual level and approach of doing business as a Senator is both worthy of praise and remarkable.

I have very closely observed her as a human being, friend and student leader, and I firmly believe she is an ideal individual. Above all, the beauty of her personality lies in her simplicity.

On the basis of my own experience, I request all students to vote and support Kristen Bennett because of her innumerable and marvellous qualities.

Russell has integrity

I am writing this letter in support of Megan Russell for ASUI Senate. As a former Senator, I know the hard work and dedication this job requires.

Megan not only has the qualities of a good leader, she has the motivation and integrity to be an excellent ASUI Senator. Currently, Megan serves as a Faculty Council Representative. In my four years of involvement with the ASUI, I have never seen a more dedicated representative on this council.

She has faithfully and diligently attended all meetings, making sure the students’ voices have been heard. Unlike past representatives, she regularly reports to the Senate and has a good working relationship with them.

I believe Megan Russell is a sincere candidate. She wants to represent the students, not make a name for herself by wasting student funds on pet projects.

For honest representation by a woman who has already proven she puts students first, please vote for Megan Russell April 20.

Gilbert has experience

As the ASUI elections approach this Wednesday, there is little doubt most of you are in the same position as I. As you walk into the Administration, Ag. Science, or any other building where you can vote, you suddenly realize that today is election day.

Acting like the good student you want to be, you pick up a ballot and honestly try to select people you believe will do a good job.

Then you begin to realize you know almost nothing about most of the candidates. This may be a bit too realistic for some of you to accept and it is all too true among the few of us who actually vote. This is the reason I am writing this letter.

Hopefully, I can inform you about one candidate who I believe would honestly do a good job representing you as an ASUI Senator — Bill Gilbert.

I have known Bill Gilbert throughout the past year and have been impressed with his strong work ethic, self-discipline and quiet character. I have never liked listening to political hype and I don’t want to fill you with a bunch of fluff about campaigns promises or political policy. All I can offer you is this fact: there are few candidates more qualified to serve as an ASUI Senator.

Bill has accomplished more as a sophomore than most students dream of accomplishing in an entire college career. Last year, as a freshman, Bill served as an ASUI Senator, serving on numerous committees, including the Finance Committee.

Bill also chaired the Legislative Affairs Committee. Bill is currently working as a congressional intern in Washington, D.C., this semester. Bill has also served on the ASUI Elections Board and the ASUI Programs Board as the Speakers and Performing Arts Coordinator.

These accomplishments are impressive, but I am sure you are asking the same question I would ask: What can he do for me and the U1? If you are looking for someone who is sincere about his beliefs, committed to making the student’s voice — heard in the state legislature and by the university administration — and a man dedicated to making your opinions a top priority, then you should vote for Bill Gilbert.

I hope I have enlightened you to at least one candidate when you go to vote this Wednesday. Bill Gilbert has the experience and dedication to do a great job as an ASUI Senator.

Tesnohlidek, motivated leader

An enthusiastic motivator. An effective leader. A exemplary communicator. Each of these phrases accurately describe ASUI Senate candidate, John Tesnohlidek. As president of the Student Alemun Relations Board, I had the opportunity and distinct pleasure of working with John and experiencing his sincere desire to make a difference in our organization and the campus as a whole. John Tesnohlidek’s accomplishments and involvement at UI are further evidence of his leadership qualities and experience. John is an influential member of the ASUI Student Union Board, Secretary of the Dean’s Student Advisory Board, College of Business and Economics, and a member of the Campus Safety Task Force; and actively involved with the International Business Club. John is a Gracie Scholar in the CBE and was named one of three Outstanding Freshmen by the Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society.

John Tesnohlidek is genuinely interested in making life at UI a more positive experience for every student. As a Senator, he would continue work in important areas such as campus safety (of significance to all students), proposed SUB changes and improved communication between Senators and students. Electing John Tesnohlidek to the ASUI Senate would be a step in the right direction — a step toward creating a better University. I ask every Senator, a step toward a Senate that more completely represents students’ interests.

John Tesnohlidek: a motivator, a communicator, a LEADER. John Tesnohlidek is an ideal Senate candidate. I urge students to vote tomorrow for effective leadership. Elect John Tesnohlidek to the ASUI Senate!

Letters to the Editor

Letter writer sports ignorant

Keith Porter's April 8 letter to the editor, "Politics, sports don't mix," was one of the most immature and pointless pieces of writing I have ever seen.

Mr. Porter criticized, or at least tried to criticize, the Argonaut's April 5 piece, "Arkansas claims its national title." I have read Andrew's articles all year and I find them enjoyable, informative and well-written.

You said in your letter you aren't an expert on the media and I will agree with you on this—I wouldn't even trust you turning on the television set. For your information, Mr. Porter, his article was a column, which means he is entitled to his own opinions. I'm sorry his opinion didn't match your high and mighty opinions.

For example, it was Andrew's opinion in saying that Game Hill is the most "complete" basketball player, which doesn't necessarily mean he is the "best." I think you need to follow college basketball more closely and let go of the "sports bandwagon" you've been hanging on to for years.

Also, Mr. Porter incessantly labeled Andrew as being a huge Duke fan, where it didn't even seem like that. I thought he gave Duke some much needed respect, especially since they were big underdogs to the talented Arkansas team. They admirably overachieved in the NCAA's and Andrew's game plan does not make one degrading comment about Arkansas and does not sensationalize Duke basketball in any way. At the end of this article, if you got that far, Mr. Porter, he praised Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson for bringing "a program from dormancy to prominence." Enough said.

And, Mr. Porter, I don't see the logic enough to read the Argonaut twice per week, you would see that in one of Andrew's columns, he predicted Duke to lose.

Mr. Porter also whined about Andrew's line, "...Duke couldn't get organized on offense and ultimately turned the ball over and ultimately gave Arkansas its first ever NCAA tournament title. "What is wrong with this, Professor Porter? You've complicated a simple word used "gave" to imply Arkansas won the title, but that is a common phrase in sports journalism. I think you need to read more sports stories.

I would encourage you, Keith Porter, to have some more sense for argument if you choose to write letter to the editor. I think that corn cob seeds some adjusting and that federal seeds be be loweed. You write what thou shoved.

-Craig Leigh

No more spiritual fights

In the April 15 issue of the Argonaut, there are two letters, one by Edith Smith on Jesus, the other by Joan Muneta on the Idaho Citizens Alliance. Besides being trapped entirely within a text-bound universe of discourse and therefore convincing only to the choir, Smith's piece made claims about biblical figures that are highly dubious historically. It represented, perhaps, a cathartic exercise for the author, but advanced public discussion on matters of moment not a will. By contrast, Muneta's letter touched on an issue of grave concern to the body politic in this state. The ICA is proposing a draconian plan for suppressing the human rights of persons who are not heterosexuals. Muneta has called us to become aware of and informed about this devilish threat and to address the issues raised with reason, compassion and a sense of justice. I applaud her approach to this sensitive topic. And, for my Christian money, the Argonaut can print more letters of like intensity and fewer that reflect Byzantine spiritual squabbles.

-Bruce Wolfenbegg

The Argonaut welcomes reader letters. They must be one page typed, double spaced. Letters must be signed and include identification or a driver's license number and phone number for each writer. Proof of identity for each author must be shown when the letter is submitted to the SUB floor student media office. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse or edit letters. Multiple letters with the same position on a topic may be represented by one letter.
Comment on reaccreditation

You are invited to review and comment on the draft report of our self-study for reaccreditation by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. About 115 faculty, staff, students and administrators have served on Study/Appraisal Committees and the Steering Committee over the past 14 months, studying our operations and preparing this draft.

Please send your comments to the coordinator of the self-study, Dr. Judy Durene, AD 104 Assessment Office, ASP313, or CMS e-mail to ACAST, or UNIX to ACAST@ui.edu. By May 9 so that we can organize the responses for our use. When you send comments, please note the chapter number and either the line number from the top of the screen if you use Gopher, or the page number from the hard copy. The report will be edited again, and the final report will be distributed university-wide in August 1994. The evaluation team is expected on campus October 5-7.

Horton puts in 110 percent

I am writing in support of Michael Horton for ASUI Senator. Mike is a very outgoing person who puts 110 percent into everything he does. I have worked with Mike on many occasions and have seen first hand the professional and reliable way he handles all business situations. He is a true friend who has the both the experience and the desire to serve the students of UI. I am confident that Mike will be an excellent ASUI Senator and I urge you to vote for him April 20.

Middleton wants to give back

My name is Al Middleton. I am a senior with one year of school left. I am running for ASUI Senator. I have been at this university for a long time, and I have learned a lot here. I have had most of the best times of my life while going to this university. I feel that I can give back what I have received by serving the university and the students.

I would like to see the students of ASUI give back. I believe that the students need to be involved. I believe this can be done through the election of an ASUI Senator. The next ASUI Senator should know what the issues are, and then he can educate himself about them. The Argonaut's opinion page is one place where he can read about the students. The Argonaut is one of the best places for an ASUI Senator to help involve the students.

I would like to see the parking problem addressed again. With all the construction that is taking place in Moscow, there are going to be more and more students who need a place to park. Another issue related to parking is bicycle parking. Not as many people cycle anymore, so outdated bicycle racks need to be replaced with racks compatible with U-locks.

The roads on this campus are still in poor condition, and something needs to be done to get these roads fixed. I feel that the university or the City of Moscow can fix them.

Another idea I support is the idea that I don't want this university to have a parking permit system. I don't want UI to change programs that work. Too many times I see the university try to improve something and end up messing it up. If they try to improve something, it is better for an improvement.

I would like your vote tomorrow. I feel I can represent you, the students, and make you proud that you voted for me. Make a point to vote tomorrow.

—Al "Big Al" Middleton

Forest

a laugh, depending on my mood. The notion that these companies are actually out to save the forests by planting "genetically improved seedlings" is a farce. I asked a forestry friend of mine what "improved" means. He told me they were resisting fire and disease, which is good for the good of the forest, but so that timber companies can harvest from quicker.

In this nature I think not. I have little doubt we can save our forests completely and replant them with near little rows of these new, fast-growing trees. Really, I stood in one of these man-made forests, and I must say that it sure as hell ain't nature the way God intended it.

I felt like I was standing in a Christmas tree farm. It was nothing like the thick, old-growth forest I once stood in while visiting Oregon. Finding these new, fast-growing, 90 percent of old-growth forests are bad.

Many timber workers say environmentalists are out to put them out of a job. Poor man's unemployment of forests by government and timber companies are the real responsible parties. By depleting the forests, there's very little left to harvest, and they know it. From what I've read, timber industry layoffs are due to economic instability and automation than environmental activism out.

I believe there is hope. Thanks to groups like the Sierra Club and their movement to make more environmentally friendly logging practices, coupled with pressure from profit-minded companies towards the forest, we may be able to save what's left of our forests. And perhaps our children can stand in a real forest, not a Christmas tree farm.

1994 UI Alumni class set to graduate

Often times the best part of leaving someplace is coming back.

As the University of Idaho graduates their 1994 graduating class, they welcome their newest class of university alumni. The list of programs, events and associations seems endless for this new class to place their name on. The doors of opportunity open wider and it does not take that much courage to step through them.

The steps to become a registered alumni can be found on most of those lists though are easy as long as the alumni stay in touch with the UI Alumni Office.

The Alumni staff claim most problems of alumni not being reached stem from old addresses.

Tami Cann, Alumni Office program advisor, said it is difficult to reach someone as an alumni when the Alumni Office has no idea where to send the mailings.

"The most important thing for these new graduates to remember is to update their address with our offices whenever they move. This is essential if we are to keep in touch with everyone in our association," said Cann.

It also does not matter where students move to after graduation to stay involved with the UI as there are UI Alumni chapters all over the western United States and two on the east coast. Each chapter has a contact person who acts as the direct link between the area's alumni and the UI. Those people are often the ones who coordinate the area events to bring UI alumni together.

Cann said the chapters have been set up in areas where there seems to be enough UI graduates to have a chapter. They determine this through finding those alumni who are interested in staying involved with the UI in whatever area of the U.S. they are in.

"We find alumni are moving all over and we try to establish chapters in those areas where there will be a strong interest in being involved," said Cann.

These chapters are active in sponsoring events for UI alumni in their areas. They meet several times a year with activities such as dinners, meetings or special gatherings. Most chapters also make special trips to the UI campus for the events or campus such as Homecoming, reunions and commencement.

Cann said it is "exciting" to have the alumni come home for such events as Homecoming. These types of events are what Cann said keeps alumni interested in the UI after their college days are over.

"Most alumni are so excited about coming back to Moscow for Homecoming and similar activities. This is when the energy on campus is so high," said Cann.

Cann also emphasized alumni are welcome on campus at any time and the more that come back, the better it is. She said the sign of a strong university is a strong base from which to build on.

"Alumni are the lifeline of any college. They are the only ones who can give back something to the school that gave them so much," said Cann.

Alumni can add more than money to the advancement of the UI, they can also help recruit the students who may one day attend the UI, said Cann. Often times alumni are asked to be the recruiting force of new students. These alumni are a great source of knowledge of what the university is like and why it is that way. These alumni work with the New Student Services Office.

"The alumni of the University of Idaho are a strong force and our future relies on our past," said Cann.

Senior Send-Off bids adieu to graduates

In less than one month, some current University of Idaho students will say "good-bye" to college and "hello" to the real world.

The Student Alumni Relations Board will be honoring those graduating seniors at their tenth annual Senior Send-Off. This event will be offered Friday from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at Robinsons Park.

This event is held for those students who are receiving their degree in May or have received their degree over the past year.

The SARB members believe this event is important as it offers those soon to be graduates the opportunity to be sent off in the proper way. It gives the seniors a chance to get together one last time before graduation.

There will be an admission of $5 which includes hamburgers, soda pop and good music. There will also be free door prizes given away to those in attendance. The barbecue and activities will give these graduating seniors a chance to relax and enjoy the last Friday night of their college days.

Casey Hansen, UI Alumni Office program advisor, said this event has become an annual "hit" in the past and offers to be even better for this year.

"This event offers people a chance to see some friends one last time before graduation," said Hansen.

SARB members and Alumni Office staff will also be present to help answer questions about the connections the graduates will have available to them as UI alumni. The Alumni Office also will verify addresses with most students so the mailings reach the proper people.

SARB members have been busy planning this event for some time. Most graduating seniors should have received a flyer in the mail this past week to register for the Senior Send-Off.

This form can be filled out and returned to the Alumni Office or students can show up on the day of the event. They can register and pay at that time.

Transportation to Robinson Lake will be provided from the Student Union Building parking lot every half an hour starting at 4:30 p.m. Families are welcome to attend with the seniors.

For those who are interested on driving to Robinson Park on their own, the directions are: Take 6th St. east, turn right on Mountain View, turn left on Joseph St., follow it east for 3.5 miles always taking the left fork in the road. Look for silver and gold balloons.

For additional information, directions or questions, call Casey at 885-6154.

Address update

Staying in touch with someone after graduation is often difficult but can be made easy with just one letter or one telephone call.

Tami Cais, Alumni Office program advisor, said the most important aspect of being an alum is keeping a current address with the University of Idaho Alumni Office.

Cais said it is quite difficult to stay in contact with someone when the address office has no longer the one where the alumni can be reached.

"We need to stay informed of address changes so we can stay in touch. We can only do so much to find someone's address," said Cais.

With all the mailings the UI Alumni Office sends out each year, the correct current address is quite important.

The staff and the university want all alumni to at least keep informed of what is going on at the UI if they cannot not make it to campus for the special events.

The UI Alumni Office can be reached by telephone at 208-885-6154 or by mail to Alumni Office, University of Idaho, Moscow, ID 83844. More information about can alumni programs is also available.

Alumni Association strength brings graduates together

The Alumni Association of the University of Idaho exists in order to help create and coordinate the support from friends and alumni of the university. This support leads to strengthening the service, academic, research, and leadership-building programs of the institution. It also provides individual alumni services to its members throughout the world.

The Alumni Association strives to keep UI alumni informed about their alma mater, encourage alumni personal and material support and preserve the university community of alumni opinion.

Through a variety of awards, the association honors outstanding students, alumni and other individuals who provide exceptional service to the institution or to the state of Idaho.

The association also awards scholarships to assist both entering and continuing students at the university.

All former UI students who earned 90 or more credits at UI and associate and honorary alumni are members of the association. Those students with 20-89 credits may be added if they request membership.

The UI director of alumni relations and staff, along with the elected board of directors, guide the many activities and programs of the more than 61,000 members.

Alumni maintain close ties to the university as a result of Alumni Association activities, such as travel tours, continuing-education programs on campus and worldwide and for special UI occasions including Homecoming and Silver and Gold Days. The Alumni Office gathers and maintains records of alumni, and this contact service is available to the university and its alumni. The association also provides and organizes support for the university through active organizations, such as the Parents Association and the Student Alumni Relations Board.

Areas of recent emphasis from the UI Alumni Association include informing prospective students about the university, providing continuing education opportunities, establishing a Career Network and increasing volunteer support throughout the development of constituent groups and alumni chapters.

The association is also strengthening and expanding its membership service area, with the Alumni Visa Card, and the addition of the Alumni Network long distance affinity program and the Quest Hotel discount program.

Alumni Club brings UI Vandals

Alumni of the University of Idaho can do more than send money back to Moscow to visit, they can become an Alumni Membership Starter or an Under 30 Alumni Club member.

Graduating seniors can get involved in this group as soon as they are done walking down the aisle at commencement.

They need to get hold of some one from the Alumni Office to find out how they can be the most affective. One activity suggested quite often is for these recent graduates to reach out to high school kids to come to the UI.

The Vandal Booster group in Boise is one of the most active of the UI groups. They are involved in attending such events as Vandal Boosters as: a Lucky Peak Party, Boise Hawks baseball games, University of Nevada—Las Vegas basketball games, fund drives, T.G.I.F. evenings the second Friday of every month and they try to plan events around UI events such as ball games and reunions.

The cost of joining is dependent on how much an alumni wishes to donate money, they can pay as much as they wish or as little as they wish.

Some of the activities the Boosters are involved in may cost extra.

Most of the meetings held by the Boosters involve some sort of prize giveaways which encourages people to attend, where most want to attend in the first place. There is also an annual Under 30 Club golf tournament.

There are currently around 420 members of the Boise Under-30 Club and the UI Alumni Office is hoping to start new clubs in Magic Valley, Idaho, Seattle, Wash., Coeur d' Alene, Idaho, and Portland, Ore.

Homecoming '94 slated for mid-October

Plans are under way to prepare for Homecoming 1994. The week of October 17-22 will mark Homecoming at the University of Idaho. A week full of events ranging from Songfest to the traditional parade are being planned. There will be several new features to the week which are aimed to get current students and alumni to do activities together.

1994 Homecoming Queen and King with their courts will also be announced during the week. They have been traditionally crowned at the Bonfire on the Thursday night of Homecoming.

The annual kick-off breakfast will once again be offered in the Student Union Building International Ballroom. This year's breakfast will feature UI President Elizabeth Zinnert as well as the winners of the Songfest competition. The Vandal Marching Band also will be making an appearance. The traditional parade will take place on the main streets of downtown Moscow. Area marching bands and community organizations will mix with the UI living group floats to provide the audience with another wonderful display.

The Idaho Vandal football team is expected to have another powerhouse team. They will kick-off against Northern Arizona at 1:05 p.m. in the Kiddie Dome. The UI Alumni Office is also planning reunions to honor several graduating classes from the UI.

Living groups will also be participating in a week full of competitions. The aim of these competitions is to get students involved in the relationship between the students and the alumni of the university.

Winners of these living group competitions will be awarded seats on the 50-year line at the football game. The alumni of those living groups will be invited to sit with those winners.

Collette Theatre production #6

Kelsey Hartman, director, Nichola Poesy, actress, and Kathy Campbell, stage director, discuss the staging and action needed for the production of Night Mother. The play stars

Thursdays and runs through Saturday in the Collette Theatre at 8 p.m. each evening. The play is the sixth student production by the Collette Theatre this semester.

Night Mother' questions dysfunctional parental relationship

Tartuffe Writer

Anyone who was lucky enough to catch Kelsey Hartman’s organization of and performance in last month’s folkish adventure of We’re Not Your Mother would probably not classify her as particularly witty or ponderous. In fact, she is a bit-humming, foot-stomping mover on stage — a focused, freewheeling performer with a keen eye and the physical capacity for motion.

On April 21-23, however, the Kelsey Hartman of last month’s trades with Kelsey Hartman, director, when she brings a different mother to the Collette stage: Night Mother, a one-act play by Masha Norman. Norman is one of today’s prominent woman playwrights and author of the script for The Secret Garden, the popular musical currently running on Broadway.

Hartman, the only student working on an MFA in directing in UI’s theatre department, was born and raised in Peyslip. She did her undergraduate work at Western Washington University in Bellingham, Wash., and earned a degree in English/theater/secondary education. She also professionally in Statts for some time, and last year was certified to teach English and drama.

Even before she had completed her student teaching, however, Hartman knew she wanted to direct. Her ultimate goal is to one day secure a position in a theatre as artistic director or to own and manage her own theatre company. She’s already moving in that direction, having received a directing internship this summer at the New York Shakespeare Festival.

For now, however, in the midst of her first year at UI, she’s concentrating on putting together one production per semester, the major requirement in receiving an MFA in directing. Last semester Hartman directed The Sorrows and earlier this spring, she did the choreography for As You Like It. In addition to Night Mother, she is also currently choreographing the up-coming production of Die Fledemaurer.

Needless to say, Hartman’s forte and passion are for movement and physicalization. So the more intellectual and emotion-based work she has done in Night Mother has required her to venture a little bit out of her element. Hartman maintains she finds value and importance in being able to do both.

“Night Mother, I’m more of a guide than a creative force,” she says. “The staging is not as important as the characters, the words and the feelings.”

The show, according to Hartman, calls for a very naturalistic interpretation; that is, one that requires a representation of the environment that is as close to reality as absolutely possible.

“I hesitated choosing Night Mother, she admits, because it really calls for a completely rest period — running water . . . a working stove . . . everything.

But Hartman decided it was time to do a show in the realism genre, and the decided to

The Baltic States are different than the Balkans and Estonia is far from Macedonia. However, these are the most common misconceptions when I try to define the location of my country, Estonia, on the world map.

Estonia, once a part of the former Soviet Union, lies on the easternmost part of the Baltic Sea, has a common border with Russia, and is 80 km across the Gulf of Finland. After 50 years of occupation by the Soviet Union, it regained independence in 1991 as a result of the breakup of the Soviet empire. Within the last three years Estonia has rebuilt democracy and reintroduced its own currency. Last year it was one of the fastest growing economies in Europe. Factors that have contributed to the rapid growth are the people’s serious work-ethic, the attraction of foreign investment, stable currency and a wise, young government.

At the European summit in Vienna last year, a doomsayer tried to turn away Estonian Prime Minister Mart Laar because the 33-year-old, with his natty check and wavy blond hair, looked much too young to be the prime minister of a state. To add to Laar, the ministers of foreign affairs, defense, economics, finance, interior and justice are all men ages 27 to 30. Estonia, the first economic success story of the former Soviet Union, has benefited from the young government.

“Younger people are willing and able to learn market principles,” Laar said. Estonia’s national Security Minister Indrek Kanter, a 26-year-old backer, believes young government officials are more willing to implement tough, painful reforms. The government of Estonia has been forced to make many unpopular decisions concerning people’s everyday life in a situation where prices are rising to the world level but wages lag behind.

Not just another alternative band

Mike Cole
Staff Writer

Finally, a band that is right up Moscow, Idaho’s alley. Well actually rock band. Here’s Taylor Raxx, is going to be at John’s Alley April 21. I thought that it would be a good idea if people had the opportunity to avoid a total clean state and read a little of what to expect before going to hear these guys play. HTR was formed in the summer of 1990. Growing from the Vegas Valley, HTR has branched out to gain air play on alternative radio stations across the nation. Listening to this triad, you may be able to pick up on the gamboling roots of the band’s style. HTR gamblings on entering a postmodern realm and coming out with a sound that its listeners can understand. Perverse, the band’s first album, is a collection of a variety of styles. The album contains the drum machine sound of the early 80’s, a funk flavor and tendencies towards Yes and King Crimson. My first time through Perverse I picked up hints of a drum machine but I had to check the inside cover to confirm my suspicions. Obviously HTR has taken a plastic synthesized cop-out sound of the past and turned it into something original. It was still very difficult to hear exactly when a drum machine was being used or not. Moving away from the use of a live drummer does not mean that HTR has discarded the idea of musical diversity. All three band members make more than one musical contribution to their sound. Scott Espinola plays guitar, keyboards, rhythm, as well as singing. Bent Legault also plays guitar, keyboard, and songs. Ty Maretta plays bass and rhythm. It’s really no surprise that two out of the three play keyboard as it is by far the most prevalent sound on the album. Getting past the music to the lyrics, I found that HTR could relate to the average kid by their recognition that not everybody experiences the heaven and hell of life’s extremes. Perverse contained lyrics about lack of inspiration as opposed to the inspiration of love death and any other heavy topic a band can put together. The message became sort of an anti-thesis to the redundant thesis of today’s music. HTR caught my attention with songs like “Nagasaki Jokes,” and “Skid Impact and the Smell of Burnt Rubber.” The range of style is indicative of their effort to prevent a new and diversified message. Don’t be confused with a new sound as being filled with moral teachings or censored subject matter. HTR can get just as raw as the rest of them. There are plenty of allusions to various forms of propaganda which were well placed. It was the fact that these guys didn’t come across as attempting to be so pretentious that they separated themselves from their listeners who saved them. I would recommend going to hear Tabu Raxx play at John’s Alley simply because they’re a new sound that’s worth checking out. They sound always better live especially if one has a few beers in them. HTR wasn’t my favorite band to review but they were worth the time to at least sit and listen to at least one evening. HTR could be a band of the future but right now they’re wallowing in the reality of the present.

When I first saw the movie, Dogfight, on the video store shelf, I was shocked — a River Phoenix movie I hadn’t heard of! I was immediately intrigued. In this low-key sleeper, Phoenix portrays a young soldier in the 60’s. He and his buddies are spending their last night stationed in the town. Just for fun, they all pitch in $100 each to see who can get the ugliest date. The winner of the “dogfight” collects the pot. The soldiers split up and go in search of ugly women, agreeing to meet in a certain bar later that night. Phoenix wanders into a small diner and orders a large “chicken-fried” turkey (Lili Taylor — Mythic Pizza, Better Off Dead) to go on a date, and takes her to the dogfight finals. Taylor may not be beautiful, but she is smart and is wise to his scam.

A funny thing happened on the way to the dogfight, however: Phoenix developed a fondness for Taylor. She is understandably hurt and humili-ated by his lies and his friends’ childish game, but Phoenix spends the rest of the night trying to make it up to her. Director Nancy Savoca uses a very subtle hand. She doesn’t have the characters happening upon any violent anti-war demonstrations, or tripping over drug-dazed, hippies, like some 60’s-era films seem compelled to include. She focuses on the growth of the relationship between this wall-flower and over-zealous Marine. The script itself has in definite weak spots. Occasionally the characters’ motivations is difficult to understand. What is the attraction between these two opposites? Could it be simply that he is a lovably G.I. looking for some companionship before he goes off to war? Is her self-esteem so low that she could forgive him so easily for entering her in a contest so disgusting and degrad- ing? The film doesn’t really answer these questions, but that actually makes it more realistic: there are no simple answers in life, why should there be in movies?

Overall, it is a well acted, absorbing story not about the 60’s, a soldier and a waitress, or sexist attitudes. It is a good story about two people.

The Metallica box set, worth the money

Lance Gravely
Staff Writer

I know the high price of Metallica’s live box set, Live At Ronnie’s, Blueje and Forge, has made list of Metallica fans out there weary of buying one. It took me three months of penning before I finally bought it.

Once I had bought a set and listened to the five award of the world’s most popular heavy metal band, I knew, immediately, that all that money was well spent.

Coming is a miniature replica of their Whenever We May Roam World Tour travel cases, the set includes the buyer’s choice of either two cassette or three compact discs, recorded during five concerts in Mexico City and three video tapes of live footage, one of 1989 concert in Seattle and two of a 1992 concert in San Diego. Aside from the nine hours of head-banging delight spreaded from the overworked speakers, a collection of written stories and photos taken during the tour and a large stencil of the set’s cover design are included.

Listening to the CDs, I was immediately taken back to their awesome concert in Anchorage, Ala., two years ago. Everything they did was a concert, from the explosive beginning of “Enter Sandman,” to the 16 minute rendition of “Seek and Destroy,” was included in the set.

Unlike other live sets in which the vocalists’ lyrics are buried underneath a wall of blasting guitar chords and pounding drums, the vocals of James Hetfield can be heard clearly above the performances of guitarist Kirk Hammett and Jason Newsted and drummer Lars Ulrich.

Starting the CDs off with “Enter Sandman,” the band continues to perform almost every song from their five albums. Some sound better live than recorded. “Sad But True” is more power stumpung, “Welcome Home (Sanitarium)” is more harrowing and “Whiplash” is ten times heavier than it ever was on Kill ‘Em All. Even the audience gets a chance to participate, In the songs “For Whom the Bell Tolls,” “You’re Welcome” and “Master of Puppets,” they gave a boost to the already fantastic set.

The videos, especially the Seattle tape, offer up highlights to fans who may have missed the band’s concerts. The famous stint where the statue of Lady Justice and the stage’s backdrop rise to leapers at the conclusion of “...And Justice for All” are on the tape. So are songs like “The Thing That Should Not Be” and “Blackened,” neither of which were performed in Mexico City.

The San Diego tapes, while basically serving as a visual version of the CDs, show the band’s humorous side. From the verbal antics of the band before the concert to Hetfield commanding a second set of drums and getting into a “duel” with Ulrich.

While the price of $80 for the cassette version and $90 for the CDs looks grim, it might be taken into account that the band will probably never release another live album. Considering that, the set is more valuable than the price suggest.

So ignore that bucking by the god of heavy and hop, go out and BUY IT.

ESTONIA

The government’s uncompromising market policies, however, have won praise from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

Estonia’s youngest senior official, 27-year-old Foreign Minister Juri Luik, says the criticism that he lacks experience.

“The question is, who in this country has experience for today’s problems? No one,” said Luik, who became acquainted with most of his fellow government officials at the stronghold of Estonia’s students and intelligence during the Soviet occupation, the University of Tartu. Many belonged to the same fraternity, the Estonian Students Society.

There are a myriad of problems the young government and people have to face. The Soviet occupation has left the land devastated. Russia has delayed the withdrawal of its Red Army troops from Estonia and neighboring Latvia. Rumanization, repression and emigration diminished the percentage of Estonians in their own land from 88 percent before the occupation to 62 percent in 1991. They are one of the oldest of established peoples of Europe, having lived on the same territory for 2000 years.

Today, Estonia is becoming a popular tourist attraction. Being the only Estonian at U1 and in Moscow has its merits and drawbacks: However, it is a big responsibility. People unconsciously attach a person’s features to the white nation, which is not always true. At first sight they appear calm and reserved, but are very amicable once you break the distance.

NIGHT

You first read and fell in love with WWU, her focus — as opposed to the set. Night Mother is a play about the relationship between a mother and daughter and how it changes in the course of one evening after the daughter informs her mother that she plans to kill herself. The daughter, Jesse, played by Nickie Pouy, is an epileptic whose husband leaves her with one son and is forced to move back home with her mother, Thelma, portrayed by Troy Spreker.

"You first read in the first few pages that Jesse intends to commit suicide and the rest of the show is about Thelma trying to figure out why and about the two of them coming to an understanding about each other," she said.

Hartman points out that even though the play is about a very sad issue, there is an element of hope as Jesse learns to take control of her life.

"She's finally empowering herself... It's not all just gloom and doom," said Hartman.

Hartman says she even finds herself laughing at the absurdity of the dysfunctional mother-daughter relationship: "the way they don't even listen to each other... It's so realistic." Then she asks herself, and challenges the audience to do the same, "Why am I laughing at this?"

Hartman commends her excellent cast, her stage manager Kathy Campbell and props mistress Jo Nelson for their hard work and dedication. "They've been really wonderful," she said.

Come out and help support the graduate element at our university by attending this student-directed production of Night Mother. The show runs April 21, 22 and 23 at 8 p.m. in the Collette. Admission is free.

Credentials boosts Holt in new position

Matthew D. Andrew

Sports

The women's basketball team received its biggest boost of the season over the weekend.

Saturday, the UI athletic department announced the new recruit for the open head coaching position.

The Vandals now have a big plus on their side with the hiring of Julie Holt, formerly the head coach for the Gonzaga University.

Along with a strong returning team for her first year, Holt has many credentials on her side. Holt will go from leading her former team to a semifinal finish at the National Invitational Tournament last season as the 22nd record they posted.

Holt is not a stranger to the Idaho campus. She is married to the Nick Holt, who is off to be an assistant basketball coach at UI.

This is one of many attributes she made the job much more appealing to apply for. The main drawback was leaving the team she has worked hard part-time together for the last four seasons.

Holt's second Division I basketball since 1980, she stands on familiar ground. She first landed a job at the University of the Pacific as an assistant while working to receive her master's degree in physical education with emphasis in coaching/mentoring. After this she took the reigns of her first head coaching position at the University of Nevada Reno.

In her 17th season, the Vandals went 16-7 and were invited to the NCAA championship but were knocked out in the first round.

This is the Vandals' first head coaching position at the University of Idaho. Holt is known for winning with an overall percentage.

In 1977-78, Holt finished fifth in the Pacific Coast Athletic Conference and now as the Big West. She matched up against many top 20 schools like Long Beach State, University of Nevada-Las Vegas and San Diego State and still posted a 380 overall win percentage.

Holt picked up a brief stint as an assistant at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas. This was followed by joining the coaching ranks as an assistant at Gonzaga in which in turn led her to the UI.

Holt will need to become accustomed to some of the fringe benefits involved with a school of such magnitude. Besides having money to recruit with, she will have scholarships. She has previously built programs with practically nothing. It's only a matter of time to see what she can do with them.

Holt has been involved in numerous related activities. She is a voting member of the Associated Press Top Twenty weekly poll and a staff member at the John Stockton Basketball Camp.

Holt has quite a bumpy road ahead of her reconstructing a 3-22 season and losing three seniors — one of whom was the leading scorer, free-throw shooter and team leader.

Tesar sets new record to lead track teams

Runner shatters school record in Oregon Invitational

Lance Gravelly

Contributing Writer

Tanya Tesar got around to pummel through the track circuit where she shattered her own school record in the heptathlon at the Oregon Invitational last weekend to lead the UI charge in two separate meets.

Oregon Invitational

Club wins home field season opener

Matthew D. Andrew
Sports Editor

Playing on its home field for the first time this season, the UI baseball club made a killing of its opponent.

In a double header against Northwest Bible College out of Keloland, Wash., the team opened its first game with 18 hits.

Matt Jamison went 3-3 hitting a home run as the designated hitter for the team and Jim Haas scored around the bases for an inside-the-park home run. Likewise, the rest of the team had their chance to swing the bat as the team won 21-1.

Matt Sasser went the distance for the team which ended up being only four innings. The game ended only due to the mercy rule. He gave up one earned run and one home run.

Others who had multiple hits for the team include: right fielder Ryan Williams who batted 2-3 and stole five bases on five attempts, shortstop Rob Kinscore went 2-4, first baseman Dave Smith knocked 2-2, Scott Cone batted 1.000 and Eric Utley 2-3.

Altogether, the team had 18 hits in the first game to pick up their seventh win.

The second game proved to be equally as productive for the team as they came out with 13 hits and the win. The game ended the same as the first, in the fourth because of the mercy rule.

John Konrad pitched the game and had a good outing letting up one base on balls as well as one earned run. Konrad also had six strikeouts and three hits.

Those with multiple hits for the team include: Williams, 2-4, Daryl Retiernson 2-3, Kinscore 4-4 with a homer, two doubles, a single and four runs batted in.

The team ultimately won 14-1. All in all there were roughly 40-50 people in attendance ranging from the rugby game, soccer games, volleyball, basketball and baseball game.

Second baseman for the team, Daryl Retierson commented about the two games, "we came out to play, the yard was looking real nice, it was great to be out there and came up with good pitching and hitting."

The team will play this Wednesday at home against Eastern Washington University at 4 p.m. at Guy Wicks Field.

Retierson also said, "we are two teams that know each other pretty well, and we are looking to try and carry over from these last two games and hope Mike Cole has a good day on the mound."

The team will also play a weekend at Guy Wicks when they took on Western Washington on Saturday at 11 a.m. in a double header at seven innings each and Sunday at 10 a.m. for nine.

The UI team had games scheduled for earlier in the season but due to rain outs and cancellations. The remainder of the club's schedule is going to be played at home.
