Rupture causes big stink

Katie Lyons-Hoseline

The Moscow Fire and Police Departments evacuated sororities, fraternities and apartment houses surrounding the Janess Engineering Building Wednesday afternoon when a gas main rupture occurred on the construction site.

"The sound of the gas rushing out could be heard from as far away as the Student Union Building. Firemen were busy evacuating people from Sixth Street to Idaho Street on campus.

"There was not a lot of danger. It was away from the building, not a real threat," Washington Water Power employee Jim Stramme said.

"There was a tremendous fire danger. Not here (at the accident scene), but down wind. All it would take is a pole light or a cigarette," Moscow Fire Chief Philip Caffin said.

Palouse Country Electric was drilling post holes for a temporary barricade around the construction site. A half hour after the rupture occurred the gas main was shut off by WWP officials. They had gotten a backhoe to dig to the pipe closer to the street in order to stop the gas.

The yellow pipe has a six-inch gash and will have to be replaced.

Chapters win awards for past year of work, achievements

Tim Heimke

News Editor

After a year of turmoil, the UI Greek System has finally been recognized for the hard work they have put in over the past three semesters.

Last night the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils awarded their annual awards to chapters and individuals in the UI Greek System. The SUB Ballroom was full of chapter representatives eager to see which houses would receive the awards for their achievements over the past year.

The top awards of the evening were awarded in honor of Chapter Excellence recipients. Again this year, there were a total of six chapters rewarded for overall achievement as a chapter. Winners for 1994 are: Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Gamma, Gamma Phi Beta, Farmhouse, Phi Gamma Delta and Pi Kappa Alpha.

Greek chapters rewarded for achievement in scholarship were Phi Gamma Delta for IPC and a tie between Gamma Phi Beta and Kappa Kappa Gamma for Panhellenic.

Winners for the annual Greek Week competitions were also announced. Winners for 1994 are Panhhouse and Pi Beta Phi with Alpha Kappa Lambda and Alpha Gamma Delta placing second, Kappa Sigma and Delta Gamma came in third for this year.

Awards for outstanding work in the area of Alumni Relations for IPC went to Phi Gamma Delta and for Panhellenic went to Delta Gamma. Both chapters have achieved excellence in networking their alumni into chapter operations. Newsletters and alumni letter programs are two examples of what these chapters have worked to establish to show appreciation to their alumni.

Awards for outstanding Community Relations for Panhellenic went to Delta Gamma and for IPC to Phi Gamma Delta. These chapters have been active in community projects involving residents of Moscow and other local communities. Chapter members of all Greek houses find it rewarding to work with community residents and feel as if they are adding something to the people who have given to them.

Those chapters who were awarded the outstanding Greek Relations awards are from IPC, Tau Kappa Epsilon, and from Panhellenic, Gamma Phi Beta. These chapters are those who have worked to gain more positive relations with fellow chapters on campus. This may involve sponsoring events to advance the Greek System in the education on issues and topics facing the UI chapters.

The new award of 1994 for Social Event Monitoring Committee Risk Management was given to Delta Chi. The men of this fraternity have been active in ensuring safety in their activities.

Bartenders plan to collect canned food

The Moscow Bartender’s Association is sponsoring their first annual canned food drive through May 1. Participating bars include: Mingle’s Moscow, the Nobby Inn, West Fourth, the Garden Lounge, Johnnie’s Las Hadas and Chinese Village. People should call participating bars to check on specific programs at each bar.

Women’s Center to hold herbal session

The UI Women’s Center is sponsoring “Another Choice: Herbal Alternatives for Women’s Health Care” Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. at the center. Women can learn natural approaches to flavoring with the rhythms of their monthly cycles. Herbal support for menopause, headache relief and other health issues will be explored by local Herbalist Linda Kingsbury. This program is free and open to the public.

Summer registrants may face price hikes

If anyone is thinking of taking a course during the UI Summer Sessions they should register now. Starting May 18, students will pay between $5 to $8 more per credit for summer classes. Students who register and pay by May 17 will not have to pay this increase in fees.

There will still be no additional charges to out-of-state registrants. Students should register as soon as possible. If anyone has any questions, they should call the Summer Programs Office at 882-6237.

Biological Sciences to host presentation today

There will be another Biological Sciences presentation today from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. in Life Sciences South Room 277. Margaret Kidwell, Ph.D., of the University of Arizona, will present “The Evolution and Horizontal Transfer of P Transposable Elements in Drosophilids and Other Insects.” This presentation is free and open to the public.

Copy Center open more hours for busy students

The UI Media Center Annex Copy Center will be open the weekend of April 30 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The SBP Copy Center will have regular weekend hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Women’s Center hosts final program of year

The UI Women’s Center will present an “End of Year Finger Food Potluck” Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. at the center. The Women’s Center will provide the refreshments and they invite everyone to join them in wrapping up the 93-94 school year with their favorite savory or sweet finger foods. They can show off their favorite recipe or bring in a box of crackers. All eating styles are welcome to attend this program.

Chautauqua continues in honor of new library

The UI Library Plaza Chautauqua will continue today from 12 to 1 p.m. with more music, theater and speakers. This event is in celebration of the completion of the UI Library.

History course open for Clark Fork Sunday

Northwest history is the subject of a one-day course being offered Sunday at the UI Clark Fork Field Center in Clark Fork, Idaho. “Selling the Great Northwest: Steamboats, Railroads and Tourism” will be taught by Charles Schwantes, UI history professor and author.

The class will look at how transportation facilities shaped the Pacific Northwest and how they continue to play a role in the image of the area. The course will include discussions on how people came to the area, the importance of mail service in breaking the isolation and the roles of the Columbia and Clark Fork Rivers.

There is a $14 registration fee and advance registration is required. Enrollment is limited. For more information, contact the Clark Fork Field Center at 208-266-1452.

Dead week, finals come up for all students

The UI will move into Dead Week next week. There will be no examinations in regular classes from May 2-6. Finals will then be given May 9-13.

Convocation programs available to everyone

Copies of the 1994 Honors Convocation program are available at the Honors Center in the Psychology Building Room 102. They are available to anyone who was unable to attend the convocation or who would like additional copies.

Girl Scout Cookies help raise money for kids

Girl Scout Cookies are on sale now. When a person buys a box of Girl Scout Cookies they help provide training for volunteers, prevention programs for girls and special assistance for those in need. In Girl Scouting, no girl is left out. For more information call the Girl Scouts Inland Empire Council at 1-800-837-9478.

Payroll Office reminds students about summer

The UI Payroll Office reminds students of their final paycheck of the semester. If a student has direct deposit they need to remember to leave their account open to receive their final paycheck on May 20 or June 3. These students need to leave a self-addressed, stamped envelope with their department so they can mail their final pay receipt to them. Direct deposit remains in effect until a student stops it. Students are reminded to update their banking information if any changes are made.

If a student receives a regular paycheck, they need to take a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Payroll Office in Administration Annex Room 226. They need to write their social security number on the inside flap of the envelope. If a student is leaving campus permanently, they need to stop by the Payroll Office to pick up a forwarding address card. W-2 forms will be mailed using these cards.

For more information on any of these arrangements, call the Payroll Office at 881-6353.

Rotary Club offers summer scholarships

The Moscow Rotary Club is offering full scholarship awards for selected youths to attend a week’s International Leadership Training Camp to be held on Lake C'hehalis August 13-20. Educators and leaders of youth aged 18 to 25 are encouraged to nominate candidates for the scholarship awards valued at $300 each. Interested individuals may apply directly to the club.
Diversity results come through

After siftng through 129 completed surveys, the UI Faculty Council ad hoc committee on cultural diversity came to some interesting conclusions.

William K. Swagerty, professor of history, served as chairperson of this committee and feels satisfied with the survey results. "We reached out to our intended audience and got a feel for what they would like to see," said Swagerty.

The survey was administered to 35 percent of the UI faculty. Those participants were chosen through systematic random sampling. The goal of the survey was the found out where the faculty stands on issues surrounding cultural diversity at the UI. The survey consisted of 13 questions and an open section for written remarks.

The ad hoc committee was working to compile information to provide to Marvin Henberg who had previously worked on the Cultural Diversity Task Force. "Our goal was to provide Henberg and his group with some usable data on how we feel faculty feels about diversity," said Swagerty.

Seventy-eight percent of the 129 faculty members surveyed feel cultural diversity is an issue which needs addressing at the UI. Nearly 77 percent feel it is important to recruit and retain more minority faculty at the UI.

Of the 848 faculty members only 40 are blacks, Asians, Hispanic or Native American, according to the UI faculty by gender and ethnicity data compiled by professor Larry Hunter through the Information Management Services. Swagerty said the results demonstrate the feeling of the faculty are open to a more diverse faculty base. When asked if they feel they would support the concept of administrative recruitment and funding for retention of minority faculty at UI, 46 percent said they would. Swagerty said there were some who were against it were unanimously against set-aside funds.

"As can be seen in the response, the faculty agrees with the Task Force that Cultural Diversity is an issue which needs addressing at UI," said Swagerty about the results of the survey.

Sixty-four percent support the idea of adding one required non-Westerners perspective course to the general university requirement. The same amount felt adding faculty courses in Native American Studies to the core is also needed. "There also seems to be a great deal of interest in international faculty exchanges in such areas as Latin America, Africa and/or Asia," said Swagerty. Seventy-one percent felt it was important to make the faculty more diverse. The faculty also felt enthusiastic to have faculty exchanges with black land grant colleges and Native American colleges in the United States with 52 percent support. There was less support for Asian and African studies, receiving 42 and 37 percent respectively.

Of those who offered written comments on their survey, several questioned the formatting and wording of the questions, said Swagerty. There was a near equal number who supported the work of the ad hoc committee to see exactly how the faculty feels on the issues of cultural diversity. The questions of this survey did not include a section on the Cultural Diversity Task Force’s recommendations for creation of a Center for American Pluralism, but several respondents volunteered in writing their feelings in support of the idea.

"I feel that the study had a wide variety of results and that each result was important in its own way. The study also showed that there is a wide variety of feelings towards diversity among the faculty."

SUB gives sounds to Gritman Center

The Student Union Building at the UI has turned the noise of construction into sweet music for the clients of Gritman's Adult Day Health Program.

The music is coming from the donation of the record library from the SUB's Stereo Lounge. As part of the SUB's new facelift, the basement Stereo Lounge became offices for student organizations. In this day of CDs, SUB staff had a hard time finding a home for a huge record library is excellent condition. A "garage sale" disposed of most of the rock 'n' roll records, but a vast selection of pop and classical titles remained.

Finally, a participant in BRIDGES, UI's community service-volunteering program, suggested that Gritman's Adult Day Health program might have a use for the records. A quick phone call to Sharon Benson, Director of Gritman Therapy Center, confirmed that suspicion. Benson said she would be delighted to offer her senior clients a music library of artists ranging from Pat Boone to Mozart. David Mucci, SUB Director, was also pleased to know that the records were going to people who would really enjoy them.

Gritman is developing the Adult Day Health program to offer activities and services to seniors in their service area. BRIDGES volunteers will participate in the program next fall.

College career takes longer these days

As pre-registration has started, many college students are reminded that graduating under a four-year program is frequently extendable to a five, six or even seven-year program. With the difficulty to obtain a job without a degree in today's economy, students are forced to adjust their schedules accordingly.

Most students start college with a definite direction and tend to lengthen their stay by changing majors one or more times. Another reason for the extension of their college career is the requirements of the sequence of courses. They are unable to continue on until a course is completed, so they fill in with other classes that may not apply to their academic study. Some students must work to pay for college and are, therefore, reducing their credit load which leads to additional years of study. The extension of a college careers causes many problems, and people are searching for ways to reach their graduation date earlier.

Students also are financially and emotionally tied down by their family, feel that they should graduate as soon as possible to alleviate that large expenditure from their parent's income.

Some believe that something should be done to help students graduate within four years or less. This would be beneficial to the economy as educated people could enter the job market sooner. There have been several efforts made to make this task easier. If a student is granted financial aid, they are required to take a full-time credit load. This could encourage the recipient to take 16 credit semesters and enable them to reach the 128 credit requirement within four years.

Many high school students are beginning to take Advanced Placement courses and enter into their college career with several credits all ready out of the way. This idea relieves some pressure to take large course loads in an effort to finish early.

Another option for the student is an economical summer semester. The summer schedule is flexible to enable a student to still have a job to help with any financial struggle. Summer is a great time for students to get a few classes out of the way to catch up or move ahead toward the goal of graduation. Summer Programs would like to help students explore the areas of the extended time period to receive a degree by offering over 600 courses during the summer session. Pick up a copy of the Summer Bulletin at various locations on campus or call the Summer Programs Office at 885-6237 for more information.

Team places in contest

A team of UI students carried home the trophy for Most Creative Design in the fourth annual International Environmental Design contest sponsored by the Waste Management Education and Research Consortium at New Mexico State University.

UI competed against 24 other teams from universities and community colleges in the United States and Mexico.

The contest called for teams to design and demonstrate a process for cleaning five acres of soil contaminated with pesticides, heavy metals, organic compounds and halogenated compounds. The team also had to prepare a reclamation process to seed 100 square miles for water harvesting.

The completion required students to submit a written report and demonstrate a bench-scale model of the process. They were also judged on an oral presentation and a poster demonstration.

Members of the UI Environmental Design team are:
Karen Chamberlain, a senior biology major from Coeur d' Alene; Louis Doughty, a senior geology major from Tacoma, Wash.; Jennifer Litsivshnik Mehan, a senior horticulture major from Tuba City, Alaska; Robert Menihan, a senior biology major from North Dakota; and Kurt Thorne, a senior chemical engineering major from Great Falls, Mont.

Dr. Waduch "Woody" Adams, professor of chemical engineering and adviser to the team, was not surprised the students earned the Most Creative Design award. "They presented some pretty creative ideas in their project that made their effort stand out," said Adams.

Most teams used acids or an agent to clean up the soil, but the UI team's approach was different.

The water was first run through a compost column to remove heavy metals and then through a bioaccumulator to remove pesticides and salts.

Team members say guidance from Adams, and Dr. Dan Crawford of the UI Center for Hazardous Waste Remediation Research contributed to the creativity of their entry.

They also acknowledge help from Dr. Dirk Gembert of the Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Company.

The team was sponsored by a $10,000 grant from Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Company.

University officials travel to honor Benson for service

A UI regent, president and provost traveled to Salt Lake City this week to honor the spiritual leader of one of the larger churches in the world.

Ezra Benson, 13th prophet and president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is one of five distinguished alumni to be inducted into the UI Alumni Hall of Fame this spring. Ill health precludes him from attending this spring's commencement ceremony where the other inductees will be honored.

President Gordon B. Hinckley, First Counselor, and President Thomas Monson, Second Counselor, received the UI delegation and accept the alumni award on behalf of President Benson.

UI President Elizabeth Zinner invited UI Regent Ray Moorin of Moscow to accompany her and Provost Tom Bell to Salt Lake to deliver a plaque and congratulatory letter to Benson.

Benson attended graduate classes at UI in 1931. He carries a degree in engineering major's degree from Brigham Young University in 1935 and his master's from Iowa State University in 1977.

Benson served as a UI county extension agent for Franklin County for two years and for eight years was state economist and extension specialist for the state of Idaho. On special assignment from the church in early 1946, Benson spearheaded a massive effort to help feed and clothe victims of war-torn Europe.

He gained international prominence while serving as Secretary of Agriculture from 1952 to 1960. Upon leaving the post, Benson was called "the greatest agricultural statesman of all times ... a spiritual statesman." On Nov. 19, 1985, Benson was named president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He has served on the National Executive Board of the Boy Scouts of America, the national Council of Farmer Cooperatives, the Robert Tull Memorial Foundation and the Council of Twelve for the LDS Church.

Benson has received numerous awards, including two Washington Honor Medals from Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge; the High Cross of the Order of the Italian Republic for helping to solve Italy's food shortage in 1957.

He gained international prominence while serving as Secretary of Agriculture from 1952 to 1960.
The UI Greek System has been through a rough year but the last major event for this semester showed more signs of hope than despair.

The annual Songfest competition which marks the end of Greek Week was held in the SUB Ballroom Tuesday night. The competition was fierce but friendly as houses strutted their stuff singing their songs.

Mardi gras by a piano on the stage, Greek houses altered plans to accommodate the obstruction. Technical difficulties also delayed the start of the competition by nearly half an hour. When competition started, there was a great display of spirit in the UI Greek community.

Farm House fraternity, dressed in suits and ties, started out the evening with their selection of “Cecilia” followed by a crowd pleasing rendition of “Under the Boardwalk.” Farm House donned sunglasses for their second selection.

Delta Delta Delta was up next with their version of Sesame Street songs. Complete with Big Bird and Bert and Ernie, the Tri-Delta women put on quite the show visiting their friends in “Greek Street.”

The women of Gamma Phi Beta then presented a sample of songs from The Sound of Music. Words were changed to depict Greek life to “Do-Re-Mi” and “Favorite Things.”

Kappa Sigma fraternity was on stage next with a classy presentation of “It’s the Still of the Night” dressed in slacks and ties complimented with sunglasses.

The song of Phi Kappa Tau then depicted the 1970’s group of Village People with their “YMCA.” The crowd seemed to like the men who looked quite similar to the original group.

Alpha Kappa Lambda fraternity presented a Galaxy medley of “Jump in the Line.” Dressed in Island attire, they danced around the stage and got the crowd involved.

The women of Alpha Delta Phi presented a night of performances of “Sisters,” a song from White Christmas, and “Find Us Faithful.” The latter was filled with live piano and violin accompaniment.

Sigma Nu then presented what some considered the best rived song of the night with “Let’s Get Drunk and Sue.” This song was a parody on the events surrounding Regina Coghill.

There was a break in the performances from the Greek chapters with a fine display of talent from Greek Advisor Linda Wilson and Interfraternity Council President Joe Smith accompanied by Alpha Phi member Jill Matsuoka. This trio provided some classics from television shows and advertisements.

The women of Pi Beta Phi presented a Unity Through Diversity performance with “UI Saturday Night.” “Geeks just Wanna Have Fun” and “Come Together Right Now.”

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity then got on the stage with all sorts of household items to sing their song long enough for “Participation Points.”

Delta Gamma then performed their versions with new words to television shows such as Sesame Street, Happy Days, Inspector Gadget, the Flintstones, The Facts of Life, Laverne and Shirley, The Brady Bunch and Oeors.

The women of Alpha Phi then did a spin-off to At the Movies. They chose songs from Revenge of the Nerds, Annie, Singin’ in the Rain, and Fame.

The men of Beta Theta Pi, dressed in jeans and white t-shirts, sang “It’s the Still of the Night” but lacked the required 20 people on stage. Then two other members carried their compositing onto the stage saying “If they can’t be here in person, they are in spirits.”

 Theta Chi finished off the competition for 1994 with their song “Theta Chi Ville,” their parody of “Margaritaville.” These men were dressed in sun tanning attire and were flinging Friskies.

The winners were announced at the completion of the competition with Alpha Kappa Lambda and Delta Gamma receiving first place, for the men and women respectively. Second place went to PanHaus and Gamma Phi Beta with third place going to Theta Chi and Pi Beta Phi.

Fraternities complete their required hours

Mike Cole
Staff Writer

Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Beta Theta Pi fraternities recently completed their court-ordered community service.

Both fraternities were ordered to complete 500 hours of community service by the Latah County Court because of alcohol violations last semester.

According to the SAE’s and Beta’s, the community service proved to be a valuable experience.

As of Monday, the SAE’s completed 347.8 hours, going above and beyond their requirement. Monday morning also brought the Beta’s submission, finalizing them at 375 hours. Beta Theta Pi had 280 hours completed going into last weekend. On Friday the chapter worked at the Library, Saturday volunteered at the Special Olympic competition.

Between these two activities the Beta members’ combined effort completed a 95 hours bringing their total to 375 hours.

Both fraternities were required to have completed their community service by Sunday but the Beta’s turned their list of calls to Genesee and 53 percent have monthly bills less than $2 for calls to Lewiston.

When compared to the large annual revenue requirement necessary for any of the possible EAS implementation methods, it is questionable whether a majority of customers would benefit from EAS, the commission said. “Even the least expensive route, Lenn to Lewiston, entails a $14,700 annual revenue requirement for Inland, or $460 per Lenox customer. The least expensive method for EAS to Moscow and Genesee involves an annual revenue requirement for Inland of $45,836, or $1,432 per Lenox customer. When compared to yearly toll revenue from Leon Custom’s customers to Moscow, Genesee and Lewiston of $10,000 to $11,000, even the least expensive EAS route cannot be justified economically.”

“Therefore, it is recommended that the Idaho Public Utilities Commission order the Idaho Department of the Interior to require Inland’s USF draw be quadrupled,” the commission said. “EAS to Moscow and Genesee would require the draw be increased a minimum of ten times. The evidence presented does not warrant our passing such a burden on the state USF and the Idaho rate payers in general.”

“Policy makers on both the federal and state levels have encouraged competition as the best way to provide long-distance telecommunications services. We are encouraged by MCI’s participation in this case and its entry into the Leon market area. We also note that AT&T testified that it has introduced two new volume discount plans which may benefit Leon customers.”

“The decision in this matter was reached only after considering all the data, options and costs. Given the evidence presented, no other outcome is reasonable. We appreciate the assistance given to us by the companies and the Leon residents.”

THE TRADITION CONTINUES...
Cheating knocks down all others

With the onset of finals week many students are preparing elaborate crib sheets to stash in mechanical pencils, zipper pulls, shoes and desk joints. Many Students spend valuable time creating intricate cheating methods rather than studying and earning grades. Not every student cheats on every exam, but few students can honestly say they have never cheated. Cheating ranges from the mild — writing equations on desks or moments before the test is handed out — to the painstaking — stealing the exam from the professor. No matter how you do it, it is all cheating. And, it is all wrong.

Cheating affects more than just the higher-than-it-should-be grade given to the student who cheated. If the test is curved and the cheater successfully recovers all A's and grade, that wrongfully "earned" grade has lowered scores that rightfully should have been slates higher.

Currently one student leader is in the hot seat, accused of cheating on a political science exam last fall. ASU Senator Ian James, along with fellow student Laurna Maccon Hart, has successfully petitioned Second District Court Judge John Bengston to delay the University Judicial Council hearing. Bengston brought a civil case against James questioning the legality of the UI Student Code of Conduct should be heard before James is questioned.

Attorney Jim Siegue argued the UJC hearing would not allow James and Hart due process. It is a simple situation. They haven't won a major battle and been granted innocence, they have delayed a confrontation with UI administrators indefinitely. Hart's UJC hearing is over, nothing will be反射ed information pertaining to the test on her desk. James hearing is contingent on the decision of the legality of the conduct code. If James cheated on the exam he should be punished. If there is no tangible evidence James will not suffer from the proceedings.

They UJC is designed to decide matters involving "any violation of the Student Code of Conduct." The Student Code of Conduct maintains that academic honesty is vital to the operation, atmosphere and integrity of the UI as an academic community. No student is above being questioned in a controversial and cloudy situation, instructors and administrators should have the right and opportunity to execute punishment for cheating.

One student's performance affects every other student at this university, not to mention the integrity of the institution.

Cheating doesn't just give one student a better grade. It often lowers other students' grades, which were labored for.

Divide, conquer Nixon's forte

Be very afraid! The U.S. government and parts of the media are stepping on colored "I love Nixon" glasses on the ignorant eyes of the American public. Richard M. Nixon is dead, but that does not mean his trail of racism and white upper class patriarchy should instantly disappear in our consciousness.

I respect Nixon for never giving up, but I respect the American public for keeping him out of office as long they did. I can't close my eyes while right wing conservatives intimidate our history books propagating a refuted image of our 37th President for future generations. Unroll the prayer mat to the porcelain god, this is going to get ugly.

Foreign policy was Nixon's forte. Nixon was a master of divide and conquer techniques. Yes, Nixon set up a relationship with China, but he did it by playing China and Russia against each other. What better way to beat the "enemies" than to have them beat each other.

Nixon's ignorant policies bred some of the most damaging and destructive actions ever inflicted by the U.S. Government. Nixon is credited for his leadership on the House of Un-American Activities Committee. The hysteria of McCarthy's black listing had neighbors turning each other in, college professors fired, nazi-style mass burnings, removal, imprisonment of artistic expression and disregard for basic civil rights. Nixon helped in deporting Charlie Chaplin and ruining the careers of Will Geer and Zero Mostel. These self-righteous ideals even went after Lucille Ball. The only thing that ever came out of all this was the perjury conviction of accused ex- Alger Hiss. This was Nixon's training ground for suppressing, persecuting and publishing any list of something that didn't fit his male dominated, racist, power-hungry and self-serving agenda.

Let's look at the positive things accomplished during Nixon's time in the political arena. In 1970, Nixon nominated Harry Blackman to the Supreme Court. Justice Blackman was key in deciding the issue of -- va, Westmoreland which finally began to recognize women's rights. Ironically, the appointees to the Supreme Court voted against Nixon on things such as: abortions, the publication of the Pentagon Papers, the death sentences, watergating and bising for school desegregation.

Some say the Watergate scandal was the worst thing Nixon was ever a part of. Actually, it was the best thing Nixon ever did for the American public. Nixon woke everyone up to the fact that our government lies, bullies and operates covertly for its own agendas and then covers it up. I say "Thanks Dick, you've given future generations the proof of Presidential abuse of power."

Nixon also gave the American public the needed hand to sign

One may ask why all of the above details are relevant to the average US student or administrator.

They are very relevant because bystanders looking into the ASU organization can learn from the mistakes and solutions of students that represent UI statewide. No one person in the ASU became involved on the intent to hurt any one on a personal level. The environment of the organization just happens to be very rich in the resources that are needed to raise controversy and conflict.

UI students and administrators, don't lose faith in the ASU organization. When focused in the proper channels, the ASU has the potential for accomplishing great things. It has in the past year and will continue to do so in the future. It is the responsibility of the students to keep their elected officials in check and it is the responsibility of the administrators to offer advice when they know it is needed.

ASUI plays instrumental role, 'don't lose faith'

A s an ASU Senator and as the Peace Corps say, "It's the toughest job you will ever love!"

My term as an ASU Senator has come to a close. As I think back to when I was elected on April 21, 1993, I really had no idea of what was getting into. However, like any concerned student, I wanted to see some change.

As I began my official duties back then, I began to notice that change would not come easy. Campaigning on those improved communications between the administrations and students revealed that student and administrator decision making was not an easy task. Students and administrators at this university are so busy doing their jobs that they have difficulty trying to communicate with each other.

During the past year, UI has experienced the following: a tragedy, a Candlelight March, the State Board of Education, statewide press, revised alcohol policies, a purple ribbon campaign, establishment of an International Ballroom, the Student Union -- Idaho Union -- Student Union, tuition increases, campus safety, a misinformed lobbyist and internal strife of the ASU.

In almost all of the above situations, the ASU Senate played an instrumental role in dealing with the issues. Through thick and thin, the senate acted the best way it knew how to address each of the problems and controversies. It was quite an experience, I must tell you!

In the past month, the ASU Senate has tried to move on from all of its short falls of the past year. Not only are senators and executives learning by doing, but they are also fighting against the help when working with people in the future. Being an ASU Senate student has been an emotional roller coaster.

One may ask why all of the above details are relevant to the average US student or administrator.

Vote Silak for Supreme Court

On May 24, the nonpartisan judicial election will be held at the same time as the general primary election. I strongly urge all concerned Idaho citizens to vote for incumbent Supreme Court Justice Cathy Silak for the seat.

Cathy Silak has had a distinguished career as a federal prosecutor as well as a trial attorney. She was selected by the Judicial Council for appointment to the Idaho Court of Appeals. After hard working service there, she was appointed to the Idaho Supreme Court.

In each of these positions, she has maintained a reputation for judicial scholarship focused on the defense of Idaho, its values and its families.

As a mother of three and a concerned and involved Idaho Citizen, she has been sensitive to the issues of crime, safety and family security, which are so important to us all.

As the author of two hundred well-reasoned judicial opinions, Cathy Silak has served the people of Idaho well and her responsible leadership should be retained on the court.

Since elections come at a time when many people will be away on vacation or at a summer job, those who will be away from their precincts on May 24 are encouraged to vote now by absentee ballot.

Help Central America

Get ready for the 21st Renaissance Fair! This Saturday and Sunday, Moscow’s East City Park will be transformed to a village full of artists, craftpersons, musicians and booths offering culinary delights from around the world.

For the ninth year, the Coalition for Central America will be preparing its famous black-bean burritos. Our booth, popularly known as “el Cafe Verde,” will also offer vegetarian chili, a variety of baked goods and desserts and fruit-juice based soft drinks. And don’t forget strong, hot Nicaraguan coffee from our little red wagon in the mornings!

Over the past eight years, the Coalition has raised more than $12,000 for humanitarians in Central America at the Renaissance Fair. Proceeds from our booth also support the year-round work of the Coalition in promoting better understanding of our neighbors in Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean.

You can help this worthy cause by purchasing a burrito, beverage or dessert from the booth. Just look for the green and white striped tent on the north side of the park.

Prove worth more than ‘Art’

Colleges: I am disheartened to have to inform you that I will be declining the weak offer made me by the art department and the university to teach Art 101 next year. There are three reasons for my decision. First, while I do enjoy spend $52,000 on the provost search, (including more than $5,000 to fly each couple to campus), my reward for successfully restructuring the core Art 101, which serves approximately 600 students per year, and for receiving a $2,400/1 Teaching/ Learning Mini-Grant this semester to further course enhancement, has been a salary cut of $3,000. Second, the integrity of Art 101 — its writing element, studio component and discussion format — has been compromised by cutbacks in the number of teaching assistantships and in enrollment from what I was assured would be 20 students per recitation when I arrived, to the 50 forecast for next fall. Currently there are 25 in each section.

Third, I’ve been misled to believe for more than two and a half years that this “regular help” position would become a faculty position, something like an instructorship. Even Paul Windley and David Greene admit to the “unprofessional” handling of this situation.

In sum, I am tired of fighting battles for a course which each semester gains a smaller and smaller slice of the pedagogical pie, while UI can afford a head- hunter ($27,725) and gift baskets and flowers ($275) for the Provost search.

Under such circumstances, it’s difficult to believe the claims I frequently hear that Art 101 is essential to the UI core curriculum.

I would sincerely like to thank those of you, however, who have supported my efforts in various ways over the last four years and I wish you the very best in your future endeavors.

Family-friendly policy unfriendly

I wish to applaud Chris Miller for his editorial, "Keep kids out of classrooms," in the April 26 issue of the Argonaut.

Some would probably criticize him as "anti-kids" or "anti-family," but at least for this individual, far from it.

Briefly, the 16-4 favorable ("family-friendly") vote by the UI Faculty Council is not just a rejection of the far-sightedness shown by the negative vote of the two student members, but more significantly, it is yet another step toward further deterioration of the classroom atmosphere.

To this individual, it seems almost impossible for a parent-faculty and student not to be distracted when an infant is present in the classroom.

Now, of course, someone will produce "scientific proofs" that "it doesn't matter" — as it often happens on so many similar issues, until years later other studies find contrary "proofs."

But, one has to think with one's sixth sense to see the detrimental consequences — not just in the immediate run, but also beyond. Of course, the society has some obligation to care for its citizens, but, as with numerous other well-intended social policies (at all levels of our society), the "family-friendly" policy seems really "family-unfriendly" to this observer.

What this policy implies is that, among other things, single-parenting is acceptable — regardless of personal and social consequences — and social support will be available for those choices. Perhaps one can see how such a policy can be "anti-family" in the long run.

Enough said. But Chris, I congratulate you on your well-written, mature, far-sighted commentary on this issue.

Thank great professors

Two years ago when the Office of Teaching Enhancement was established I created a Student Advisory Board to provide me with the students' perspective on teaching and learning at the University of Idaho.

This last year, thanks to the wonderful leadership of Sean Wilson, the dedicated participation of Patti Crow and Scott Wiser, as well as many other undergraduate and graduate students, we have explored issues ranging from the need for a new Computer Fundamentals course for neophyte computer users (stay tuned for further information on that) to the privacy of grades.

One topic that has been discussed on a regular basis is identifying ways to bring faculty and students together in informal settings to encourage the growth of a campus culture in which a more personal relationship leads to a richer learning environment for everyone.

Since the end of the semester is rapidly approaching I'd like to suggest a simple way to foster good student/faculty relations that will pay off in the future. Contrary to public image, faculty don't teach for the big bucks.

It is a rare faculty member who couldn't substantially increase their salary by transferring to a non-academic job. A very large portion of the faculty teach at a university because they love their disciplines and are excited about teaching this material to others.

This doesn't mean that everyone who is excited about their field is necessarily skilled in the presentation of the material, but all of them care deeply and make an effort to present the best courses they know how.

Now where do you, the students, come in? If you've had a course this semester that you really enjoyed, please tell your professor.

Everyone enjoys being told that they have done a good job and your professors are no different. Write them a note, stop on your way out of the classroom or make a visit to their office.

In the case of a particularly good class give the professor a round of applause at the end.

I know that this sounds corny stuff but you are the recipients of brown-nosing (or its modern equivalent), but ask yourself a question: if you'd just worked for a semester to teach a group of students, wouldn't you appreciate a thank you?

Wouldn't the recognition of your students prompt you to want to come back next year and do an even better job of teaching your classes?

Have a wonderful summer and come back in the fall excited about your education and ready to work on building a campus where faculty and students work together on the enterprise of learning.

Director, Office of Teaching Enhancement

Wont forget background

In response to J.A. Porter's April 5 letter to the editor, "Time for all to be 'Americans,'" it seems to me that Mr. Porter has not reflected on the past of America.

Those who call themselves an American must understand what took place during the time of their forefathers to understand the fruits that their forefathers have produced.

Once we come to this conclusion, then, statements that Ahshapanek made won't be taken out of context.

Mr. Ahshapanek complained there isn't a Native American Cultural Center and Mr. Porter attacked back by stating he doesn't see a Caucasian American Cultural Center either.

Well, if Mr. Porter doesn't see a Caucasian American Cultural Center, he is blind. This campus is based on serving the wants and needs of the majority.

Who are the majority? So there is no need for a Caucasian American Cultural Center. For "minorities" there is a necessity for an organization and an office for that organization.

For example, the purpose of the Muslim Student Association, Women's Center, NASA, RAACE, MECHA, International Student Association, Asian Student Association, Campus Christians, is that the members of these groups can organize to make sure the university is meeting their needs.

Let's face reality. Throwing away your identity is like throwing away your culture. The idea of one American people is beautiful, but I'll never forget who I am and where I came from.

I'm black and happen to be a fruit from the tree of slavery, therefore I'm an American. I realize I'm American and I'm proud of it, but a part of me is of African descent. No matter what country I live in, I have to keep my heritage, which is not divisiveness.

I guess your ideal society would like a person like Clarence "Uncle Tom" Thomas, who has thrown away his identity to gain status.

Also, you mentioned Bosnia, the only reason why there is genocide on the Muslims is simply because they don't throw away their culture.

It is sad to say that your ideas are common in this region of America, but I advise you to sit with some people from other cultures and discuss with them what it is like to live in America.

'Super glue' weak headline

I am a casual reader of the Argonaut, I have a couple articles in a majority of the issues. I found the front page article in the April 22 issue "Down door vandalized with 'super glue'" disappointing. As the writer intended, I was attracted to read the article by the unusual headline. The two first paragraphs discussed a gun and weapons offense. I wondered how that tied in with the super glue, so proceeded ahead. The next paragraph referred to an apartment break in and stolen goods. I was perplexed. How did the gun and super glue relate to the break in? Next paragraph: "There were two incidents of vandalism..." I was still lost and there was no reference to the headline. Finally, a brief description of the headline event and an understanding of the structure of the article would have been helpful. This was an asorted listing of police-related incidents! I think the readership would have been well served by putting more time into the structure and the headlining of this week front page article.

Thanks, thanks, thanks, thanks

I would like to thank all the people who gave time for my campaign and all the people who voted for me. I would especially like to thank my girlfriend for putting up with me and convincing her friends to vote for me; Mike Grotch for helping me on election strategies and advice; Puladze Empire Graphics for the displays and flyers; Army ROTC department for support; current Senators Steve, Brent, Sean and Zahrah for inspiring me to run; my opposing candidates for running a clean campaign; Gambino's for letting Don, Mike and me advertise there; the women of Delta Delta Delta for their support, especially Raeburn and Me.

I will always be available and hope to live up to everyone's expectations of me. Thanks.

Congressional initiated environmental legislation. Nixon was forced to act on the mass screams to do something about environmental concerns. Nixon was never sympathetic to the environment, but submitted to signing the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act and the Pesticide Control Act, thanks to contentious governmental subordinates. Beware of future history books making claims that Nixon initiated any of these acts — he signed them only to maintain public support. Nixon was a master of lying to the American public, especially when it came to Vietnam. Nixon promised to get us out of Nam but it took him four full years to bring a substantial amount of troops home. Demonstrations forced Nixon to bring troops home, but it didn't stop him from increasing the bombing of North Vietnam. Wallowing in Vietnam for so long prolonged a relationship with other communist countries and denied the needed money to revive the suffering economy at home. When faced with the demonstrations against the Vietnam war, Nixon referred to the participants as "bums" and did everything he could to discredit their agenda. Nixon instructed his vice president, Spiro Agnew, to speak out against protesters as being "selfish" and "subversive to the American cause of democracy." There are documented cases of people planted among peaceful demonstrators with the sole purpose of making the demonstration violent so that the police could come in and arrest everyone. One of the most sinister things Nixon did was try to suppress the Pentagon Papers, which proved the government had lied to the public about Vietnam. Nixon was not always subversive in his outrageous big oes. In the 1979 Congressional elections, Nixon equated the Republican party with "law and order" and the Democrats with "permissiveness, crime, drugs, pornography, the hippie lifestyle, student radicalism, black militancy, feminism, homosexuality and dissolution of the family.

Poor Dick didn't even realize that some of his stereotypes were not negative, but positive. Nixon's racism reared its sickening head when he tried to delay school desegregation in Mississippi in 1969 and prevent extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. Nixon also supported his sexaholics advises when he stated, "The issue of race could benefit from a period of benign neglect." On top of all this, Nixon tried to eject a segregationist to the Supreme Court, but thank God Congress stopped him.

We all need to pay close attention to the facts of Nixon's political career. Hopefully, when America is done mourning, we can smash the rose colored glasses of propaganda.

Where Diversity Reigns
Fair offers nutrition, family fun

Melissa Welch
Staff Writer

The Moscow Renaissance Fair is back in the swing of things, offering a variety of exotic foods and free entertainment for the whole family.

The fair is this weekend so make plans now to hang out at East City Park in Moscow starting at 10 a.m. Saturday through Sunday.

In an attempt to minimize traffic and encourage pedaling, a new set of bike racks will be installed in East City Park. Four new multicolored racks, donated from the proceeds of last year’s Renaissance Fair, will be ready for use at this year’s fair.

Tweny-one non-profit organizations plan on serving dozens of traditional and non-traditional food items at the fair. The money raised goes to help each group’s special cause. Bill Clark, a booth coordinator said, “This is their biggest fund-raiser of the year.”

The fair insists all the groups prepare food that is not only tasty but interesting. The fair also insists on processed foods or commercial soft drinks be sold. They want this fair to be fun and nutritious.

New food groups included in the Renaissance Fair: The Companion Animal Aid and Placement Society will be serving fresh fruit and cookies to raise money for the rescue and adoption of animals; Girl Scout Troop No. 238 will be serving a “cookie extravaganza” to support their international peace trip; the Idaho Non-violent Wilderness Area Rescue and Defense Organization, will be serving baked potatoes to support their work in environmental crises; the Island Natives, a Polynesian Dance Troop, will serve Polynesian edibles to raise money for costumes and trips; Moscow Alternative School Center will serve cookies on a stick to raise money for a trip to London; and the WSU Student Nutrition Awareness Club will be serving teriyaki chicken sandwiches to raise money for local food banks and send members to a conference.

The sixteen returning food groups consist of Boy Scout Troop No. 345, and they will be serving their “famous gourmet sausages”; the Chinese Student Association of Washington State University, serving genuine Chinese food; the Coalition for Central America, serving black bean burritos; Festival Dance, serving “chocolate delight”; the Harvest House Clubhouse, serving specialty cookies; the Hummingbird Cold Case Center, serving homemade pastries and deserts; the Idaho Conservation League, serving fruit mojitos; and Jodi’s Daughters, serving chocolate-dipped chocolate chip cookies.

Other booths include KUDI FM who will be serving ice tea; the Moscow chapter of Bich Sigma Phi, serving sausages in many different styles; the Moscow Sister City Association, serving Bolivian salchicha, costillon, and arepas; the Palouse Asian-American Association, serving oriental food; the Palouse Clearwater Environmental Institute, serving Middle-Eastern food; Lasah/Pezce Power for Human Rights, serving “diversity cookies”; and the YWCA of the Palouse, serving salmon sandwiches and bolted shrimp.

Food won’t be the only highlight of the fair, however. The entertainment has always been one of the major festivities for the fair. The entertainment will begin with El Grupo Condor, playing music from South America; Belinda Bowler, “The Sweetheart of Idaho,” entertaining the audience with her inspiring folk music; Wilson and McKee, with guitar and hammer dulcimer, make folk music from Flathead Lake, Montana; and the Hungry Young Poets of Seattle will take the audience away with their unique music of Celtic and Scottish rock.

UI students will play a key role in the entertainment this year. Tristan Trotter will be performing along with three other students in a skits about Moscow in the year 2020. The skit was put together as part of a community organized group project. Trotter said, “the skit will portray both the good and bad of Moscow in the future.” The skit will be performed around noon on Saturday.

Peter Bassus, the coordinator of entertainment, describes the Mark Morrison Don, a local band, as incredible. They will be playing at 7 p.m. on Sunday. For those who enjoy classical guitar, Timothy Bell will be playing directly after the crowning of the High School King and Queen which should be sometime around 11 a.m. Saturday. Another local band playing alternative rock music, led by Josh Woods will be playing at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Quartet captures café audience

A point of origins: a point of direction; a point of arrival and departure; we are at these things, at some time or another, to steer us through the Bermuda Triangles of life. To give direction, to provide education — even just a starting position.

For Michael Gray, these are the kinds of sentiments that went into the decision to mainstream music, formerly the Michael Gray Quartet, Point No Point. The point of origin in mind for this musician/songwriter now based in the Northwest? A small spot on the geographical bottom of Whidbey Island in Seattle.

“It’s a great fishing spot. And it’s also a point of direction. If you’re coming away from the city, right after this spot, you can’t see Seattle anymore. And if you’re coming in, right after you pass it, you can suddenly see Seattle again.”

Gray said in his explanation of the group’s name. “And then of course, there’s the philosophical meaning...” (Insert his slightly self-conscious, good-natured smile here.)

But the philosophical aspect of Point No Point, performing tonight in the Vandelay Café, need not be any more complicated than a reference to the fact that this dynamic quartet, now working out of Seattle, is a combination of four different origin experiences — come together at one point for the purpose of making music.

Point No Point consists of Michael Gray, violin, who is originally from Philadelphia but went to school at Penn State and the University of Alaska, Anchorage; Will Dowd, drums, a Bostonian educated at the New England Conservatory; Scott Weinkauf, guitar, born in L.A., raised in New York and schooled at Cornish and the University of

Sister breaks out of Texas

Club Da Da, in Dallas, Texas, has been hiding something from the rest of the world. That something is the spent out, neo-hippy, trip-hop band of the Dallas-based band Little Sister.

Lucky for the rest of us, an executive of Ecko & R records combed through a gig of theirs and snatched them up in his little, esoteric fingers.

Perhaps more fortunately for us, Little Sister know how to wriggle their way right out of those fingers. "We said, 'we know how we want to go about this,' and then went doing a live album, and if you want to sign us, great; if not, we're gonna do it anyway," says lead singer Patricia Phillips.

It's that ambition, and constant desire, that have already gained Little Sister an incredible following in the southwest. With a nearly non-stop tour schedule, it was only logical their first album be a live recording.

Free Love and Nickel Beer, was recorded in three nights at Club Da Da last October to a sold out audience. It opens with Patrice belting out some funky, Jazzy Joplinesque vocals, on the tune "Drift Away."

From there, the album blues into one big, tight, cool jam that lasts 30 minutes. Highlights of that jam are the strange, driving intro to "Sweet Love" and the mind-blowing, melodic groove of "Take Me to a Place," which caps off the album. In between are notes layered so thickly you couldn't push your thumb through them.

However, I did have one problem with this album. Luckily, it was external. Inside the cover is a review of the album itself. Maybe no one else would care, but it's my feeling that Little Sister has good music that can stand up for itself.

The inner-stevie glorification of themselves, written by Andy Langer, is simply unnecessary ego-trip. I have minor disgust for bands that are pretentious about their own music — especially when their talent is extremely obvious. Despite this minor sour taste in my mouth, I would venture to say that Free Love and Nickel Beer is worth $13. If you don't agree you can always sell it back to Jack at RPM.

Lucky for the rest of us, an executive of Ecko & R records combed through a gig of theirs and snatched them up in his little, esoteric fingers.

Perhaps more fortunately for us, Little Sister know how to wriggle their way right out of those fingers. "We said, 'we know how we want to go about this,' and then went doing a live album, and if you want to sign us, great; if not, we're gonna do it anyway," says lead singer Patricia Phillips.

It's that ambition, and constant desire, that have already gained Little Sister an incredible following in the southwest. With a nearly non-stop tour schedule, it was only logical their first album be a live recording.

Free Love and Nickel Beer, was recorded in three nights at Club Da Da last October to a sold out audience. It opens with Patrice belting out some funky, Jazzy Joplinesque vocals, on the tune "Drift Away."

From there, the album blues into one big, tight, cool jam that lasts 30 minutes. Highlights of that jam are the strange, driving intro to "Sweet Love" and the mind-blowing, melodic groove of "Take Me to a Place," which caps off the album. In between are notes layered so thickly you couldn't push your thumb through them.

However, I did have one problem with this album. Luckily, it was external. Inside the cover is a review of the album itself. Maybe no one else would care, but it's my feeling that Little Sister has good music that can stand up for itself.

The inner-stevie glorification of themselves, written by Andy Langer, is simply unnecessary ego-trip. I have minor disgust for bands that are pretentious about their own music — especially when their talent is extremely obvious. Despite this minor sour taste in my mouth, I would venture to say that Free Love and Nickel Beer is worth $13. If you don't agree you can always sell it back to Jack at RPM.

Congratulations Class of 1994!

Quijote tells story

It's like stand-up, melodrama, restoration comedy and an evening on your grandfather's knee, all rolled into one. It's an evening with Californian Jim Cogan — storyteller extraordinary. And it's coming to the Vandal Cafe tomorrow night.

Jim Cogan, self-dubbed Quijote-Storyteller, is a dynamic, expressive tall tale-teller who travels from school, to convention, to art program, to workshop, all across the country, bringing with him his repertoire of over 300 "re-told, adopted and original stories," according to a press release.

He has experience with all kinds of audiences, tailoring each program to the age and preference of his crowd.

Cogan's background contributes significantly to his career as a traveling storyteller.

Growing up in an Irish-American Catholic household, he was continually exposed to the magic and tradition of stories, in particular through his grandfather, who used to regale him with stories of the countryside.

Cogan has developed a love of and knack for expansion of ideas through his art.

He is the developer of Arts-in-Education programs, which tour the country, visiting schools and bringing educational stories to children and students. He has been featured on public television, and gained recognition from the National Park Congress on Storytelling.

Don't miss Jim Cogan's lively presentation, Quijote-Storyteller, tomorrow night at the Vandal Cafe at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

George Clinton's "Exotic City" is straight out of the computerized sounds of the early 80s.

If anybody is wondering whether or not this is President Clinton's brother stop right now. George Clinton is a very large African-American man who is most likely looking at you and thinking, "Why didn't I think of that?" As he kicks and kicks he is singing "Hillbilly Who?" in his best Bill Clinton voice.

"Exotic City" has two tracks to keep its listeners enthralled. The first track is "Erotic City." The second track is the same only the listener doesn't have to sit through the lyrics as it is an instrumental. Spending time with George Clinton's music is like hanging out with your parochial-put-untied-hightop-wearing friend.

With the first drum machine downbeat I started thinking of my brother's days back in grade school. The music sounded straight off Beat Street. The back-up singers deftly laid on and out of an androgynous falsetto that left me imagining fingernails getting caught on pashmina.

I couldn't handle the computer programmed sound of the music. There was a sense that the funk style of the 70's had once been used by Clinton, but he had prostituted himself to the synthesized electronics of the 80's.

In all honesty — as if I haven't been honest up to this point — I don't think it's fair to flush Clinton after just one track and an instrumental. Give the guy two or three tracks and then mail it to Milwaukee where they still listen to this stuff.

Enjoy an afternoon in the countryside...

wind, walls, waves at Wawawai

All sorts of water enthusiasts invade the Snake River, some with motors such as jet skis, and some with sails.

(Above) Tom Guertler, a graduate student attending Washington State University, enjoys rock climbing a mile west of Wawawai. Granite Point is part of the Idaho batholith.

Program highlights local water safety

Our clean drinking water may be in jeopardy.

Protecting water supplies supplying communities and farm families is the focus of a town hall meeting. Local participation may view the threat in studio B of the Murrow Communication Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., May 4.

The Pullman meeting, organized by the League of Women Voters in cooperation with the Washington Water Research Center at WSU, will be nationally televised as part of a program highlighting National Drinking Water Week.

WSU faculty will make presentations following the program.

Hunting dad knows best

There is something to be said for elk hunting with your dad when you are only 12 years old. However since this is a family newspaper we can't print those words. It was a privilege for me to go elk hunting with my dad. He is an excellent outdoorsman and not in danger of getting lost in the woods. My dad and I were either on our point of view, by waking up early with a desire to get out of bed and do something. In the fall the something was usually hunting a wild elk.

I was not so blessed. I have been lost more times than I care to mention, sometimes inside buildings. I should carry a compass in my shopping mall, Water, I am a morning person. When I was young and dad and I would wake up in the morning to go with him, I went knowing two things. I was the luckier boy in the seventh grade because my dad wanted me to go hunting with him, but I also knew my bed felt like heaven at 4:30 a.m.
I liked driving with Dad because he wasn't prone to getting lost like I am. We always took the same old elk when he hunted them. We didn't always kill one but, we were always successful where there was plenty of tinge and we filled our gun all the time, however, all was not idyllic.

The trouble with hunting with my dad, aside from his habit of getting up so early, was impressed upon me one Saturday afternoon when we were hunting on Trapper Peak in the Flathead area. We had crossed a set of fresh elk tracks, and since Dad wasn't sure how to lead the animal off, we opted to follow it. I was true, to form, not exactly sure where we were or which direction we were going, but that didn't matter because I was following a set just a few steps behind Dad. He figured if I could see him I was not likely to get lost. Dad's plan worked quite well most of the time. However, I do remember a time we were hunting in snow.

I had become complacent believing I could always catch up with dad just by following his tracks in the snow. Much to my chagrin his tracks lead me into an alder thicket where there was hardly any snow on the ground.

I was easy, man lost any idea of where dad went and was about to lie down on the ground and stare myself to save the embarrassment of having to yell for help, when dad called to ask if I was having trouble?

I was surprised to hear my own voice how close to tears I was. After that I kept close to him and paid more attention to hunting. As we hurried after the elk we knew was hiding on Trapper Peak, I could make myself believe we were gaining on it. Dad said he thought it was a big cow. Bull or cow, it didn't matter because both genders are legal here. Once we got so close to the elk I heard her running away from us. I was so excited I forgot I was getting tired. We had been hunting all day and I had been looking forward to seeing the pick-up again, but I didn't know which way to walk to reach it. I'm glad Dad did.

I'm sorry that he didn't tell me how far away the pick-up was. He had told me the distance involved, I wouldn't have been so surprised later as we stopped into a clearing and saw, standing quietly on the next ridge the cow elk we had been chasing. I immediately put my gun to my shoulder and started to aim thinking I was not going to miss this easy dad stoped and asked me what I thought I was doing? I whispered, "We finally caught up with the elk, I'm going to shoot her."
ted with words that still speak to the deep recesses of my mind. "Do you know how far are from the pick-up? It is way too far to pack out the meat."
I couldn't believe my ears, and asked why followed her if we weren't going to shoot her. His only reply was short and to the point, "I just wanted to see if we could catch her." There is something to be said for elk hunting. We can't print these words.

Many of whom jump off the rocks into the frigid river from a height of 20 feet or higher.

The US Outdoors Program is building the Rock Rodeo at Granite Point tomorrow. The event is to designed close-up the area and to promote safe rock climbing.

Whether your passion is sailing, wind surfing, fishing with bait or bow, or if you're a member of the Polar Bear Club with a death wish, you can find the thrill you're looking for along the Snake River near Wawai.

Outdoor program serves summer needs

Carol Ann Knaak,
Courthome Writer

Summer will be over soon and will have its books or computers in one day. Then we’ll have all the long, and bright summer days

The Outdoor Program is defini-ably a place to keep in mind for those staying in Moscow this summer.

The greatest and misleading opinnion among many students is, like other institutions, the Outdoor Program closed for the summer.
This is not true.

"Basically nothing’s gonna change for us," says Dan Huber, who works at the Outdoor Program office. "We’ll have business as usual.

"We’ll be open. The summer is busier time," says Steve Mims,
the manager of the Rental Center.
According to Mims the current week has been the busiest so far, and the tents and sleeping bags reserved for this weekend by Wednesday. Students want to take out on trip before finals.

This weekend also marks the beginning of the new season in the Rental Center. The equipment that is rented shows a new focus in outdoor activities. "The focus is narrow. Mostly tents, wetsuits, sleeping bags, salaries - it kind of reflects what’s going on," says

Mims.

The Outdoor Rental Center will be open through the summer, and the time schedule will remain the same.

Moscow is relatively close to the two white water areas in the north-est, attracting people from all over the country. Many people from out of state rent equipment at the Outdoor Rental Center and spend their vacation doing white water type activities, or in the forested mountains.

In summer more locals take outdoor trips too.

In 1994, Moscow, all those equipment-rent-ning people means outings, especially river trips must be planned in advance.

"Probably from the end of June,
all of July and the beginning of August, you should book your river equipment two weeks ahead," warns
Mike Beiser, director of the Outdoor Program.

The Outdoor Program Office has a full series of programs for summer. They also have a range of special programs for organized groups from UI departments, schoolchildren, etc.

"We offer a series of instructional-ally cooperative trips, a water series and a mountain series," says

Beiser.

As always, additional cooperative trips will be scheduled throughout the summer and the information about these trips will be posted on the Outdoor Program Office bulletin board.

The schedule for the series of trips organized by the Outdoor Program is not yet published, but will be before the school ends.

According to Beiser, the water series consists of white water raft, trips, instructional kayak clinics.
Each series starts on campus followed by trips to one or two days.

This year for the first time, this summer’s kayak trips will be organized to go to the Washington Coast.

The mountain series includes instructional rock climbing and mountaineering, and ends with a
Mt. Rainier climb.

"Sign-up for summer starts in June 13 and continues until each activity is full. This is the differeence in summer time," stresses

Beiser.

The outdoor equipment rental center, located in the basement of the Student Union, is open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This will be the first time the Outdoor Program will be organizing an instructional sea kayak trips for the Washington Coast. Kayaking equipment can be rented for local use as well.

Volleyball fundraising May 7-8

The University of Idaho volleyball squad is sponsoring a grass volleyball tournament May 7-8.

On the first day, the tournament will feature men's and women's doubles followed by co-ed doubles Sunday.

Each tournament will be broken down into three divisions - Open, A, and Novice.

The Novice division is open to beginners only.

The tournament will be held at the east end of Guy Wicks Field. In case of poor weather, they will relocate to the Physical Education Building indoor facility.

Entry fees are $25 for new teams and the sign-up deadline is May 4. All participants are guaranteed a minimum of five matches, a custom-designed tank top and a tournament coupon package.

Prizes will be awarded to the top three teams in each division.

For more information call Melissa Stokes at 885-0246.

LCSC gets rare tennis victory

The Idaho Vandal mens tennis team wrapped up their last home match against Lewis Clark State College Wednesday on the Vandals' home courts.

The Vandal had a low roster at this final home match, and it obviously affected the outcome. Freshman Keith Brubird, who usually plays at the number three singles position and plays with Mark Hadley in the No. 1 doubles position, twisted his ankle leaving him unable to play in Wednesday's match. Also missing from the team was the No. 1 player Mark Hadley. Hadley has been temporarily removed from the team.

Filling in the No. 1 doubles spot was the Ryan Slates/Nicen Lall combination. The LCSC Herreras-Gomez team took the lead right away. Lall served the second game, but faced key points in the second set as well. LCSC, unfortunately had control over the No. 1 doubles and only let one point slip away in the 6th game.

The No. 3 and No. 4 doubles teams did not do well either. No. 3 was LCSC Mirandas-Koons defeating UI's Chris Daniels and Rusty Tontz, 6-4. The well-ranked Max Mirem and Doug Anderson played a tough match for UI coming close to beating LCSC Rees-Monzee team. Unfortunately, LCSC won the tie breaker and the match, 9-8.

In the singles competitions, Lall played LCSC Stephen Koon filling the No. 1 spot. Lall started the first game serving and coming out strong. Koon wasn't able to take any points in that game. The next points were a struggle between the two players but Koon got served and won the set 6-4. The follow-

Brennan, Hisaw battle

Andrew Longstem

Staff Writer

Hisaw-Brennan, Brennan-Hisaw - who will become the new starting quarterback? It could very well be decided tonight at the University of Idaho football team holds its usual Silver-Gold scrimmage in the Kibbie Dome at 7 p.m.

Eric Hisaw, a senior, has been the backup to National Football League-bound Doug Nussmeier for two years.

Freshman Brian Brennan has been impressive in spring practice, beating out Stanford transfer Tommy Knecht who was moved to defense, and Boise native and freshman Greg Johnson.

In the previous scrimmage last Friday, Hisaw completed 3-for-5 passes - two for touchdowns. Brennan was 7-for-14 for 85 yards and no touchdowns.

As expected, much will be decided today on the team's depth chart for the upcoming season. The Vandal coaching staff will be forced to make some difficult decisions today.

Both candidates had respectable numbers because the Vandal defense could be one of the best in the history of UI football.

In that Friday scrimmage, the defense recorded seven sacks and seven tackles for loss.

Hisaw has improved since his limited action duties last season.

He, along with running back Shane Johnson and quarterback Eric Hisaw are the offensive leaders of the Vandals.

Brennan stands tall at 6'5" and if he doesn't get the job this year, will most likely be the Vandals passer of the future.

The one thing he may lack is experience. This may be the deciding factor for Idaho Head Coach John L. Smith.

Hisaw was the Silver-Gold game's free of charge.

Liske balks at Temple job

Liske enjoys job because of relations with UI athletes

Matthew D. Andrew

Sports Editor

It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game. UI Athletic Director Pete Liske has consistently played his game at a higher level and that is how he wins. That is how the volleyball team wins. That is how the football team wins. That is how the basketball team wins.

That is how the Vandals win - time and time again.

In the end, the strength is behind the Idaho program. There is a tradition of success that can be found on these grounds. That is the one goal that appears on Liske's list of long and short term goals. For him, it is important now to enhance the competitiveness of the program is able to compete against.

Liske insists that he has not done that yet. Next year, Idaho will take on Michigan in a men's basketball tournament in Seattle, Wash. The women's volleyball team will match up with Oklahoma University. Both of these programs are continually nationally ranked.

Amidst speculation of the possibility of getting to Temple University to take over as the new coach, Liske, said, "they wanted to bring in the program up to new alignments and were looking for advice. Through a host of connections, they came up with my name. I was asked to come out and talk to them yesterday to let them know that it was talk about a program instead of applying for a job." Liske definitely has his list of connections. He played in the National Football League for 12 years. He spent his time playing for Denver and Philadelphia in the quarterback slot. He was from these days as well as playing at Penn State that caused him to make a change of careers.

After venturing out of the NFL, he went into private business for eight years. He spent time officiating at the high school and college level. After officiating NFL games it was felt that he discovered the importance of athletics in his life.

Liske is not only a football coach, he is an assistant athletic director at the University of Washington. Time sooo came

UI Athletic Director

Liske

You don't get in this business to get wealthy, usually it is because you enjoy having an impact on an athlete's life.
Stotts leads golf team to win

Senior Vandals golfer Craig Stotts defeated Eastern Washington's Brandon Bolt on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff as Idaho outslugged EWU and Idaho State in their Tuesday match. Stotts and Bolt were tied at 227 after 54 holes before the playoff. The UI women's team placed sixth out of seven teams. Tracey Murphy led Idaho with a 138-114 score. The team finished with a 803 total. The UI's 702 team score gave them a first-place finish.

Last day for baseball signup

Today marks the last day to register for Moscow Parks and Recreation's youth baseball and softball programs. Boys age 6-13 and girls 6-15 at eight join. To avoid being placed on a waiting list, register by May 1. Registration is held at Eggen Youth Center from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 883-0240 for more information.

Nussmeier off to mini-camp

Record-setting Vandals quarterback Doug Nussmeier left Wednesday for the New Orleans Saints mini-camp. Nussmeier was selected in the fourth round of the National Football League draft Monday at the 116th pick. The Saints will be interely looking at Nussmeier. Wade Wilson, Jim Everett and Mike Bick to help determine their quarterback situation for the 1994 season.

Nussmeier will return Monday evening to complete his degree in marketing at Idaho.

Athletic Director Pete Liske had been pursued by Temple University as their Athletic Director mainly to build their football program. He recently declined the offer.
LCSC won the overall team match 5-2. This was the final match for LCSC where they ended their regular season 15-8.

The UI team will travel to Boise this weekend to play in the Big Sky Conference Championships which will conclude their 1994 spring season.

The standings for the conference are in order: Boise State University, Northern Arizona University, Montana State University, Idaho State University, Weber State, UI. University of Montana and Eastern Washington University.

The Vandals will play Montana State at 10 a.m. UI will then play on 10 a.m. Saturday against either University of Montana or Northern Arizona University depending on the Vandals’ outcome today.

JOHN MCPHERSON

"Now's the part where you're supposed to say, The important thing is that you're OK, son. Give it a try, Dad. Eight simple words."

"I think your serve would improve significantly if you'd just get that thing restrung."

"Thank heavens the plumber knows CPR!"

Introducing the fastest ways to get through college.

Speed. Power. And more speed. That's what the new Power Macintosh is all about. It's a Macintosh with PowerPC technology. Which makes it an incredibly fast personal computer. And the possibilities are endless. Because now you've got the power you need for high-performance applications like statistical analysis, multimedia, 3-D modeling and much more. So, what are you waiting for? Visit your Apple Campus Reseller for more information and see for yourself how that Power Macintosh is here, college may never be the same.
