Housing conflict spurs meeting

Joey Wellman
Contributing Writer

Displeased University of Idaho family housing residents recently met with UI President Elizabeth Zinser to voice some concerns. Ahmed Sadiq and neighboring resident Aaron Hudson met with Zinser and Associate Vice Chancellor Carol Hahn August 9 to discuss various problems and incidents between family housing residents and officials.

"As two concerned residents," Hudson and Sadiq wrote a letter to Zinser describing their situation and requesting a meeting.

"We were very pleased with the meeting—she [Zinser] heard us out and her response was very positive," said Sadiq. "Usually we are heard but then ignored."

The letter written by Sadiq and Hudson was "to inform [Zinser] of some of the difficulties the residents of family housing (have been experiencing), particularly the foreign students...with regards to the recently instituted guest registration policy, our rights of privacy and telephone use privileges."

The problems began occurring a few months ago. Some concerns were voiced at a previous meeting about rent increases in family housing.

"We were all heard, but nothing happened," said Sadiq. "We were upset with some of the situations. The two of us (Sadiq and Hudson) felt as though we were getting the run-around, so we decided to approach President Zinser."

Jim Bauer, director of Residence Life, said "Our first notice (that something was wrong) was finding out about the

Libraries voice concerns about Prop 1

Zachary Craig-Works
Staff Writer

Idaho’s most controversial Proposition One, the proposal that would deny homosexuals the right to serve in the military, has come under fire from the Idaho Library Association (ILA). The association holds that, if voted into law, Proposition One would take the abilities of the state’s publicly funded libraries to carry out their job.

The ILA stated in a October 1993 resolution, “This initiative is contrary to the long traditions of public libraries to guard the intellectual freedom of every person as stated in the First Amendment of the United States Constitution.” The ILA also believes if Proposition One is passed, it will require a massive review and segregation of all library materials which make reference or mention of homosexuality. This segregation process would be required under section 67-8005 of the Proposition—‘Expenditure of Public Funds.’ The Proposition states the law, if passed, ‘shall not limit the availability in public libraries of books and materials written or adults which address homosexuality, provided access to such materials is limited to adults and meets local standards as established through the normal library review process.’

In November 1993, Attorney General Larry Echohawk issued an opinion on what was then the Idaho Citizens Alliance Initiative. In that opinion, Echohawk stated (‘The Initiative’) imposes duties that librarians cannot possibly carry out. The result would be a chilling effect on access to all materials in all libraries.”

However, Kelly Walton, Idaho Citizens Alliance chairman and author of Proposition One, also agrees. "I don’t think it’s calling for a line-by-line preview by a tax-financed employee," said Walton.

The ILA particularly fears the portion of the proposition stating “access to such materials in limited to adults” would unduly strain the resources of public libraries. They believe that all library materials would have to be reviewed, and if found to contain references to homosexuality, be segregated into an “adults only” section. The ILA has also estimated that compliance with the proposition would cost Idaho taxpayers more than $20 million to segregate materials in public libraries.

The American Library Association’s Library Bill of Rights—a set of professional ethics and library practices to which the Idaho Library Association subscribes—says “Denying access to certain library materials and services available to adults in violation of the Library Bill of Rights. Libraries and governing bodies should maintain that parents—and only parents—have the right and responsibility to restrict the access of their children to library resources."

"Do you not let anyone under 18 look in the ‘H’ drawer of the card catalog (because it might have something about homosexuality)?" said Barbara Grever of the Idaho Library Association. Grever said that it would be up to local libraries to go through their own collections and relocate materials that mention homosexuality.

"Informed citizenry is the cornerstone of democracy," Grever said. She went on to express the concern that if materials are segregated in libraries, then the public would be limited in its ability to access those materials and would therefore be limited in its ability to be informed on the issue.

Lori Kenan, a Moscow Public Library employee, also has concerns about the potential ramifications of Proposition One. Kenan believes the time and effort that would be required to examine every item in the library’s collection would be ridiculous.

SEE HOUSING PAGE 2

SEE ILA PAGE 5
Colloquium to discuss space

On September 20 at 3:30 p.m., Dr. Carol Stoker will offer a presentation at the International Friendship Association on the use of virtual reality and telepresence technology being used to control remote vehicles on extraterrestrial surfaces. Discussion will center around the impact of the new technology on future space missions.

IFA meeting to plan events

The International Friendship Association will be holding a meeting to plan its third annual International Afternoon of Culture, Costume and Cuisine. The planning meeting will be held on September 22 at 4 p.m. in the Merrill Hall Conference Room. March 4 is the target date for the annual event. Those interested in participating can call 885-7841 or attend the meeting.

Pound the pavement

Palouse Habitat for Humanity will be holding a walkathon on September 25 from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. to raise money for their volunteer organization. The route will cover three and a half miles in Moscow from WalMart to Tidman's. Prizes, free food and live radio coverage will be offered. WalMart has pledged to match the first $2,000 raised. Please ensure more information is available by contacting Pam Peterson at 882-1349 or the Habitat office at 883-8502.

Teleconference free to public

The National League of Women Voters will be holding a national teleconference on health care reform from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the Borah Theater in the Student Union. No pre-registration is necessary. Everyone is welcome. There is no admission fee. The teleconference will be followed by four presentations/demonstrations with local health care providers, administrators, insur- ance industry and Idaho Congressional representatives. For more information, contact the UI Women's Center at 865-6616.

Vehicles to be sold by bid

The General Services Administration will be holding a spot bid sale for approximately 60 vehicles on September 29 at 10 a.m. The sale will be held at the GSA Fleet Management Center at E. 4207 Main Avenue in Spokane. Those interested may view the vehicles prior to the sale on September 26 and 27 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and September 28 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and from 8 to 10 a.m. on the day of the sale.

Housing

letter to President Zinser, so we contacted and met with Aemaj and Aeron. We responded as quickly as possible, and it was a positive meeting."

"Initially, I thought the meeting went okay," stated Sadig, "but then I wasn't pleased—there were various remarks made, and they weren't completely honest with us."

According to Sadig, Zinser was surprised at the existing problems.

"I had learned about the guest registration policy from Sadig and Hudson," stated Zinser, "but I could only see it necessary from a safety point of view. If the guests are visiting for a prolonged period of time, I am more concerned about some residents' policies. I am sympathetic about being intrusive," she commented.

Roger Otley, director of University Residences, said the guest registration policy is not about privacy. "(It is) important so that we know who is residing in our facilities for basic fire and safety reasons more than anything else. Besides, residents themselves have complained about other residents who have had family members living with them for extended periods of time," Otley stated.

The University Residences policy, guest must pay $5 a day after seven days. "It is not part of our custom to require our guests to pay for their lodging in our homes," stated Sadig, "but what was particularly offensive and humiliating was the regular monitoring of our residences for additional occupan-

Bauer stated that the guest policy existed at one point but was terminated over the summer and has been set aside for further re-evaluation by an apartment housing committee.

In Sadig and Hudson's letter, the two stated problems about the guest registration policy, changes in telephone usage and incidents involving invasions of privacy. This family of four who wish to remain anonymous claimed their house was entered on two separate occasions and on one occasion, without their consent. "The residence manager crossed the threshold of an open door, did not identify himself, did not knock, and asked how many kids my wife was babysitting," stated the resident. "I don't think their bosses know what they're doing."

According to Otley, "It has always been a primary concern to respect a resident's place and privacy. I'm also aware of the regulations. However, we never received an incident report and we don't know where it's coming from. We had an independent department look into it, but we felt there was no real substance to the allegations."

"We are not kids—we are families, and their (University housing offi-

"There was an investigation and a follow-up meeting (with housing officials)," stated Bauer.

Bauer hopes the new committee, formed of representative residents from each residence hall, will meet by the end of the month to discuss issues relating to family housing. Anyone interested in joining can contact their Resident Manager in family housing.

Spred Your Faith

RELIGIOUS DIRECTORY

Trinity Baptist Church
(SBC)
A Warn, Caring Church With A Relevant, Biblical Focus
Tom Robertson, Pastor
6th & Meivich
Office: 882-2015
Sunday Worship
8:15, 10:45 AM & 6 PM
Sunday School, 9:00 AM
For a ride, meet at Theophilus Theater at 9:15 am
See Campus Christian Center or call the church office.
Wednesday Prayer Service: 7 PM
Baptist Student Ministries
Priority One - Thursdays 8 pm
Campus Christian Center

The Rock Church
Spirit Filled Charismatic Church
219 W 3rd St.
Services: Thurs. 7 PM
Sundays 10:30 AM
Rock Student Fellowship
Friday 7 PM
883-4556, 247 Richardson
Pastor
For More Information On Advertising Your Organization, Call 885-5780 Today!

Living Faith Fellowship Ministry
Training Center
285 35th Ave. - 334-9545
Dr. Karl Barden, Senior Pastor
Phil Vance, Campus Pastor
Sunday: Helpful Practical Classes - 9 AM
Wednesday Worship - 7 AM
Christian Science Church
3rd & Mower - 882-8848
Church Services: Sunday 10:30 AM & 7:30 PM
Call for location
Christian Science Reading Room
M-F 12 - 4 PM
518 S. Main - Moscow

Baha'i Faith
"Ye are all leaves of one tree and the fruit of one branch"
Weekly introductions & deepening programs Wed & Thurs 7:30 pm. Call for location
Moscow 882-9487
Pullman - 334-1530
Latah County - 825-8522

Emmanuel Lutheran Church
1036 W. A. St. • Moscow
882-3915
Pastor: Gordon L. Braus, David Ross
Campus Ministries: Kim Williams
Worship: 10:30 AM
Sunday School: 9:15 AM
For van ride call by 9 am

Concordia Lutheran Church
NE 1015 Orchard Dr. Pullman
332-3830
Morning Worship 8 & 10:30 AM
Bible Study & Sunday School 9:15 AM
Student Fellowship 7 PM
Rev. Dudy Nolting
Carole Salyer-Rydholm
Campus Ministries

Concordia Lutheran Church
Church of the Palouse
420 E. 2nd St. • Moscow
(Comer of Van Buren)
Sunday Services: 10 AM
Religious Education Program for Children

Christian Life Center
7 of the Assemblies of God
Touching Hearts with New Life
Sunday School - 9:30 AM
Sunday Worship - 10:30 AM & 6:00 PM
Services at The Moscow Grange
417 S. Jackson - Moscow

Baha'i Faith
"Ye are all leaves of one tree and the fruits of one branch"
Weekly introductions & deepening programs Wed & Thurs 7:30 pm.
Call for location
Moscow 882-9487
Pullman - 334-1530
Latah County - 835-8522

Seven Day Adventist Church
Sponsor of KGTG 95.3 FM
1015 W. C st. • Moscow
Mid Week Prayer Service Wed.
6:30 PM
Weekly AF University Student Fellowship 6:30 PM
Sabbath School 9:15 AM
Saturday Worship 10:30 AM

Please Take Time To Attend The Organization of Your Choice
Zach Craig-Works
Staff Writer

Dr. Anne Fox is the Republican candidate (Idaho) State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Dr. Fox received her Bachelor of Science in Education from Bucknell University, her Master's degree in teaching, and her Ph.D. in Teacher Education from Syracuse University and has done postdoctoral work at the University of Illinois.

Dr. Fox has taught elementary through college level and has served as a state and local school board member. She has also written two books analyzing retained in school and served as president for the State Elementary Principals' Association.

Argonaut: Would you please explain how your involvement with the Children's Village in Coeur d'Alene and how your experiences there contribute to your role as Idaho State Superintendent of Public Instruction?

Fox: I’d be delighted to. Many years ago, I was an elementary school principal in Coeur d’Alene, there were two little children who were badly abused. I went to court over them. Becky and I had just had a baby, and we thought we were going to be one of those couples where the mother got so angry, she beat Becky, but they had taken away my baby. They took Donald and slammed his head against the wall.

The children had been abused repeatedly, and when they thought they won, they took the fight to our court on their behalf. Becky ended up being put in jail, and Donald in fourteen. Both of them were placed in foster care. So that was one of the things that made me realize how much I would like to do something about that.

I've learned that I would build them a house. That house

Friday, September 16, 1994
News

Argonaut Interview
Fox seeks state superintendent seat

Zach Craig-Works

My initial thoughts were that it (outcome-based education) was good because you identified exactly what it was you wanted the students to attain, then you measured their success at attaining it. However, it is diabolical in actual practice.

-Dr. Anne Fox
Republican candidate for Idaho State Superintendent

It would be an alternative to public schools for meeting certain needs.

Private schools build their own buildings, and (because) our state is in a tremendously fragile right now, it would help our funding of our state's public schools. When government decided that private schools were in place. We've grown, in the past five years, by nine percent per year to something and we're in such a tight time economic— as far as maintaining our buildings or providing for new buildings.

Argonaut: Are you for or against Proposition One?

Fox: I'm against Proposition One because I feel that the laws are already place and do not support teaching sexual preference or lifestyle in the public schools.

Argonaut: Has this been your opinion all through your public service career?

Fox: Yes, as a principal and superintendent, (I have seen to it that) there have always been what the Idaho Code required— which is to teach the biology of the human body, the propagation sexually. But, in the Idaho Code, it does not say that we should teach sexual preference.

Argonaut: You mentioned earlier that you wanted schools to be more public, and you said, in your campaign platform that you wanted to remove public school funding for private schools. Do you think private schools at two姿态 at all related?

Fox: I feel that we should have separate schools. It is very different from what we've been told to be thought our society was fairly homogeneous. It is very different—especially with our elderly, a lot of them, that are on fixed incomes where they are in a populated area where there are bonds for school buildings, they would really be impacted economically.

But now we find that (this thing) is not only not the elderly but (also) young people that are losing jobs or switching jobs.

In the upcoming election, I find that the public, generally about two-thirds of the people I talk to would have school funding placed on the sales tax. About a third would not be for it in favor of because they feel they can't afford to have it. The only area they would lose voting power would be in the fact that sales tax could be increased by the legislature and/or school bond.

A thought that I've had working with the public is that if the funding was moved from property to sales tax, we could have an endowment fund set aside for school buildings. As part of that sales tax, (then) the local comm...
On-campus employment interviews to begin soon

Shelby Dopp
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Career Services Center has begun to post listings for employers in search of new faces. Students who are graduating this fall or spring are encouraged to attend the Career Services Center's On-campus visits workshops Career Services has to offer. One of the workshops informs the student on how to register with the office and file a "Data Form and File Access Agreement" with them.

Students can get an early start if they wish; however, they will not need to use the material until their senior year. Many UI alumni keep their old files on hand in case they ever need the information in the future. By doing this, they do not have to go back to ask for letters of recommendation from past professors or mentors. The information is kept on file at Career Services for as long as the person needs it, said Dennis Kreutzer, career advisor for the Career Services Center.

The procedures to get an interview with visiting companies are rather simple. Listings for upcoming visits are posted every Friday. The student must then submit employer-requested materials by 4:30 p.m. the following Wednesday to Career Services.

Employer-requested materials include such things as the Data Form from Career Services, a resume, college transcripts and an application. Other materials may also be requested depending on what the employer wants from the student.

Career Services then sends the materials out to the companies on Thursday.

Kreutzer said, "The companies should get the materials by Monday, and they will then notify the students they choose and also notify Career Services.

Students chosen by the company and their alternates will be scheduled for pre-screened interviews each Monday and Thursday. These students need to sign up for an interview one week before the employer's visit. These times are guaranteed to those who were chosen and it is very important that they meet these times, Kreutzer said. Students who miss the appoint are to blame if they do not get an interview slot available.

Missing an appointment will most likely result in a lost job opportunity. "If you snooze, you lose," Kreutzer laughed.

On Wednesday, alternate candidates--those who were not originally selected--will have the chance to claim any remaining interview times. Thursday allows other qualified students and students to take any unfilled openings on the schedule.

Some companies allow Career Services to hold a drawing and pick anyone who qualifies. If too many people sign up, Career Services will resort to a drawing.

"We will literally draw a person's name out of a hat," Kreutzer said.

During the week of October 3-7, the following employers will be visiting the university: Coopers and Lybrand, Arthur Andersen, Deloitte and Touche, Hewlett-Packard Company, and SIMD.

Students are encouraged to stop by Career Services. The center is located in the basement of Brick Hall.
Conservationists and forest industry debate wilderness

Panel discusses viability on more or less wilderness

Adam Gardels
Fall Weekend Edition

Wilderness Week jump-started with Monday’s panel discussion about wilderness in Idaho. The discussion—entitled “Idaho Wilderness-More or Less, Now or Later”—was centered around the tensions of legally designating more Idaho land as wilderness or opening for public and commercial use land currently set aside as wilderness.

The audience was treated to a slide show of scenic nature pictures presented by panelist John McCarthy, director of the Idaho Conservation League. McCarthy’s position on Idaho’s lands seems to be firm. He resisted the words once told to him by an Native-American he met, “We don’t want it all, we want what’s left.”

“Anyone who thinks we can manage a forest and mimic a natural system I think is deluded,” he went on to say.

Panelist Joe Hinsion, a representative of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association, contended McCarthy’s comments for more wilderness by arguing that, “The wilderness debate is about a larger debate—what should public land be used for.”

Hinsion is concerned about the legal designation of more wilderness land would put everyone in a difficult position. “If we’re going to head for this environmental Armageddon then we may as well leave all our options open.”

U.S. Forest Service Representative Liz Clore said the forest service is changing its ideas about eco-system management and is moving to a “holistic” approach. This approach assumes the land surrounding designated wilderness areas as having an affect on the protected area.

According to Clore, “1.3 million acres in Idaho are designated as suitable (to be wilderness) in Idaho.”

However, McCarthy’s Idaho Conservation League contested those figures in a newsletter circulated at the forum. The newsletter stated, “Members of the Idaho Conservation League and others in the Idaho Wildlands Defense Coalition identified more than 6 million acres of U.S. Forest Service land for additional inclusion in the National Wilderness System.”

“Timber sales going on today will limit our options tomorrow,” warned McCarthy while stressing the fact that wilderness cannot be manufactured by mankind. He went on to say he regrets that “American society appears to be on the side of development.”

Hinsion apparently feels that compromise between the U.S. Forest Service, the forest industry and environmentalists is almost impossible. “It’s a value debate. As such, it is very hard to compromise.” He went on to say the political class is unable to understand the wilderness debate as well as the general public.

This was one of many protest messages expressed on the Administration Building lawn during Wilderness Awareness Week. Several events, contests and discussions were held to help inform UI students, faculty and staff about issues facing the state of Idaho’s wilderness areas.

ILA

FROM PAGE 1

In Recognition of Dr. Thomas O. Bell

A special presentation by award-winning author of This House of Sky, Dancing at The Rascal Fair, English Creek, Heart Earth.

IVAN DOIG

“The American West as Heart Earth”

Wednesday, September 21, 1994
1:30 pm

Student Union • Borah Theatre
munity could access it if they want to renovate or build a new building—and the local patrons could vote on that decision.

Argonaut: While superintendent of Post Falls School District, you received a vote of "no confidence" from the teachers. Can you explain how this happened, and how you feel it could affect your abilities to serve as State Superintendent?

Fox: Yes, I would be glad to do that. In fact, I think it's important that the public realize that the vote of no confidence came from the teachers' union at a very critical time in our district.

Our district went through an economic loss of a major industry—as well as a loss in the timber and mining industries. At that time, we lost ten classroom-units of students. Our teachers were on staff, and in Idaho Code you can't get rid of teachers that are already employed even though you may have a loss of students. We also had a loss of funding in our district—a sizable amount. The board instructed me to do my best to come up with a plan to adjust the budget and to make recommendations to the board.

In our situation, between 80 and 85 percent of our budget was in salaries. We had, at that point, cut all of our other areas that we could and had held on buying supplies and things like that. We made recommendations to the board of a number of areas where we could make cuts. At the time the board was to decide those issues, the teachers' union strategically organized a vote of "no confidence" for me so that the board would not act on those issues. Indeed, that's what they got—the board did not act on those issues. If the board could not put the budget in balance, then we were not following the rules of the Idaho Code—to present a budget in balance. I told the board I would not return the following year, but I would complete the year with them. I didn't want to work for a board who I thought, ethically, was not doing the right thing. So I left at the end of the year, but by that time, we did get our budget in balance, and we passed two overrides with an 80% majority.

---

Introducing the student checking account that:

Is always there for you.
A First Security Bank student checking account gives you 24-hour access to Automatic Teller Machines.

Forgives your mistakes.
Because we know that no one is perfect, we offer Cash Reserve "automatic overdraft protection" up to $500.

Treats you like an adult.
You can also apply for your very own First Security VISA credit card with a great rate and no annual fee.

Gives you the shirt off its back.
Plus, we'll give you 50 checks free, 10 checks a month with no transaction fee and a free T-shirt.

And maybe even a ride to school.
Be sure to enter to win a new 18" mountain bike at any First Security location—no purchase necessary.

---

1. Subject to application and credit approval. 2. T-shirts available while supplies last. 3. Must be a college or university student to enter; no purchase necessary; drawing on October 16, 1994.
University needs a new Satellite

On a windy day, most people like to stop somewhere and get some hot coffee or something to eat as they trudge to class. If you’re on upper campus, however, it tends to be a bit more difficult, especially if the Student Union at all UI students know and love. Fortunately, one can get some nice services at the Satellite Sub, which is nestled in between Morrill Hall, Psychology and Life Sciences. The location is right, and the coffee smells inviting.

There’s just one problem.

The Satellite is one of the most uncomfortable buildings on the entire UI campus. Once you enter the building, the problem is obvious. First of all, the available space in the building is far too minuscule for the traffic. People trying to study at the Satellite Sub, often find themselves scavenging for food and drinks and employees scurry around the obstacles trying to get their jobs done all contribute to a general sense of tension. Getting stepped on or knocked aside is a hazard that comes with the territory of entering the Satellite.

Secondly, even if it were merely more comfortable, the heat is simply inadequate. There aren’t as many windows and doors to open for ventilation.

Overheating students is bad enough; the employees of the Satellite really get the raw end of the deal. They get to bake for several hours a day, a condition contrary to an environment of Food Services should have to put up with at all. Heat comes with cooking, but generally cooks get to work their culinary skills in a well-ventilated place. Nobody likes to slowly suffocate in a small, stuffy basement, where it’s been the stagnating climate.

Obviously, since despite the problems the Satellite remains popular, it’s time to refurbish the Satellite. Expand the building; give the students and employees more room to breathe and study. More room will help solve the heating problem as well, leaving this basement up to the Life Sciences or Administration.

If the Satellite gets refurbished, employees will be able to breathe again and students will be able to study without watching the skis for tumbling drinks. You never know; maybe it’ll become possible to enjoy a good cup of Boyd’s again without running outside to do it.

Opinion

Nation’s safety questionable

How safe is our nation? I feel as though I must ask this question in regard to a recent event.

For me, the Bils seem to be dripping with irony. Comedians, reporters, and everybody who thought they knew something that Reagan slept a lot while he was in office. Consequently, many wondered if our security was at stake. I agreed.

However, after several recent events, most especially Mondale's morning, I have to rethink what I once took to be the gospel: we are not even a plane crashed into the White House. Okay, maybe Clinton deserves the benefit of the doubt because he was across the street. And maybe it's easy to say now because no planes crashed into the White House when Reagan was in office. But I still have to wonder.

A top level investigation has been launched by the White House to see how a plane could cruise in for an early breakfast on the White House lawn. Security forces were said to only have time to "run for cover" before the plane crashed into the President's house. Is this what we've got our tax dollars going towards? Security that runs for cover?

American politics an exercise in moral hypocrisy

I was quoted from office this past week—"the really small burglar, bungled by the best and brightest, and the conspiracy that followed to cover it up. Never mind bombing Cambodia and lying to the American people about it. Even Billy Graham still finds it deeply in his heart to forgive Nixon and re-educate about his turn political convictions, founded in roots of unadulterated Americanism found in the now, but you might as well resign from office over misguided efforts."

In political "buzzology" (the study of buzz-words) and "slogomo- ny" (the study of large, complex words, et al.), and morals provide the basis for the study of contemporary politics. Messages of truth, justice, order and safety ring clear from the mouths of politicians. Reality, history and the Washington DC. There Strikes You when someone who will put up with 100,000 more police on the street by the end of the decade. We have become so much in the past few years (family values) that there is no doubt that (voice raising in bar, monotone rage) that WE THE PEOPLE have reached moral alignment with the gods. At least it would seem.

The US impounds more people than any other civilized nation in the world. We place great value in our anti-drug, anti-crime, anti-immorality stance, or do we? Consider who will run for office in the elections this November.

Other North may have the honor of assisting our government on the path to righteousness in the near future. He participated in an illegal government operation that stole the plane crash from under Ronald Reagan's nose (he would have us believe) and proceeded to donate the hard currency their nation was forced to sell off-shore bank accounts to Lebanese by selling the war to Sargent Slaughter and his Contra Commandos in Nicaragua.

The actions taken by North and his superiors in the Iran-Contra scandal and their lack of consequences to most involved are enough reasons to call Nixon kindly. He only broke into an apartment and tried not to get caught. North stole major, million-dollar weapons and sold them to Iran. Before anyone accused them of being partial, I must add that Dan Rostenkowski, the man who helped for his seat in the house of representatives. Due sole millions from his congressmen (res继 now than me), but the documents he produces all show he's guilty. He's not guilty until proven so, but if I remember correctly, since McCarthy, that right has been considered a congressional perk.

I still have a few names left. I know it sounds like I make a mockery of justice writing about our great nation like this, but hardly a mockery in comparison to what our officials make of the system. Bob Packwood is still determining the fate of our nation. Again, not guilty — yet. However, if you knew I had to account of him in the same, what would you think of me? Thomas Foley got some special deals from his stock broker. He got them because his name is Thomas, not because of any special connection to the House of Representatives. Correct use of power? Well, remember the American rule. If you get power, you have it, but you will not be as powerful as you think. Depending on how much you are making or on the number of people you can easily pay. The result? You are more likely to have to worry about getting rich.

Affirmative D'Amato worked with Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a number of years while in congress. I can't remember whether the cut for getting a house from d'Amato was first or second cousin. I could not spare the "Savior of DC" Marion Barry, who (chokes, coughs, wheezes) will do his best to improve our capital's D.A.S.A. program. With him as Mayor, a more accurate description of this acronym might be, "dope is real"
Churches, not God, change

Mr. Meehan is totally confused. God does exist and God does not go back on his promises. Surely you must have learned something in your many hours of learning Christian doctrine, how else would you explain the covenant of the rainbow, the forthcoming of his Son, and countless others. Also, there are three different kinds of Lutherans; the ELCA, the Missouri Synod, and the Wisconsin Synod (also called the WELS). The ELCA is known for not believing everything that is in the Bible. They (not God) adjusts to what society is thinking. How else could you explain the Ten Commandments and Baptism; they have lasted for so long. I think I can understand your confusion now. If they don’t believe everything in the Bible, then how do you know what to believe? The WELS does not change to what society is thinking. Instead they believe in what God is thinking and is found in the Bible. So yes, we do believe in the Bible and in God’s promises. And to answer your question on gods; yes, God did say homosexuality is wrong in the commandments on sexuality, but you should have known that is your countless hours on Christian doctrine.

—Matthew Coleman

Keep informing citizens

Thank you for publishing both interviews with Helen Chenoweth and Larry LaFetse in Friday’s and Tuesday’s Argonaut. I feel it is important that the citizens here in Lasah County are kept informed on the candidates, and should vote on November 8th.

In the next few weeks, the Student Issues Board will be pushing a massive student registration drive, and I encourage all students who are not registered to vote to register during the drive. The time and place of the registration drive will be announced soon.

—Damon Darakjy, Student Issues Board Chair

Twinkle, twinkle little .bat

About two weeks ago, my girlfriend received a computer from her folks. They got it for her because she needs access to one for her Accounting 201 class, and her schedule prevents her from visiting the labs. Very considerate of them. At least, I thought so at the time.

However, in spite of the computer’s extreme usefulness, it has the ability to raise my blood pressure to the point that the Universe seems to expand and contract with the thumping of my heart. It’s almost exciting, feeling your eyes bulge from your skull. Even knowing that the computer is dumber than dirt doesn’t remove the feeling that it’s out to get me.

An example: Recently, I was trying to install a program for modem usage on a computer. A friend gave me a clean copy of the program, I extracted, checked and installed it. No problem. I tested it. No problem. I decided, since we just upgraded Windows from 5.0 to 6.2, that I wanted an icon for it.

Big problem.

First, I had a problem finding what directory I had stored it in. Once in a while, computers like to hide files and then claim total ignorance when you reasonably ask it where the hell your file went. After I managed to find it, I also discovered that not all of it had extracted properly. Had to go again. Finally, I got it all ready and in the right pigpenhost. But then the heart of Windowspace was to go. I go to create an icon, and then...those dreaded words appeared.

Command path.

Apparent, Windows 6.2 defines the concept of “command path” much differently than the rest of the world, because it refused to accept any path I stuck in. I thought I’d fool the computer; I methodically ran through every path that it could use to access the program. The computer fooled me; it methodically rejected everything I put in, including the colloquial “$H%\%\%, computer!” I typed in out of frustration. It was late, I was tired; I had to retreat, swearing vituperatively and pleading revenge. Maybe I’ll define it, in hopes of staying the demon inside.

I saw 200; I know what computers can do.

Of course, it must be admitted that I don’t mess with the software end of computing too much. Most of my experience is with computer languages and Network. Still, I know enough about it to install programs and whip up icons, so far, since I’m not one of those who can’t be too proud to use the tutorials along the way.

But, it seems sometimes the computer wins. A user retreets, and the forces of RAM return to the CPU victorious; led by their master techni- cian, General Failure. Once more, cyberspace is safe from the intruder, the carbon-based interlopers who are so per- verted from the Way of Truth that they even don’t speak in binary. And humans think computers are dumb. GIGO, indeed.

Argonaut Letters Policy

The Argonaut welcomes reader letters. They must be one page or less typed, double spaced. Letters must be signed and include a student identification or driver’s license number and phone number for each writer. Letters may also be submitted by electronic mail to the address shown within the parentheses: (argonaut@idaho.edu) The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to edit letters. Multiple letters with the same position on a topic may be represented by one letter.

Congratulations to New Forney Hall E-Board Members

Susan Pierce
Jana Dunphy
Melina Martin
Susan Kaufman
Lisa Wolkenhauer
Trisha Kelly
Elaine Hurttchell
Lisa Brozman
Cathy Woo
Kristi Jackson
Danae Kortmann
Erika Thiel
Tammi Braaten
Andre Hills
Jani Mori
Dee Claire
Cara Stolz
Kellie Lyle
Kate Maresb
Becky Weeks
Joy Wellman
Alime DeVries

Try Our New Window Coffee Bar.
HOMEMADE ICE CREAM
GREAT TASTING ESPRESSO

KAREN’S HOMEMADE ICE CREAM
ACROSS FROM THE THEATERS
DOWNTOWN MOSCOW • 882-9221
“Possibly The Best Ice Cream You’ll Ever Taste!”

Friday, September 16, 1994

Commentary

Brandon Nolta

I saw 200; I know what computers can do.

Of course, it must be admitted that I don’t mess with the software end of computing too much. Most of my experience is with computer languages and Networking. Still, I know enough about it to install programs and whip up icons, so far, since I’m not one of those who can’t be too proud to use the tutorials along the way.

But, it seems sometimes the computer wins. A user retreats, and the forces of RAM return to the CPU victorious, led by their master technician, General Failure. Once more, cyberspace is safe from the intruder, the carbon-based interlopers who are so perverted from the Way of Truth that they even don’t speak in binary. And humans think computers are dumb. GIGO, indeed.
SAFETY
FROM PAGE 7

domestic policy. The plight of the plane reportedly had problems with drugs and alcohol. If more U.S. dollars went toward domestic policy, we could be helping people with these problems instead of allowing their lives to continue on a path of self-destruction.

We can’t save the world and save ourselves at the same time. Admittedly, even if the U.S. could focus all of its energies on domestic policy, we still wouldn’t be able to help everyone. Even with a few more dollars we could make life easier for some people. An added bonus would be better security for the president and streets we could walk on safely.

Hopefully the plane crash will wake some people up and change some lives. That’s the kind of trickle down we could all use.

MORAL
FROM PAGE 7

expensive (DARE) when you get caught (NYGO). Do not forget our own Independent Governoratorial candidate, Ron Bankin. He is holy, but only since he was forgiven. While America and its politicians are appropriating more money for jails, hiring more police, sticking their moral fingers at us, concocting “three strike initiatives” and attempting to get us to live more virtuously, they just keep committing the same crimes. We watch and shoot them again.

I have been accused of thinking of humans too much like animals, but anyone who can listen to the moral blather of a politician who pledges to fight the same crimes they commit and then vote for them? We progress from Homo Erectus to Homo Sapiens, and now...sheep? Let’s not have any more politicians who “can’t remember” what they did in office.

Opinion

Student Health Services

- Preventive medical care, including immunizations, annual physicals, cholesterol checks and tuberculosis testing.
- STD (Sexually Transmitted Disease) evaluations and treatments, including HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) testing and counseling.
- Annual health and nutrition fair, with numerous exhibits, interactive demonstrations, and complimentary samples: October 20, 1994
- General medical care for injuries and illnesses.
- Nutrition Counseling.

Hours:
Student Health Services
MTWF 8:00 - 4:30
Th-Sa 9:00 - 4:30

Student Health Coupon
FREE
One MMR Immunization (measles, mumps, rubella)
-
One HIV Test with Counseling
Expires 12-22-94

Delta Delta Delta
Welcomes The Pledge Class Of 1994

Kristina Bader
Kim Bain
Liz Beckett
Tara Bell
Trisha Cox
Angela Crane
Dawna Dennis
Brandy Grimm
Christie Hartman
Tashia Kerby
Stacey Kite
Tanysa Loader
Sylvia Miller
Taneal Morgan

Jamie O’Neill
Janna Owens
Heidi Peterson
Ali Pracha
Allison Rckwell
Teri Roemer
Sarah Rustan
Stiana Santschi
Amanda Skiles
Anna Smylie
Liz Stockton
Heather Tieman
Kristie Wargo
Robin Wood

Jungle Face Jake
Records • CD’s • Tapes
Specialty Orders
T-Shirts • Best Prices
332-8810

MINO Micro Home 2300
230th S. W., Pullman
Open Mon.-Sat.

Ros-Shay
Specializes in:

- Imported Handcraft
- Jewelry • Dolls & Insects
- Beads & Bead Classes
- Sunglasses • Cards
- & many other Gift Items

332-7247
Hrs. Mon-Sat 11:30
NO annual FEE, nationwide ACCEPTANCE
and LOW rates.
Because this is a ONCE in a lifetime trip.

IF YOU DON'T GET IT,
GET IT.
Latah county fair offers excitement

Russian pianist to perform at Beasley

Bedheads to play at John’s Alley tonight

---

Art

Double museum endowment

The Friends of the Museum of Art at Washington State University plan a big gift for the museum's 50th birthday—a donation of the museum's privately funded endowment.

Kathleen Bodley, president of the Friends' board, announced September 13 that the organization’s goal is to increase the endowment by $100,000 by the end of the 20th birthday celebration in September of 1995. The group has raised $60,000 so far, she said, and will be looking to the fall of 1997.

The WSU museum, the largest facility in eastern Washington devoted to fine arts, will hold a public celebration from 4 to 6 p.m. this afternoon. The museum expects to raise $20,000 to $30,000 since 1974, Bodley said.

"That's what we're working toward," she said. "There are more that half the way toward our goal, including 11 recent gifts of pledges of $1,000 each. The endowment is now over $150,000," Bodley said.

The endowment, a fund within the WSU Foundation, provides annual income to support university funding and federal gift support for museum programs. The fund was established in 1987 with $5,000 raised by the Friends. To get involved, call 509-335-1910.

---

Poets offered cash prizes

Poetry contest seeks entries. $500 prize will be offered. The contest is free and open to all. Poets must submit one poem 20 lines or less, any subject or style. Deadline is Nov. 30.

Mail entries to: Arcadia Poetry Post, Dept. K, 1101-A Sovereign Row, Oklahoma City, OK 73108.

---

Latah County Fair Will Exhibit Everything from Quilts to Giant Pumpkins

Michelle Kalbietzer

Staff Writer

From giant pumpkin lovers to those who simply want to see more farm animals than can be found in an Old McDonald Farm book, the Latah County Fair has it all.

"We'd love to have students come," said Lynn Baird, a Latah County Fair board member. "It is truly a celebration of what Latah County stands for.

With over 2,886 entries this year, there is truly something for just about everyone.

There is more to this fair than simply the regular rides, food and games. The fair will present music, contests and exhibit thousands of crafts from spectacular quilts to the "Crookedest Carrot."

The five stage entertainments will include Dixieland band Ray Stone Company on September 16, country western band Homeward Bound September 17, the Lubker Family Fiddlers September 18 and the Matt Vorderbruggen Orchestra September 15-18.

On September 17, there will be a pet dog show at 3 p.m. at the National Guard Armory. The entry fee is a can of dog food. A few of the categories include: longest tail, longest ears, longest tass waving their tail and, of course, the best trick routine. Another must-see is the miniature horse show September 18.

The Latah Wildlife Association is sponsoring an Elk Bugling Contest on September 17 in the "Sales Arena" at 7 p.m.

Whether you go to the fair for the craft exhibits or the carnival games it is guaranteed that the variety will provide for a lot of free fun.

The Latah County Fair runs from September 15 through the 18 at the Latah County Fairgrounds located along White Avenue across the street from Safeway. Davis Amusement Co. is providing the rides, food and games. Armchairs for the rides are $14 Thursday through Saturday and $9 on Sunday.

---

Russian pianist to perform at Beasley

Amy Ridouer

Lifestyles Editor

Washington State University’s Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum will present Russian pianist Mikhail Yanovitsky September 21 at 8 p.m.

Yanovitsky will start off the "On Stage With..." series performing concertos from Bach, Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, Schumann and Tchaikovsky.

Yanovitsky began his musical career in Leningrad, studying piano with his mother and eventually attended Leningrad’s Special Musical School for musically gifted children. His family is very supportive of his new found fame.

Yanovitsky performed as a soloist with the Moscow Philharmonic, the Leningrad Philharmonic, and the Leningrad Chamber Orchestra and was a 1992 Young Concert Artists Series winner.

Yanovitsky supports all types of musical schooling and enjoys playing for students. Yanovitsky has been known to give advice to all interested in experiencing music.

Since coming to the United States, Yanovitsky has performed as a soloist with the San Francisco Symphony, the Santa Barbara Symphony, the Richmond Symphony, the Reno Chamber Orchestra and with the Little Orchestra Society in New York City.

Critics have called his performances “Big and rich, but always clear in focus,” and "Yanovitsky has remarkable control of the keyboard. He manages massive sonorities and digital finesse with equal confidence.

He’s also a musician with a lyrical streak especially suited to romantic Russian fare."

The program is in the coliseum theater and lasting on is a first come, first served basis.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for students and available from the coliseum ticket office or at all G&B Select-A-Seat outlets.

---

Bedheads to play at John’s Alley tonight

Amy Ridouer

Lifestyles Editor

Tonight starting at 9:30 p.m. "The Bedheads" will perform at John’s Alley in Moscow with “Citizen Swing,” a band from Spokane.

The Bedheads are an original band from Moscow whose members include Rick Cavallieri, vocals and keyboard, Doug Cameron, guitar and vocals; Mike Morschewek, bass guitar and backup vocals; Bill Schwartz, drums; and John Fricke who plays trumpet, con- ras and does backing vocals.

The Bedheads sound unique is influenced by They Might Be Giants, The Doors, The Judybats, Faith No More, Tijuana Brass and Neil Diamond.

Most recently the Bedheads performed at "LollaPalooza '94," and they plan to record a CD in the summer of 1995.

Morschewek said The Bedheads’ music “has a unique sound which has been described by one fan as ‘psychedelic, hard-edged, fun pop.’”

Citizen Swing opened for Los Lobos, Inner Circle, Candlebox, and Tower of Power this past summer. The members include Myers Kennedy, vocals and lead guitar; Mike Tschidi, drums and percussion; Craig Johnson, guitar; Geoff Miller, trumpet and congas; and Dave Turner, bass. Their first CD, "Cuss Me With The Groove" was released in 1992, and the band has since gained a large following.

The show begins at 9:30 p.m. at John’s Alley. The cover charge has not been determined at press time.
Carrey tries on 'The Mask'—and success

"I loved the project not so much for the 'Mask' parts, but it was an opportunity to do, hopefully, a three-dimensional character that doesn't just rely on tricks. The most important part, for me, was to create a character for Stanley that was entertaining on its own, that you'd feel I could watch a whole movie with this guy."

—Jim Carrey

The Mask

"The Mask" very much bears the Carrey stamp of outrageousness, which is tempered by his ability to make viewers like his character. In this case, Carrey is Stanley Ipkiss, a bank employee who's luckless with the ladies. One day, Stanley finds an ancient mask. When he puts it on he transforms into a lean, green, singing, dancing and joke-telling machine. As the Mask, Carrey, courtesy of mind-boggling special FX, can bounce off walls, turn into a wolf, and so on.

What's more, there are bad guys, a beautiful love interest (Catherine Dzicz), musical numbers and the incredibly smart and loyal Milo, Stanley's Jack Russell terrier, who deserves a dog Oscar. I loved the project," enthuses Carrey, "not so much just for the 'Mask' parts, but it's an opportunity to do, hopefully, a three-dimensional character that doesn't just rely on tricks. The most important part, for me, was to create a character for Stanley that was entertaining on its own, that you'd feel I could watch a whole movie with this guy."

—Jim Carrey

The Mask

As Carrey's star rises, so too does his price. He's paid $5 million for his success worth the personal price he pays? His growing fame and busy schedule played a part in the recent breakup in his marriage.

And he knows that the more famous he becomes, the more privacy he'll lose. He may not be thrilled at his success, but it's part of the game, he acknowledges.

Likewise, Carrey refuses to overindulge himself about the hoopla surrounding his picture-perfect life.

"The only thing that concerns me is that people start thinking of me more as money than a performer. I want to make sure that the work is always good. That's all I think about. I don't wake up thinking about money. I wake up thinking about, 'What am I going to do today that's different?'

It's that attitude, plus having "real good people" supporting him, that has helped keep Carrey grounded. And, he expects, it will continue to do so. "I've never seen a good people do anything to hurt a star he's getting a lot of press. In a situation like this, you get sincere, wholesome people around you and treat them like the Elvis situation. 'Hey, get me some blues, blues, get me some reds.'"

He's also been busy shooting "Ace," which he's set to direct and star in. And he's already got a long list of projects, including a sequel to "Dumb and Dumber," a comedy starring Jeff Daniels. "It's about two guys who are as dumb as hell, get together and go on a pilgrimage to return somebody's luggage," Carrey explains, chuckling. After "Dumb and Dumber" and "Batman Forever," in which he'll play the Riddler, then "an Ace" sequel.

As Carrey's star rises, so too does his price. He's paid $5 million for his success worth the personal price he pays? His growing fame and busy schedule played a part in the recent breakup in his marriage.

And he knows that the more famous he becomes, the more privacy he'll lose. He may not be thrilled at his success, but it's part of the game, he acknowledges.

Likewise, Carrey refuses to overindulge himself about the hoopla surrounding his picture-perfect life.

"The only thing that concerns me is that people start thinking of me more as money than a performer. I want to make sure that the work is always good. That's all I think about. I don't wake up thinking about money. I wake up thinking about, 'What am I going to do today that's different?'"

It's that attitude, plus having "real good people" supporting him, that has helped keep Carrey grounded. And, he expects, it will continue to do so. "I've never seen a good people do anything to hurt a star he's getting a lot of press. In a situation like this, you get sincere, wholesome people around you and treat them like the Elvis situation. 'Hey, get me some blues, blues, get me some reds.'"

He's also been busy shooting "Ace," which he's set to direct and star in. And he's already got a long list of projects, including a sequel to "Dumb and Dumber," a comedy starring Jeff Daniels. "It's about two guys who are as dumb as hell, get together and go on a pilgrimage to return somebody's luggage," Carrey explains, chuckling. After "Dumb and Dumber" and "Batman Forever," in which he'll play the Riddler, then "an Ace" sequel.
Dookie an album of slacker anthems

Michael Mans
Staff Writer

There are three things to do with a guitar and about three chords: play country, play psychedelics, and get a #1 smash (a la Collective Soul), or not to intend and make some cool music. Green Day did the latter, and came up with "Dookie," a rocking album of slacker anthems.

The entire album, which contains 15 songs, clocks in at under 45 minutes. With the average time per song being three minutes, these guys don't leave themselves a lot of time to make their point. But then they don't need to.

The basic theme on "Dookie" becomes apparent from the cover art: to say nothing of the first few songs, Character #1 is a burnt out apathetic who's locked himself in a world of boredom and walks with the socially dead ("Boulevard"). Character #2 has had enough of that and is going to take some innovativeMARY butted it down with him ("Having A Blast"), and Character #3's only source of excitement is masturbation ("Lowingview"), and as he says "when it's not too hard you're five—six breaking." And so on.

At the beginning of "Basket Case," Billie Joe (lead vocalist, guitarist and lyricist) asks "Do you have any little—little—little—wax/ about nothing and everything all at once?" While a lot of the material on "Dookie" could be classified as whining, there is definitely a serious side. Songs like "She" demonstrate how damaging growing up today can be—that is, living under mixed messages and the lack of self-reliance people are left with.

The main character is a girl who is finally taking control of her life and speaking up for herself: "She's figured out all her doubts/ Are someone else's point of view/ Waking up this time to smash the silence with a brick of self control." Not that it's easy from there: "I found out what it takes to be a man/ and Dad will never understand/ What's happening to me?" Billie Joe sings on "Coming Clean."

The music is basically an extremely tight three-piece of guitar, bass and drums. The simplicity of the chord progressions isn't smoozy as often as it could be, except perhaps when you can't tell when "Coming Clean" ends and "Emotions Sleeping" begins. It's departures from the usual style that are noteworthy—the lazy bass-riff grove of "Longview," as well as the rhythm-guitar, power-choke crunch of "When I Come Around." All of the melodies are catchy, looped around the music so the rhythms match. In "Sassafras Roots" the male figure is following a girl around wasting her time, and the melody sticks in your head just as it sticks to her.

Green Day's teen there, won't go back, glad I'm out, but boy-Y'll-tell-you-some-stories attitude is comical yet decently engrossing. Their music is straight-ahead rock with a few small twists. Don't let the album title fool you, "Dookie" isn't crap at all.

University of Idaho freshmen Allison Smith and Jesse Thomas find time for a romantic interlude between classes Thursday on the hill next to fine street.
Across nine bridges, through nine tunnels

Dave Lewis  Outdoors Editor

very—the Milwaukee Road is built on the route the Hiawatha may live on. The old Milwaukee railroad grade provides an extraordinary mountain biking opportunity for those not averse to big dark green tunnels and high trestles. The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific stopped operating in 1980. Graydon Brown, owner of The Avery Trading Post and long time employee for the Milwaukee Road says, “I was conductor on the last east bound train to leave Avery, it was in 1967.” In the mid eighties they pulled up the rails. Now that the trains are gone, the best way to see the beautiful scenery and study the interesting historical sights along the abandoned grade is to ride a bike on it.

To reach Avery from Moscow, drive north to St. Maries, then up the St. Joe River. After crossing the river at Marble Creek the highway follows the old Milwaukee railroad right-of-way. To experience the best bike ride in Idaho keep following the abandoned railroad grade through Avery and all the way to the St. Paul Pass Tunnel. You won’t be sorry.

The United States Forest Service owns the Milwaukee railroad grade bike path, officially named, according to Jaime Steen, Course Coordinator, District, the Route of the Hiawatha because that is the name of the bridges along the route were named for the Longfellow poem. Knowing The rangers say that they discourage the public from using the bike trail, they certainly don’t motivate it in any way. There are too many things that need to be corrected. They are in the planning process to make all improvements necessary. The proposed Route of the Hiawatha will become a reality. The idea for a bike trail on the path, the public uses it at their own peril. It is illegal to use any motorized vehicle on the bike route, however, signs clearly show what ways are for motorized vehicles.

The bike path portion has nine tunnels and nine tunnels. The path is ready in it because it’s so cold. 15 per cent. It is the height of the bridges and the steep grade that make this ride exciting. According to Crowell and Asleson in their book on the St. Joe country “Up the Swift Water,” The Milwaukee Road was built up the St. Joe in 1907 and 1908.

The men who built the road bed now used only for bike travel had plenty to do in two years. It is only twenty-two miles between Avery and the St. Paul Pass Tunnel. But there are 16 tunnels and 21 bridges on the grade. The cost of $75,000 per mile was a record high for rail road construction at the time.

The main road between Avery and Wallace follows the railroad for about nine miles, taking travelers through six tunnels and over two high trestles. Careful driving is a must because both the bridges and the tunnels are narrow and must have curves. Two cars can pass, but hope you don’t meet a train.

The road leaves the railroad near the mouth of Loop Creek. Keep going straight on the railroad grade, when you see the gate you have found the Route of the Hiawatha. The first miles on the bike-only portion give the rider a chance to enjoy mountain scenery and search the banks for huckleberries and blackcaps. The swamplands west of the road bed are good moose habitat except during hunting season.

Tunnel 29 is the first bike-only tunnel. A flashlight is a good idea but not absolutely necessary because only Tunnel 25 is too dark to walk through without a light and there is a trail around it anyway.

Gravel inside the tunnels is keep- er in the middle than towards the ends of all tunnels so be ready to execute some fancy maneuvers if riding through.

The first bike-only tunnel on the grade is the 246 foot high Clear Creek Trestle which is not a healthy distance to fall. Looking up Clear Creek between that height affords the bike a view of the river. The next tunnel is the Kelly Creek tunnel. At 208 feet this bridge still gives a thrill when standing at the edge. One rider the USFS doesn’t prohibit riding these tunnels is the lack of guard rails on the bridges.

The timbered in view from the old railroad has been logged very little. No clear-cuts can be seen from the bike path. However, many burned areas are noticeable. Shortly after trains began to run up this canyon, men were still putting in culverts and doing flash work, the Great Fire of 1910 swept through burning a large part of Northern Idaho, especially the upper St. Joe country. Most of the timber near the railroad was burned.

Hundreds of people living in the many towns along the track were trapped. These people were saved from certain death by three brave engineers with the help of three of the tunnels along the track. The next tunnel on the bike path is one of these refuge tunnels. According to Crowell and Asleson, Tunnel 27 is responsible for saving 167 people.

The tunnels are off the main trail and through a dense forest refuge there on Aug. 20, 1910. This tunnel is only 365 feet long, not long enough to offer perfect fire protection and “It is located on a 10 degree turn and this is undoubtedly saved the 167 people.” Tunnel 22 and the St. Paul Pass tunnel also were used as shelter during the Great Fire. Even though great care was taken during normal times to make sure only one train traveled the rails at a time, during the fire the three different locomotives were working to save trapped people.

The lack of communication down, that each chose a different tunnel to speed into.

The only fatality in that part of the fire occurred near Adair. With bridges on fire and flames licking at the engine and flitchen, one patient cowboy dove off the flitch.

• SEE BRIDGE PAGE 15

Misadventures can end up loads of fun

Kel Moon  Copy Editor

backpacking can be a lot of fun. At least that’s what I tell myself—especially when I’m wearing my boots off climbing a mountain trail that consists of crossing switchbacks while carrying an ungainly and extremely heavy frame pack. Worst of all is the rain and wet that should be. It’s also what I tell myself when I’m waking up with a morning with an overwhelming desire to take a shower, or at least wash my face. Well, we simply splash off slightly in a stream or lake that should, by all rights, have its floes in it because it’s so cold. 15 per cent. But if you are interested in seeing some beautiful land, backpacking is the way to go. The many good points, such as the lack of people, traffic, R.V.’s and the like outweigh all the bad points such as getting clean underware or getting lost, both of which my husband and I routinely do (but don’t tell anyone about the underware).

The scenery is terrific—certainly not something you’d see anywhere you could simply drive to. All great things require some work, after all. However, don’t go running off to the Mallard-Larkins pioneer area just yet. Above all else, when packing in, it’s very important to be well-prepared, as I should know. On our first hiking trip alone together (that means without any experienced hikers to remember a particular thing) my husband and I took off into the Mallard- Larkins area in both the Clearwater and St. Joe National Forests.

One cannot drive into a pioneer area. You can walk, of course, but you can take horses, mules, donkeys or even llamas if you desire. At any rate, there we went—no map, no compass—and we didn’t even know which trail member we were supposed to be on or how far we had to go. The map was in the car. But the weather was nice, and we were lucky enough to find a suitable camping site six miles later at Heart Lake.

We only really intended to go there three miles. These things happen when hiking. So we set up the tent and made camp in the dark, since night had fallen. It wasn’t until the next day that we discovered we hadn’t brought enough food along. We weren’t going to starve, but we weren’t going to be exactly full, either.

No problem, right? We’re not camped on a lake, we have fishing poles, we’ll just catch some fish. We failed to take into account our altitude, however. Lakes that high just don’t have many fish. So after a long day of which my husband spent the entirety trying to catch a fish, he succeeded in hooking the only trout that swam in the depths of Heart Lake. (I have since conjectured that this fish may have been one of those types that learned to walk on land and perhaps hiked up to Heart Lake from nearby Northbound Lake for a bit of privacy. Northbound is a few hundred feet lower.) This poor fish was barely long enough to keep, but by God, we were going to eat it anyway. So we built a nice big fire with some wood left by previous campers and set a grill, also left by some other campers, atop the burning embers. Our prior fish sized accordingly for only a matter of moments before it slipped through the grill, due to its enormous size, I am sure, and landed in the waiting flames to never be seen in those pants again. One can see how important it is to be well prepared when hiking in.

After all, it is not like you can just run home and grab what you forgot. This is just one example. I never did get to the mountain goats, the chinwatts that ate the dog’s food or when the dog fell into the lake (she doesn’t swim). But the solitude and scenery is worth every misadventure.
Bird season in full swing

Dave Claycomb

With dove and forest grouse already in mid-season, the bird hunting is really about to get exciting. This week marks the opening dates for both species of quail as well as gray and chukar partridge and looks to be much improved over last year’s. With the relatively wet spring and summer of 1993, last year’s hunting season was not a good one for most upland game hunters. Quail were hard to come by and chukars even more so.

Early season counts by Idaho Fish and Game this year show marked improvements from last year, however.

Idaho Fish and Game did helicopter surveys on the Salmon River for chukar populations in August of this year and found that although the long-term average was still down by 34%, the number of birds was up by 27% over last year.

They also found that the number of birds per cover was only off 5% from the 1991-1993 average. What all of these numbers mean to the sportman is that they should be in the field when quail and chukar season opens up.

Jay Crenshaw from the Clearwater Regional Fish and Game office says, “We expect programs to see a lot more upland game this year. Our brood counts have shown an increase in the overall number of birds this year.”

Chukar and gray partridge opens up tomorrow and runs through Dec 31 in both areas 1 and 2. The daily bag limit is 8 chukar and 8 gray partridge, and the possession limit after the first day is 16 chukar and 16 gray partridge.

The season on both Bobwhite and California quail opens up tomorrow and runs through Dec. 31. The daily bag limit is 10 birds in the aggregate, with a possession limit of 20 in the aggregate after opening day.

Sage grouse season will also open up tomorrow in the south-central and south-eastern parts of the state and run through October 16. Anyone getting a chance to visit these parts of the state should take advantage of the hunting that it offers as well.

Anyone planning to hunt any species of bird other than dove will need to be sure and purchase their upland game stamp. With pheasant season just around the corner and all of the other great bird hunting opportunities already available, sportmen should start heading out to the fields.

Outdoor program activities

A slide show about the Castlewood Cave will be presented in the Rustic Room of the Student Union Monday night. The slides will be narrated by geologist and noted cave explorer, Dr. Thomas E. Miller. Castlewood Cave is located under the Columbia Ice Field near Banff.

The show will start after a short meeting of the Local Group of the National Speleological Association. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. All interested persons are warmly invited to attend.

Also of interest from the Outdoor Program are sign-ups for Introduction to Rockclimbing, which will be 7 p.m. Sept. 20. Sign-ups are being accepted for the Sept. 21 edition of Introduction to Kayaking. The class starts at 7 p.m. Both classes are $10.

A two day Instructional Kayaking Trip is white water is scheduled for Oct. 1-2. Cost for the trip is $35. Participants must attend at least one pool session before the trip.

BRIDGE

• FROM PAGE 14

To achieve instant death on the rocks below the tracks. His grave can still be seen beside the route.

Tunnel 23 and the St. Paul Pass Tunnel, also called the Taft Tunnel, are closed. There are plans to open both tunnels, however, Tunnel 23 needs to be lined repaired and may be opened when and if repairs are made. There is a trail around this tunnel for use until then.

The 1.8 mile long Taft Tunnel could be the crown jewel of the Route of the Hiawatha. If the engineering studies can be finished and the money found to do the work, it will be possible to ride all the way from Avery to St. Regis, Montana. James Schmitt hopes even wheelchairs will be able to travel through the big tunnel someday.

Even without the Taft Tunnel open, the Route of the Hiawatha is a great place to spend a day. Using common sense will assure that future riders will have the same chance to enjoy this genuine scenic route.

For once, a cut in educational spending that actually helps students.
3-on-3 basketball tourney

A 3-on-3 basketball tournament benefiting the Idaho women's basketball team will be tomorrow, Sept. 17, in Memorial Gym from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m.

The tournament is sponsored by Mingle's, Plaza Pipeline and ZFN.

It is open to both male and female players and includes four age groups.

The cost is $40 for a four-player team.

For more information, call 885-0200 or 885-0249.

Hammer and cycle duathlon

On September 18, the UI Campus Recreation Department will host the Hammer and Cycle Duathlon. The duathlon is a two-sport event, consisting of a 5 km. run, 25 km. bike and another 5 km. run.

For more information, call the Campus Recreation Department at (208) 885-6381.

NCAA Division I-AA Poll

1. Marshall, 2-0
2. McNeese State, 2-0
3. Montana, 2-0
4. Youngstown State, 1-0-1
5. Troy State, 2-0
6. IDAHO, 1-0
7. Boston, 1-0
8. William & Mary, 2-0
9. Northern Iowa, 1-1
10. Southern University, 2-0
11. Western Kentucky, 2-0
12. Central Florida, 1-1
13. Montana State, 2-0
14. Eastern Kentucky, 1-1
15. Alcorn State, 1-1
16. Stephen F. Austin, 0-1-1
17. Western Carolina, 1-1
18. Tennessee Tech, 1-1
19. James Madison, 2-0
20. Pennsylvania, 0-0
21. Georgia Southern, 0-2
22. Grambling State, 2-0
23. Middle Tennessee St., 1-1
24. Delaware, 0-1
25. Howard, 1-1

‘Dynamic trio' leads team to 8-1 mark

NORTH RIDGE

Call—The Idaho Vandals relied on their "Lethal Weapon 3" once again Wednesday night on their swing through Southern California, downing the Cal-State Northridge Matadors 9-15, 15-8, 15-10, 13-15, 15-12 in NCAA volleyball action. Britanny Van Haveke, Mindy Rice, and TyeTelveina Yanchulova spearheaded the Vandals’ effort in the five set marathon match.

The dynamic trio combined to pound 67 of Idaho’s 83 kills. The threesome have helped Idaho jump to its 8-1 start as all three were named to the Safeco/Brennigan’s Classic all-tournament team two weeks ago.

Additionally, Yanchulova and Van Havekebe received all-tournament honors at the innower Invitational in Madison, Wis., last weekend.

Rice provided a game high 27 kills and hit .281 on the night while Yanchulova and Van Havekebe killed 25 and 15 balls respectively, hitting .294 and .273.

Idaho setter Lynne Hyland started the Vandals offense all night, delivering out 73 assists in the match. The Vandals did not commit a hitting error in the rally-scored fifth game en route to victory.

The Big Sky favorites out-hit the Matadors by a slim .270 to .265 margin and were out-blocked 15-12, but racked up 10 aces to help offset the Cal-State height advantage.

The win gives Vandals coach Tom Hilbert 88 career wins, positioning the sixth-year coach to hit the century mark this weekend when the Vandals spikers play in the Cal-Poly San Luis Obispo Tournament.

BACKUP freshman quarterback Brian Brennan (right) fires a pass in Wednesday’s practice. The Vandals (1-0) play the Big West’s University of Nevada-Las Vegas (1-1) tomorrow in Las Vegas. Idaho seeks their third consecutive win over a Division I-A team.

Bret Stageberg

University of Idaho volleyball team got off to the best start in volleyball history.
UNLV

UNLV + FROM PAGE 16

receives Henry Bailey and Randy Gatewood worry Smith.

"Athletically, they're probably the best football team that we're going to play," Smith said.

UNLV runs a speed option offense, which can be difficult to defend if executed well.

Smith said, "It's pretty similar to what our offense runs. We just got to come in and do what we've been told to do — play aggressive."

Similar to Idaho, UNLV often employs a one-back offense with three wideouts.

"The Runnin' Rebels' defense is another story.

In last week's 35-23 loss to Central Michigan, UNLV allowed 551 yards on the ground — a school record for CML.

Smith noted that UNLV's 300-pound roster is "a lot of weights across the offensive line which explains its dominance.

Idaho lacks 300-pound linemen, but that doesn't mean they won't run the ball.

"We believe we can run the football and we believe we can run the football on anybody," Smith said. "We've got to come out and try to establish the run, which we always try to do." With the sophomore Thomas, and senior, running back Sherriden May, they are more than able.

May scored his 50th career touchdown in Idaho's first game and only needs 10 more to break the I-AA record held by Chavez Foger. May is currently tied with Jerry Rice, among others, who played for Division I-AA Mississippi Valley State and now plays for the San Francisco 49ers.

Not only will the Vandal secondary be tested for the first time, but also quarterback Eric Hisaw, who completed 11-24 passes for 147 yards.

"I thought he did a good job mentally throughout the entire game," Smith said.

Smith added that the key for Hisaw is to be certain he makes the right defensive read, and he throws to the right receiver.

On offense, the Vandals have been experimenting with the shotgun formation, where the quarterback stands several yards behind the line to receive the snap. This creates more time for the quarterback to get set up in the pocket.

The Runnin' Rebels are a much improved team from last year's 3-8 season. New head coach Jeff Horton, who coached the Nevada Wolfpack to a 7-4 mark in 1993, will try to resurrect a football program which has taken a back seat in a stretch limo to the basketball program for over a decade.

"They've reinvigorated," Smith said. "They're very sound in every thing they do."

A possible hindrance for the Vandals may not be the actual UNLV team, but the arid desert weather.

Las Vegas temperatures, even in the evening, have been hovering around the century mark — a drastic change from the freezing fall temperatures in Moscow.

Smith, however, has his own opinion. "It's not a big deal to anybody. It will be hot, but once you get out there, you don't notice it at all."

Injury-wise, the Vandals are healthy with the exception of defensive lineman Jake Greenlit who has an injured ankle.

Tight end Andy Gilroy had a lung partially collapse but should be ready to play, according to Smith. Free safety Mingi Hunt and linebacker Tommy Knecht have also suffered minor injuries but will also be ready for Saturday.

"We're going to find out just how good we are this week," Smith said.

Bowling team needs players

The UI bowling team is looking for new members. All skill levels are welcome to attend team practices on Saturday at 10 a.m. or Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

WSU annual golf tourney Oct. 1

Entries are being accepted for the annual Washington State University Veterans Memorial Golf Tournament on Saturday, Oct. 1.

The 18-hole golf scramble begins at 8:30 a.m. at the WSU Golf Course. Teams will be made up of four and five players, with individual entrants assigned to teams before play begins.

The cost is $50 per person. The tournament benefits the Veterans Scholarship Fund and improvements to the Veterans Memorial.

Sports Editor Needed!

If you are in to football, basketball, volleyball, soccer and all those fun sports, do we have a job for you! The 1994-95 Gem of the Mountains is seeking a Sports Editor. If you are interested, please call 885-6082.

Royal Shop

Chinese Food
(205) 882-1728
Palouse Empire Mall
LUNCH AND DINNER
COMBO MEALS
ONLY $3.65 - $3.95
Lo Mein
Egg Roll
Chow Mein
Fried Rice
Fried Prawns
Egg Foo Young
Almond Chicken
Hot Spicy Chicken
Sweet & Sour Spareribs
Sweet & Sour Chicken
Sweet & Sour Pork
"DELICIOUS FOOD FOR A PRICE YOU'LL ENJOY!"

ALPINE DESIGNS MOUNTAIN BIKE SALE

THE HOWLIN' DAWG IS BACK!

1994 EXPRESS; NOW! $199
GREAT LOOKS, SHIMANO 18 SPEED SHIFTING & MORE.

1994 EXPLORE; NOW! $275
FULLY INDEXED SHIMANO SHIFTING W/ GEAR DISPLAY, ALLOY RIMS, ETC.

ALL ACCESSORIES ON SALE
SEPT. 17 & 18 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. both days
Latah Grain Growers Bldg. on sixth st. in Moscow (across from Gambino's)
FREE INFO 1.800.263.9373

U USSR rugby club in search of players

The University of Idaho Rugby Club is looking for both experienced and novice players. The team practices every Tuesday and Thursday at Guy Wicks Field.

For more information, call Mark Dobroljovic at 885-6082.
Men's track meet Sept. 21

A men’s track and field meeting will be on Wednesday, September 21 in the Kibbie Dome (#219A) at 7:00 p.m. for both new and old members of the team. Potential and returning athletes should see coach Mike Keller in the Kibbie Dome (#227), or call 885-0210 before attending the meeting.

Fall track and field practice officially begins October 10, 1994. Physical examinations are required of all athletes on September 22 at the Kibbie Dome training room. See Barrie Steele, UI trainer, before September 22 in order to complete the required paperwork.

Tennis tourney starts Sept. 24

The “End of Summer” tennis challenge will be Sept. 24-25. The tournament will be at the Washington State University Tennis Center and is sponsored by Rheebs and the Moscow-Pullman Daily News.

The tournament welcomes men and women of all skill levels. Along with singles and doubles there is an open bracket, mixed doubles and junior level competition. Entry fee for singles play is $10.00 and for doubles, $15.00.

The entry deadline is Sept. 20. For more information, call Carl Groce, WSU women’s tennis coach, at 353-0308 or 353-0247. You can mail your entry to: Carl Groce, Bohler 201, Washington State University, Pullman, WA 99164-1610.

Ex-Vandals European bound

Former Vandal basketball players Orlando Lightfoot and Deon Watson will play in Europe this summer. Lightfoot was drafted into the CBA, but will opt for Europe.

---

University of Idaho women take some time out to get rid of aggressive urges by participating in the intramural flag football program.

---

specials -
the garden lounge

- Blue Monday: $2 drinks from our drink list
- Tuesday: $1 wells & drafts all day
- Wednesday: any beverage 1/2 price 8-10 p.m.
- Thursday: Happy Hour prices till 10 p.m.

in the moscow hotel - downtown moscow

---

The #1 Selection is Pizza Perfection

OPEN TILL DAILY • TAX INCLUDED ON ALL PRICES

Free Thick Crust Always!

428 W. 3rd

FREE PIZZA!!

When you buy one 12", 16", 26", or 28" at regular price, get the 2nd one FREE +2 FREE CONES

---

CANDLEBOX

with special guest

FLAMING LIPS

Saturday, October 1st, 7:30 p.m.
Beasley Performing Arts Center
Pullman, Washington

Tickets available at all G&B Select-A-Seat outlets, or charge-by-phone at 1-800-325-6547. Tickets also available at Beasley Coliseum and the Depot in downtown Pullman. Ticket prices subject to agency service charge.

PRODUCED BY MCA/DOUBLE TEE/PDG

---

ON STAGE WITH

Russian Pianist

MIKHAIL

YANOVI RTSKY

Experience noted at a time it was meant to be.

The 1st Prize in the Moscow Moscow International Competition "Performing Leningrads No. 1" was awarded for the best version of the Bach “Goldberg Variations” and especially the 36. "The pianist played splendidly," the judges declared. His performance will explode and show audiences the purest and most authentic, "full of grace and talent. The pianist also demonstrated his mastery of the keyboard," the judges added.

---

Friday, September 16, 1994
This Comics Page Is Proudly Sponsored By

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO
BOOKSTORE

Deakin Ave • Across From The Student Union
885-6469

Bound & Ground
Dana Summers

BOOK SIGNING
Wednesday, September 21, 1994
IVAN DOIG

"The American West as Heart Earth"

Presentation at 1:30 PM in the Student Union Borah Theatre.
Book Signing To Follow Inside the Bookstore