Fraternity makes a run for the money to benefit St. Jude’s

by Lea Anne Anderson

No one is really sure why the men of Tau Kappa Epsilon, a fraternity on the Palouse, decided to run a marathon to raise money. But the men of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity have drawn large crowds and raised money for a cause. They have taken a 4-foot-tall trophy from their house and began raising money through donations, with proceeds benefitting St. Jude’s Children’s Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

"Every year we get the same don-

Ib men. There are so many people who normally make their house and tell us ‘no one really cares what just isn’t going on, and the old lady members club. The TKE runner, said. The 1980s, for many men, were a time when the men often competed. The TKE brothers have raised money through donations, which benefit St. Jude’s.

In the past, fraternity members have raised money for St. Jude’s by participating in events such as marathons, races, and other athletic activities. The fraternity is known for its philanthropic efforts and has raised money for various causes over the years.

The fraternity has also taken part in fundraising events such as the "Cuppa Crock" event, where members of the fraternity sell cookies to raise money for St. Jude’s. The fraternity is known for its tradition of raising money for charitable causes.

The event was held at St. Jude’s hospital and made a "TKE Home." There was also an interesting moment at 2 a.m. when "Shadow the Tan Bear" was found. It was a memorable moment for the TKE brothers.

SQUIRRELS

--The two tell stories of the same squirrel, each with a unique perspective.

--The squirrel in the first story is a curious observer of the human world, while the squirrel in the second story is a mischievous creature who loves to cause trouble.

--Both stories highlight the importance of perspective and the power of storytelling in shaping our understanding of the world.

--The squirrel in the first story learns to respect and appreciate the beauty of the human world, while the squirrel in the second story learns to control its own mischievous impulses.

--Both stories are told in a lighthearted and whimsical style, perfect for readers of all ages.

How to do what you have a squirrel infestation:

1. Purchase a humane squirrel trap from your local hardware store.

2. Place the trap near a squirrel's favorite food source.

3. Check the trap daily and release the squirrel outside the building.

4. Repeat as needed until the squirrel is caught.

Big name on campus

Many are responsible for bringing Reno, others to campus

Voting from former U.S. attorney generals do not just happen. Thanks to the Reed College of Law, a future U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno will speak in the 2000 Bilbraps at 2 p.m. today. The event is funded by an endowment of more than $1 million donated by the late Sherman D. Bell, Jr., College of Law alumnus. The intent of the event is to bring nationally known speakers to campus each year to discuss a variety of legal issues.

Ms. Reno takes many of her experiences from several individuals and organizations to get big names like hers on a campus. Three committee members chair the Reed College of Law, chief justice of the Idaho State Supreme Court and the president of the Idaho State Bar. They are responsible for bringing high-profile lecturers to campus.

The work involved in getting those big names includes that performed before the students. Leaders Phillips and others at the College of Law are willing to put forth a great deal of effort in order to provide students with beneficial and interesting speakers.

The process involves extending an invitation to speakers to present and highly select those who have an audience or who have worked with the selected speaker to the listeners who correspond with the College of Law’s constituencies.

The College of Law finds support from various other members of the university community, such as the Reed College of Law student body, the student body of the University of the Idaho College of Law, athletics, etc., making the lecture what Philip says rights a “student community cornerstone.”

Not only does the lecture series provide students with a quality speaker each year, it provides students with an opportunity to engage in a campus environment. When you get the Janet Reno of the world on your campus, you must have something worthwhile.

The lecture series benefits people throughout the state. This year, it is being broadcast in Boise at the Boise State University ABN station. There is also a televised broadcast to the northern Idaho community, KTVB-C, Idaho Falls.

Reid is now one of the more often speakers available to enter to the university since the lecture series began in 1990. He has been Charles F. Whelahan, the University Professor of Law at the University of the Pacific, the Eras Freund Professor of Law and Ethics at the University of Chicago, and the 1990-1991 Halsell Lecturer, a Politik Print-product-writer in 1991 , and so. She has a testimonial to the United States Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O’Connor and Jimmy Carter.

UI has benefited from the law School Lecture series for six years now, and we doubt will continue to reap the rewards in the future.

Garbage Emerges from the Other Trash

By Daron Williams

Garbage has never been your typical rock band. With a sound that balances punk, pop, and experimental rock, the band has always stood out in the industry. Their latest album, "Where the Wild Things Are," is no exception.

The album opens with "Wreck Me," a track that immediately grabs the listener's attention. The song features a powerful guitar riff and政strong vocals from lead singer Shirley Manson. The lyrics are raw and honest, reflecting the band'ssignature style.

"Dial" is another standout track on the album. This upbeat, infectious tune features a catchy melody and infectious rhythm. The chorus is particularly memorable, with Manson's distinctive vocals soaring over the music.

"Stingray," a slower track, offers a more introspective side of the band. The acoustic guitar and strings create a tender atmosphere that contrasts with the hard edges of the band's usual sound.

Garbage's sound is known for its versatility, and "Where the Wild Things Are" continues this tradition. Whether it's the punk rock energy of "Wreck Me" or the emotional depth of "Stingray," the band never fails to surprise and delight with their musical explorations.

Garbage's latest album is a testament to the band's enduring creativity and commitment to pushing boundaries. With "Where the Wild Things Are," Garbage once again proves that they are leaders in the world of rock music.
'Hearts' are willing, but Atlantis doesn't translate into big screen

If Stephen King's reputation is what it may seem to be, The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter is a bit of a surprise. The book inspires awe in the reader, and the film does the same for me. There are moments of anger, frustration, and hopelessness, but these emotions don't seem to be what is being portrayed in Atlantis.

The movie surrounds the story of two couples, one with a child and the other with a grown boy. The main character is a young man who is on the run from the law. The movie is a dark and gritty tale of a boy who is trying to find his way in the world. The film is slow and confusing, and it doesn't do justice to the book.

Tenacious D walks tight line in self-titled debut

Tenacious D walk a tight line in their self-titled debut, as they combine rock and roll with heavy metal. The band's debut album, released in 1999, is a fun mix of punk rock and heavy metal. The band's music is fast and aggressive, with the band members playing their instruments at full volume.

The album includes songs like "Lung of a Rat," "Black Hole Sun," and "My Friend," which are all powerful and intense. The band's music is a perfect mix of heavy metal and punk rock, and it is sure to please fans of both genres. The album is a must-listen for any fan of Tenacious D.

University of Idaho volleyball dropped a straight set match of the season on Tuesday night when the Vandals and Montana State battled in the Coliseum. The match was part of the 19th Annual University of Idaho Women’s Volleyball Tournament. The match ended in a 3-0 sweep for the Bobcats with final scores of 25-19, 25-12, and 25-19.

"We're very young and we're not staying competitive," Montana State Head Coach Linda Bragonier said after the match. "We haven't played good volleyball together as a team. But we're learning."

The Bobcats had a strong start to the match, jumping out to a 7-0 lead in the first set. The Vandals were able to break through with a 7-0 run, but Montana State was able to take a 14-8 lead after two runs of their own. The Bobcats won the first set, 25-19, and started the second set with a 9-2 run. The Vandals were able to push the Bobcats to the brink of a 15-1 lead, but fell short with a 25-12 loss.

In the third set, the Vandals were able to take a 13-9 lead, but the Bobcats were able to fight back and win the set, 25-19, to sweep the match.

Baseball steals one win season opener

Idaho Baseball couldn't ask for better starting pitching last Friday as they defeated Dixie State in Salt Lake City in the first fall exhibition of the year in Leopold Tavern.

Under sunny skies, the Vandals hosted the Crimson and Owls at the Maxfield Stadium and displayed their young team throughout the two games. The Vandals took the game of 13-0 for one run with the Owls and won 9-1 over Dixie.

"We're not at all satisfied with the offense," Head Coach Ryan anderson said after the game. "We had 8 hits on the day and only scored 1 run."

The Vandals were able to take control of the game against Dixie State and notched their first win of the year in their opening game.
