Bush reassures a nation placed on high alert

BY LINDA HOOPER

The number of University of Idaho students seeking counseling on campus has shown a 20 percent increase in the last six months. According to the student counseling center in the Student Union Building, 13 percent of students currently receive counseling.

Since September 11, the counseling center has had a reported increase in students seeking counseling. Assistant Director of Counseling Services, Joan Eibbie, said, "It is a time of crisis for many people. We have seen a great deal of anxiety. Students are in crisis and need someone to talk to.

Eibbie said that counselors are particularly effective during times of stress, and that counseling can be provided on an individual, group, or family basis. "We encourage students to seek counseling if they feel they are struggling emotionally," Eibbie said.

Eibbie also emphasized the importance of seeking help early on. "It is important to seek counseling early, before a problem becomes overwhelming," she said.

The counseling center is located in the Union Building. Eibbie can be reached at 885-7040.

Money doesn't grow on trees

But you can save both money and trees through simple acts of conversation.

A significant portion of the money coming to the University of Hawai'i pays the ever-increasing utility bill. Last year, the University spent a bill of $6.4 million, and this year, we expect to increase with higher utility rates.

This money has to come from somewhere. With an impending economic crisis and the 2% reduction in state funding, increased student tuition and the only remaining large line of income, we can see the utility bill, or more accurately, the amount we save on the electric bill, as a way to combat higher fees.

And how do we do that? The key is in simple conversations. When we talk about the cost of electricity, or any other cost for that matter, we can do it in the manner we talk to each other, whether it is our roommates or the people we see in the halls. We can talk about the University, or any other organization, and be open to having those conversations. We can talk about the cost of energy, the cost of water, or any other cost for that matter.

Using energy efficient light bulbs can help the situation. These bulbs use 60% less energy than traditional bulbs. So, if we replace 600 old bulbs in our buildings with these bulbs, we would save $9,000 each month. This would be a savings of $28.4 cents per month per light bulb.

A more 38.4 cents doesn't seem like much, but multiplied by $6,000 the savings is $228,480 every year. And light bulb is expected to last nearly seven years before being replaced.

The small things add up. Everyone can save energy through small acts that take no more than turning off a switch, or walking to class.

The last person to have a room should turn off the lights before leaving. The halls should be closed throughout the day. Ballrooms frequently empty, and therefore have no need to use electricity most of the time.

The residence halls on campus, whether in the residence halls or in the residence halls on the other side of the hall, can be used for their energy cost. Off-campus residents who pay their own utility bills have an additional incentive to turn them down, or even pay for the cost themselves.

Changing one light bulb at a time can make a difference in our current cost. By changing to non-renewable sources, we can help by changing to a non-renewable option.

In conclusion, the cost of energy, the cost of water, or any other cost for that matter, can be reduced through conversations. We can save money, and help the environment.

Sprinklers water more than grass

The sidewalks and streets are being watered every day. The water system is running through the streets, and the water is being used to water the sidewalks, the streets, and the grass. This is a waste of water, and it is not necessary.

Gran folclorico de Mexico
Group presents folk culture in a sophisticated manner

By Andrea Shoup

The University of Idaho, Dance Department, as part of its international program, has invited Carolyn Blank, a noted Mexican folk dancer, to present the latest Mexican folk dance. This group is under the direction of Professor Evelyn Staples.

The group consists of dancers who have been selected from among the best of Mexico’s folk dance, representing the rich cultural heritage of that country. The dancers are trained in traditional folk dances, such as the Jarabe, the Bolero, and the Joropo.

The dancers will perform a variety of folk dances, including the Jarabe, the Bolero, and the Joropo. These dances are performed in a lively and energetic style, with much movement and fluidity.

The group will also perform a traditional Mexican folk dance, which is a popular dance in Mexico. The dancers will wear traditional folk dresses, which are an important part of the cultural identity of Mexico.

The performance will take place on the campus of the University of Idaho, at the Idaho Center for the Performing Arts. The performance will be held at 8 p.m. on Friday, October 19.

The group is part of a larger project that aims to promote Mexican folk dance and culture. The project is supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

This project is an important part of the university’s commitment to promoting cultural diversity and understanding. The group is a great example of how cultural exchange can bring people together and help build understanding between different cultures.

The performance will be open to the public. Admission is $20 for adults, $15 for seniors, and $10 for students. Tickets can be purchased online or at the Idaho Center box office.

Dirty Dozen Brass Band rocks into Moscow on Saturday

The rock, down and mighty New Orleans-style the Dirty Dozen Brass Band will hit the SUI ballroom Saturday.ignored in music history with an intense rock 'n' roll, blues and hard-driving soul sound, the band has been playing and recording music for nearly 25 years and has changed the face of brass band music in the process.

The band has been described as a New Orleans band with a musical edge. The quality of that sound is that people expect you to do a good job. The audience expects something special.

The band is famous for making the world a better place, with every note played. The Dirty Dozen Brass Band is a perfect example of that.

It's hard to categorize the Dirty Dozen Brass Band, creating their own distinct sound. "The concept of the band is to play any and experience with all types of music. We will take a song and adapt it to any particular type of music. It's a picture of scale, and it's just a way of doing what we do with it as the Dirty Dozen." Davis said.

"If the Dirty Dozen was rolling into a highway of sound, they would go from rock 'n' roll to jazz, funk, blues and today."

UI holds on for conference win

by NATHAN ZERKE

The Vandal defense played well enough Saturday night at Memorial Stadium, allowing only 12 points in the 15-3 win over Northern Colorado, but winning a conference game is another story.

The Vandal defense was effective Saturday when they stopped Northern Colorado on the next-to-last drive of the game, but the Vandal offense was not as effective.

Northern Colorado, behind a 12-point lead in the third quarter, was the team that had the ball on the one-yard line with a chance to score on the final drive of the game, but the Vandal defense stopped the Bears from scoring.

Of course, the game was not decided until the final minute of the game, when the Vandal defense forced a fumble on Northern Colorado's final play.

The Vandal defense has been effective throughout the season, and has been the team's biggest strength.

The Vandal offense, on the other hand, has struggled throughout the season.

The Vandal offense scored just one touchdown on the road against Eastern Washington, but scored four touchdowns against Montana.

The Vandal offense has scored just four touchdowns in its last three games, and has scored just one touchdown in its last two games.

Northern Colorado, on the other hand, scored 12 points in the first half of the game, and scored 27 points in the second half.

The Vandal defense has been effective in recent games, and has held opposing teams to less than 15 points in five of its last six games.

The Vandal defense is expected to be tested against Idaho State on Saturday, when the Vandals play at home.

The Vanda
Soccer preps for home conference

BY ROGER DUNN PETERS

US soccer fans had a good chance to see a number of the best women's soccer players in the world when the U.S. Women's National Team faced Sweden in the quarterfinals of the FIFA Women's World Cup on Monday. The game was held at the National Stadium in Stockholm, Sweden, and was the first of two games to be played at the tournament. The second game will be played in the USA on Wednesday, July 18.

The game was decided in the first half when the USA scored two goals within a minute to take a 2-0 lead. In the second half, the USA held on to the lead and eventually won the match 2-0. The win qualified the USA for the semi-finals of the tournament, which will be held in the USA on July 25.

The USA women's national team is currently ranked 10th in the world according to FIFA's world rankings. The team has qualified for the tournament and is one of the favorites to win the competition.

The USA women's national team is currently tied for second place in their group with Germany, with six points from two games. The team will play their final group stage game against Denmark on Thursday, July 18. A win or a draw in that game will guarantee the USA a place in the semi-finals.

The USA men's national team is also in action in the tournament, and will play their final group stage game against Mexico on Thursday, July 18. A win or a draw in that game will guarantee the USA a place in the quarter-finals.

The USA women's national team is currently the most successful women's national team in the world, with two World Cup titles and one Olympic gold medal. The team has won the World Cup twice, in 1999 and 2003, and won the Olympic gold medal in 2008.

The USA women's national team is currently coached by Jill Ellis, who was appointed in 2014. Ellis has been a key figure in the development of women's soccer in the USA, and has been instrumental in bringing women's soccer into the mainstream of American sports.

The USA women's national team is currently preparing for the semi-finals, which will be held in the USA on July 25. The team will play either Germany or France in the semi-finals, with the winners progressing to the final on July 31.
