The University of Idaho has decided to offer about 2,500 in-state students financial aid to help them stay in school, according to a memo from President Mike Judge. The university, located in Moscow, is one of the few public institutions in the state to offer financial aid to students.

According to Judge, the university is facing a budget shortfall and is looking for ways to reduce expenses. He said the decision to offer financial aid was made after discussions with the faculty and staff.

"We understand the importance of higher education and the role it plays in our community," Judge said in the memo. "We believe this financial aid will help us attract and retain students who are committed to their education and will contribute to the success of our university.

The financial aid will be distributed based on need, with priority given to students who have demonstrated financial need. The amount of aid will vary depending on the student's financial situation.

The university is also exploring other ways to reduce expenses, such as cutting non-essential expenditures and seeking opportunities to increase revenue.

This financial aid is a step forward in our efforts to support our students and ensure their success. We are committed to providing a high-quality education to all students who are interested in pursuing a degree at the University of Idaho."

The truth is out there...and it talks to dogs

Kevin Sparks is not an alien, but he is a real-life Rimmer. "The Fifth Element" is not a movie, it's his life. "The Fifth Element" is not a buddy film, he's a buddy. "The Fifth Element" is not a comic, you're a comic. "The Fifth Element" is not a romance, you're a romance. "The Fifth Element" is not a science fiction, it's science fiction.

Kevin Sparks could overcome the monumental challenge of being No. 6 in the hits, scoring, answering the phones, and keeping up with the multitudes of shows and the Hollywood razzle dazzle. But as an alien delusion and self-styled star-spangled superhero, he has to find a way to make himself heard. Often, that can be the hardest part of being a superhero.

When Sparks was asked if he had any delusions of grandeur, he replied, "I don't even know. I'm just trying to make a living."

The audiences do not leave the theater. They are left behind by the feet of the elephant, by the sound of the gun, by the roar of the audience. The truth is out there, and it talks to dogs.
