UI may offer in-house dental service to students

The University of Idaho is considering offering an in-house dental service to students. The university has received a proposal from a local dental provider who has expressed interest in setting up a clinic on campus. The proposed clinic would be a cost-effective option for students who need dental care, especially those who may not have access to affordable dental services. The university is currently reviewing the proposal and will make a decision soon.

Pinkham to compete in Miss Indian pageants

Christiane Pinkham, a freshman from Lapwai, is participating in the Miss Indian World competition.

Christiane Pinkham is hedging at Albright's. 3:15, April 11. Not to enjoy the sun, but to partake in the Miss Indian World Competition.

This national pageant ranks alongside the premier Miss America competition as one of the majorPageants. Miss Indian World is the largest Indian cosmopolitan pageant held in the United States and Canada to represent American Indian culture.

Pinkham, who is a member of the Nez Perce tribe, is a 19-year-old junior at the College of Idaho. Pinkham is a member of the Nez Perce tribe.

This is the first competition for Pinkham, a Friedman studying architec- ture and clothing and textile design. Pinkham also competed in the Miss Idaho World and the National Congress of American Indian pageant, which was held last November in Spokane.

"I'm not good at public speaking, a personal interview, talent competition. For her traditional talents, Pinkham plans to include a traditional dance from the Nez Perce. The Nez Perce made the dress out of only three yards of fabric. "They said they were going to pay me, but they didn't. I think it's more important. The only way I can help our people is to show our culture." Pinkham said.

At the gathering last year, there were 24 girls who competed for the title. Compared with the six who were entered this year, "there's no way I can be competitive," Pinkham said.

Pinkham will compete in different categories, including public speaking, a personal interview, and talent competition. For her traditional talents, Pinkham plans to include a traditional dance from the Nez Perce.

"I just wanted to see if I could. I wanted to have fun," Christiane Pinkham said.

Idaho teachers fight education cuts

By BOB BEYER
April 18, 2007

A statewide rally Tuesday brought teachers and educators to Boise in march on the state capital with hopes to make an impression on lawmakers.

The rally was held in response to cutbacks in education funding that have threatened to close schools and eliminate jobs for teachers.

"It's not so much about the money," said one teacher at the rally. "It's about the future of our children."

The rally was organized by the Idaho Education Association and was expected to draw thousands of educators from across the state.

"We're here to show our support for public education," said another teacher. "We want our kids to have the opportunities that we had when we were growing up."

The rally was held in front of the Idaho State Capitol and ended with a march through downtown Boise.

"We're here to demand that our leaders take action to protect our schools," said a third teacher. "We can't afford to lose the teachers that our kids need."

The rally was just one of many that have taken place across the state in recent months.

In March, teachers in the Treasure Valley held a rally in Boise to demand more funding for education.

And in February, teachers in the Lewis and Clark school district held a rally to protest proposed budget cuts.

"We're tired of hearing that we have to make sacrifices," said a teacher at the Lewis and Clark rally. "Our kids deserve better than that."

The rally in Boise was the largest of the three, with an estimated 5,000 people in attendance.

"We're not going to back down," said the Idaho Education Association president. "We're going to keep fighting for our schools and our kids."

The rally ended with a march through downtown Boise, with thousands of teachers and educators chanting slogans like "No Cuts!" and "Education is a right, not a privilege!"

Cellulite is God’s gift to humanity

Cellulite keeps women from feeling confident and beautiful. It’s a curse, a problem, a source of embarrassment and discomfort. But instead of trying to get rid of it, why not embrace it? Cellulite is a natural part of the human body and it is a reminder of our imperfections and the beauty that can come from them.

Beauty magazines everywhere promote the idea of idealized female semi-nakedness or to the point, absurdity. These ads show women with cellulite, but they always have their cellulite photoshopped away. How can we possibly be happy with our own bodies when we see these pictures?

The economy would go down if cellulite disappeared. There’s no need to waste money on products that claim to get rid of cellulite. Instead, let’s celebrate it. If cellulite disappeared, there would be no need for makeup, no need for plastic surgery, and no need for the fashion industry.

We need to stop focusing on fixing our flaws and start focusing on loving ourselves for who we are. It’s a hard habit to break, but with time and practice, it can be done.

So let’s stop hating cellulite and start appreciating it. It’s a reminder of our humanity and our struggles.

What do you think about cellulite? Should we celebrate it or try to get rid of it? Let us know in the comments below.

Lena Rees and Buffy Wainwright both grew up with rock and roll in their lives.

Lena Rees grew up in a family with a love for music, and her parents encouraged her to play the guitar and sing. She began playing at a young age and was inspired by the music of Jimi Hendrix and Led Zeppelin. She learned to play the guitar at the age of 13 and has been performing ever since. Lena has a natural talent for music and has won several competitions and awards for her performances.

Buffy Wainwright grew up in a family with a similar passion for music, and her parents encouraged her to sing and play the piano. She began playing at an early age and was inspired by the music of Janis Joplin and Janis Ian. She learned to sing and play the piano at the age of 10 and has been performing ever since. Buffy has a natural talent for music and has won several competitions and awards for her performances.

The two girls met in high school and quickly discovered they had a similar interest in music. They began playing together and soon formed a band. They have since released several albums and have gained a loyal following.

Despite their different backgrounds, Lena and Buffy share a common passion for music and a love for performing. They continue to inspire each other with their performances and have become a strong force in the music industry.
Basketball teams get no respect

I am a sports fan to the hilt—okay, I now admit it—and I probably should be getting psychiatric help. Recently, I have been disillusioned with the quality of basketball I see played now, and I never have before. I have a difficult time figuring out why this quality is lower than in the past. That is why I am writing this letter to you, venting my usual frustration.

Now you might be thinking, "Well, who could blame me for not liking basketball?" But I do like basketball. I was a basketball fanatic when I was in junior high school, and I am now a basketball fan at heart. I also like to watch basketball on television, and I enjoy playing basketball with my friends.

I am not saying that basketball is not a good sport. It is a great sport, and I have enjoyed playing it and watching it for many years. I am just saying that the quality of basketball has decreased over the years, and I am not sure why.

One reason might be that the players are not as skilled as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was dominated by one player, a guardsman named Vally. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is dominated by a guardsman named Vally, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I also think that the coaches are not as good as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was coached by a man named Vally. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is coached by a man named Vally, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I think that the fans are not as interested in basketball as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was always packed with fans. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is not packed with fans, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I also think that the media is not as interested in basketball as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was covered by a lot of reporters. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is not covered by a lot of reporters, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I think that the players are not as motivated as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was motivated to win. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is not motivated to win, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I think that the referees are not as fair as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was never given a bad call. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is often given a bad call, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

I think that the gymnasiums are not as loud as they used to be. I remember when I was in junior high school, the Oklahoma State University basketball team was always packed with screaming fans. Now the Oklahoma State University basketball team is not packed with screaming fans, and the quality of basketball has decreased.

But I still love basketball. I will continue to watch basketball on television, and I will continue to play basketball with my friends. I will continue to think about basketball, and I will continue to enjoy basketball. But I will continue to think that the quality of basketball has decreased over the years, and I will continue to think that the reasons for this decrease are many and varied. That is why I am writing this letter to you, venting my usual frustration.
