ASUI budget will increase for the next fiscal year

By Megan Otto

Budgets have been set for next year to accommodate all students in the year's projects. The final budget, however, is yet to be approved by the university's board of regents.

The total ASUI budget for the 2002 fiscal year is estimated to be $12,500,000. This is a 12% increase over the $11,200,000 budget for this year. The budget increase is mainly due to the addition of student events and organizational activities.

The majority of the budget is allocated to student events and activities, with $3,500,000 dedicated to this purpose. The second largest budget item is $2,100,000 for student organizations, followed by $1,200,000 for scholarships and $1,000,000 for student travel.

Joe Zeller is up to the task

By Megan Otto

Joe Zeller, a junior in telecommunications, has been named the new ASUI president. Zeller, who has been involved with ASUI for the past three years, is excited about the opportunity to lead the organization.

"I'm looking forward to working with the new council and the new board," Zeller said. "I think we have a great group of people who are committed to making ASUI a successful organization this year."

Students vaporize dorms

Scott Koehler, the residence manager of the University of Idaho, assures us that the dorms are really the evacuation plan. Everything from asbestos and unsuitable "kitchen" reality shows to just making sure that everybody has a bed and a place to sleep.

Every student who moves into the residence halls has a contract that includes liquidity stipulations. If they move out, they have to follow a certain order to ensure that their belongings are not damaged.

The maintenance staff takes care of all the rooms and the entire building.

Koehler says that he feels confident about the vandalism in its pillars. He believes that people usually express themselves by writing poetry or observing words.

By signing up with the statement "I agree," they are ensured of what they can get away with. Koehler also says that graffiti is often a big problem and people usually express themselves by writing poetry or observing words.

Even though Koehler didn't think that most of the graffiti were related to any mental illness. Shelley feels differently. He believes people often are under the influence of alcohol or drugs and stupid.
Myhurn plans to curb cheating on campus

By MIKE OTTO

Who hasn't cheated in a big way in their life? That's how Myron says he feels about his secret weapon, the computer.

"For years, I've been using my secret weapon to combat cheating," he said. "It's my computer."

Myhurn, 35, is the head of the computer science department at the University of Idaho. He started using computers to combat cheating about five years ago.

"I realized that cheating was a serious problem," Myhurn said. "So I decided to take action."

Myhurn uses a program he wrote himself to detect cheating. The program analyzes the work of students who have submitted assignments for grading.

"I've found that cheating is a common problem," Myhurn said. "But with my computer program, I can catch them."
Tensions mount between U.S., Israel

Jerusalem — Growing tensions between the United States and Israel broke into public view Monday, as President Bush defended the strongest Israeli move yet that Israel reverses its 1-day-old offensive into Palestinian areas and-called for a cease-fire.

Bush's message, delivered in a lengthy statement and privately by U.S. Middle East envoy Anthony Zinni, appeared to have some effect.

The president, who has long wanted to see the Israelis and Palestinians reach a lasting peace, said he would continue to work to achieve that goal.

UN Security Council resolution 1325

The council, which had been asked to take up the situation in the region, met Monday night but did not take action.

The council, which had been asked to take up the situation in the region, met Monday night but did not take action.

In the meantime, the United States, France, and Britain issued a joint statement adding their voices to the international condemnation of the Israeli offensive.

The statement said the Israeli action violated international law and was an abuse of force.

The United States, France, and Britain also called for a cease-fire and a negotiated settlement to the Mideast conflict.

The council's failure to take action on the Israeli offensive was seen as a sign of its divided stance on the issue.

BELLY UP TO THE BELL CURVE

It's statistics as usual at UI

Last semester, a study questioning UI students about their use of alcohol was conducted. After compiling the results, the researchers concluded that students have lower expectations than their peers regarding the effects of alcohol on their lives. This resulted in lower perceived risks and less effective protective strategies for students.

So any overly excessive promotion of the results is to be expected as part of the effort to improve UI's image. And what if the study were conducted elsewhere? For example, there is another study that aimed to investigate college students' perceptions of alcohol and its effects on the university. However, this study did not find any significant correlation between alcohol use and perceived risk of injury or harm.

For instance, the study found that students who drank alcohol were less likely to report feeling drowsy, confused, or impaired. However, these findings were not statistically significant, and there was no evidence of a causal relationship between alcohol use and lower perceived risks.

In conclusion, the study conducted at UI and elsewhere failed to support the idea that alcohol use is associated with lower perceived risks. Therefore, it is important to continue educating students about the potential risks and dangers of alcohol use, as well as to promote healthier choices and behaviors.

Don’t mess with Texas

by Jennifer Hathaway

Shannon makes a tape for Matt. Matt lives on No. 4, across Nate to lateness, and he’s described to Shannon that his name is Nate. He puts No. 4 and No. 7 on a CD for his girlfriend. Nate’s room is over and over again. They ask Nate to the dance in the rock music scene. He’s taken to these homes. It’s good to see these things, but they’re making fun of the girls who are riding to their car. One girl, John, No. 4, on the radio station.

The 4th day of April, 1988. The discovery of observability through the rock scene.

Fortunately for these girls, early enough to discover those indie严禁, the musical merit almost always exceeds expectations.

Operation and Centro-matic are a little bit of everything. Both bands have their own take on indie严禁. Centro-matic is recognized as players in the indie严禁. As a matter of fact, Varnaline, newest release, "Songs in a Northern Wind," was recognized by the magazine as having a "graceful, but ample, epic" sound. Centro-matic, with singer Will Johnson, guitar and song writer behind Centro-matic, and Ben Maudy, vocalist and guitarist, "Best Male Vocalist" award in some state of Texas.

However, the true test of the quality of these two bands does not take into consideration the rock music scene, but rather, their love for the world, the city, the people who make music together.

Centro-matic, consisting of centered guitar, bass, drums, and accordion, has纫 of 20 years by Centro-matic vocalist and drummer/producer Matt Pepe, has released an album with the name Centro-matic, his name. In 1985, the Denver, Texas based band can also count a variety of songs and albums on their discography.

News from Shannon: the band is working on more songs, and the fans are asking for more Centro-matic. The band’s debut album is entitled "Songs in a Northern Wind." The album is the brain child of band's front man, Will Johnson.

The band's discography features an array of styles, from rock to folk to country. The band's sound has been described as "dreamy," "whimsical," and "romantic." The album is a testament to the band's ability to create a unique sound that is both accessible and meaningful. The songwriting is intelligent and heartfelt, with a pop sensibility that is both catchy and memorable.

Incorporating elements of rock, indie严禁, and folk, Centro-matic's music is a reflection of the band's diverse influences and musical experiences. The album is a celebration of the power of music to connect us, to inspire us, and to bring us together.

He's not so 'wonderful now'

Known for his work with alt-rocking band Everclear, Alexakis performed a mediocre set of past favorites mixed with a couple new tracks.

less of an acoustic concert and more a way for Alexakis to have the opportunity to meet and greet fans, his performance was definitely set up to not disappoint multiple times during each song. With a microphone right in front of him, the experience of hearing any song played the whole way through.

Listening to Alexakis became a chore. Not just because his voice was obviously hoarse and he was having trouble hitting the high notes, but every time he'd play a chord through a song he'd hit a wrong chord. Even the lyrics are on the flip to the remainder of the song.

He didn't get the crowd involved in the show, bringing up backup vocals, percussion, and even keyboard in one occasion. Multiple times Alexakis brought a group of students on stage to do a song. You would have thought he was performing at a fair, rather than the high school.

Alexakis gave up on playing songs in their entirety completely and performed small segments of them, with long breaks in between. It was as if the gap between performer and the fans was invisible on the stage.

Alexakis' dedication to fan interaction in his show was commendable but went too far. Fan interaction is a great thing, but not at the expense of the music. People come to a show to watch a concert, not to watch the family chit chats of the performer. If I wanted to see the family chit chats, I would walk around the block and watch the Greeks perform jingles for Greek Week.

One of the reasons Alexakis said he wanted to tour alone and acoustic was to bring his songs back to their basic form. This was painfully evident Friday as most of his songs all sound alike, or at least the same. When only half the song is played and he only sing half the notes.

The 'red' thing

I didn't condemn a couple of other tracks on the "Copilot" disc, but only as minor detours in a long track. This makes for some scatological moments, as on "VIP" where the singer tells the audience "I don't want you controlling me!" You can't help but say "Yeah, we've heard that before." The last track on the disc, "The Yard" shows the opening numbers, and most of the first disc is in order. It evolves from a minimal, nimble white, to a minimal, short-winded performer, then dives smoothly, stunningly, slowly, and surprisingly into the album's strengths.

The genius of this work is its strange coherence. It's a collection of bits, pieces, songs, epigrams, and jingles put together with a tight focus on this song, this album. The tracks are reminiscent of different kinds of music: rock, jazz, pop, folk, and country. Each track tells a story of its own, and this story is not told in any way. Some places are more successful than others, but none of it is a throwaway material. The song, "Sweet Child o' Mine," from the album "Appetite for Destruction" comes to mind. The genius of this work is its strange coherence.

Tennis championships are looking at the Vandals for a tile, but this year's talent is different, with new players and experienced ones.

The Vandals completed the sweep in two sets by shaving the Gophers 6-2, 6-2. The two teams met in the NCAA regional match at the Boise State Center.

Two pairs of Britahlas, and Lom-Tucker and Mulvahil. The first set was 6-4, and the second was 6-2.

The two teams split the singles with three aces and two tiebreakers. In the first set, the Vandals came by a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, and 6-2. The second set was 6-2, 6-2.

The team says a lot. A seniors, Dufilh and Mucharraz, swept the Wildcats with a 6-2, 6-2, and 6-2. The seniors have been mainstays in the team's success.

The Vandals had to retire matches due to a slight knee injury, which could affect their scheduling in the future.

Women restring teams

The Vandals' women's tennis team got a big win on Thursday, improving their overall record to 5-1.

The team beat Texas Christian University 6-2, 6-2, and 6-2. The win was a big one for the Vandals, who have been struggling in recent matches.

Jennifer Ulrich, the team's top singles player, said, "This win is huge for us. We've been working hard for a long time and it's finally paying off."
