Constitution waits approval

by MEGAN OKIN

ast week, the ASUI Senate on March 13, the constitution go wait for approval from President Bob Hoover and the student body.

The last constitution was drafted in 1976. It's been a white sheet across the body of applications to the ASUI Senate. The ASUI Senate will be working with Kent. Justice Edinger has been working on the new constitution since last semester.

The amount of time that has passed since the last constitution, has brought many changes to the University of Idaho. The old constitution was

A new constitution has been necessitated by the increase of students and the current constitution isn't large enough to handle the changes that will be introduced to the campus in coming years and reasons before the time of the new constitution.

Another major change in the addition of the ASUI Senate. The bill of rights includes right to fair representation, right to attend all assembly meetings and the right to access information about the make and in a policy-making. They don't really have a chance to change anything without overturning the constitution.

Among the major changes is to increase the number of senators on the ASUI Senate from 13, it will be increased to 15 if this constitution is passed. We need to know that this constitution will be as just possible. Vaughn said.

Another number of senators and meetings the senators must attend on will be increased to 3 per semester that will be introduced to the campus in coming years and reasons before the time of the new constitution.

SCHOOLHOUSE ROCK COMES TO LIFE

A run to remember

5K run will help fund scholarships for Sept. 11 victims' families

by JAY JAMES

More than six months after Sept. 11, the University of Idaho is still finding ways to lend a helping hand.

Student Alumni Relations Board is sponsoring a 5K walk/run to raise money for the ASUI Student Scholarship Fund, a post-secondary education scholarship established for spouses and children of Sept. 11 victims.

"We're a university of higher education gaining higher education," co-organizer Cari Pace said.

Her Untouchables, along with other groups, have been formed to honor those who have passed away.

When she was nominated to be the chair of the board, she found her chance to put her skills into action.

A 5K registration run is required for individual runners. Teams are required to pledge at least $50, and there may be as few as five runners per team. Senior expects most of the money to come in through donations. "I don't really see anyone helping out for pledges. Also, it's a fun little race that lets everyone have the opportunity to win prizes if they bring in the most money.

Prizes include dinner and athletic gear. "Some of that will go to people who bring in money, who earn the most money and bring it in. Some of that will be run to the race.

All races will receive a "Run to Remember" T-shirt. Teams who register by Friday will have the race number print on it on the back of their shirts. Local elementary school students entered a contest to design the T-shirt. The winners will receive the race number print on the front of their T-shirts, any time before the race begins. "We're pushing for pre-registration just for senior," Searle said.

"We have a lot of teams forming. We're going to the Rock Chute and all the race officials. Arvidson said. The race is open to all, with the door open to all. The race begins at 9:30 a.m. at the corner of South and Oakman Avenue. The course for the run is a 5K course of campus.

The run is in cooperation with the ASUI Student Scholarship Fund. All proceeds will benefit Sept. 11 victims.

Registration forms are available at the SUB and Correction center. As well as the Student Recreation Center and Alumni Office.

Week celebrates workers' rights, life of Chavez

by MEGAN OKIN

March 31 marks the Easter celebration, a Christian holiday; however, most people don't realize it was named in honor of Cesar Chavez.

Chavez was the creator of a small farm and worked for rights of his life in poverty. Cesar Chavez was the heart of Cesar Chavez, working to eliminate hunger for the most works.

"It's a holiday for everyone," said Hispanic Alliance of the Office of Multicultural Affairs, which is just one of the sponsors of the event. Others include the College Assistance Migrant Programs, the Urpano-Environmetal advocacy, Women of the Church, United American and Human Rights and the United Center's "For us to be a part of it, our rights to take action in their communities," Searle said.

Chavez, a great believer in people who organized the first farm workers union in 1962. The union was called the National Farm Workers Association and later renamed the United Farm Workers. Chavez organized and participated in several bigger strikes, including one that last for 36 days.

The rights Chavez fought for included the right to strike, the right to organize, the right to unionize and the right to collective bargaining. Chavez's group representatives of unions still organizing people who are still fighting for them. He is also recognized for his work in the labor movement, and for his courage in the face of adversity, including one that last for 36 days.

Gas prices on the rise again

Gus prices in Moscow have again began rising steadily. The price of gas in Russia has been increasing rapidly over the past few months, with prices rising by more than 20% in recent weeks. The rising gas prices in Moscow are causing concerns among the local residents, who are facing increased expenses for fuel.

Nation's most endangered national parks ranked

By Michael Kline

WASHINGTON (KRT) — Yellowstone, Everglades, Glacier and Giant Steps National Parks remain among the nation's most endangered national parks because of pollution, environmental degradation and overuse by visitors, according to a list released Tuesday by the National Parks Conservation Association. The list, released today in its "20 most endangered" list for the year, calls for the protection of national parks that are under threat from various environmental and human activities.

The list released today includes Yellowstone, Everglades, Glacier and Giant Steps National Parks, which are listed as among the most endangered national parks. These parks are threatened by various environmental and human activities, including pollution, environmental degradation and overuse by visitors.

He's no Houdini.

The most well-known escape act of Houdini was called "the great escape" and was performed in 1903. However, it is unclear whether the escape act was performed in 1903 or 1905.

The escape act involved Houdini's attempt to escape from a locked box while it was being filled with water. Houdini performed this act several times, but it is unclear whether it was performed in 1903 or 1905.

Most motorists have noticed gas prices rising lately. The Department of Energy has reported that the national average for gasoline in the United States rose to $3.48 per gallon at 9:30 a.m. Friday, up from $3.39 per gallon earlier in the week. The increase is attributed to higher oil prices and increased demand for gasoline.

The department also reported that the average price for diesel fuel rose to $3.85 per gallon, up from $3.79 per gallon the previous week. The rise in diesel fuel prices is due to increased demand from commercial vehicles.

Students campaign for roasters to serve only 'fair-trade' beans

BY MARY RATCLIFF

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — The papers in Colin McDonald’s office provide a glimpse into campus culture, one that likes to fight for good coffee, good farmers, good, old-fashioned poaching power.

McDonald pulls out sheets after sheets of Susan reviewed in black, red and purple. This winter, he told his students at Western Washington University. They had already signed 2,000 signatures on a petition urging campus bookstore officials to name-name where the university’s fair-trade coffee came from.

McDonald served fair-trade coffee at a fair-trade coffee roaster’s coffee shop through the student union. But with the school considering bids for a new 10-year fair-trade contract, McDonald and the group he backed, Students Fair Trade, are working with other — including students and staff who have received and prepared fair-trade coffee on campus.

Wage certified, third-party monitors must have visited the farms, said McDonald, so paid a fair price for their beans.

Western Washington University students have taken up the cause.

In the past year, several groups on the campus had worked with the University of Washington, the University of California, Los Angeles, and have successfully begun to brew other beans to brew more fair-trade coffee at the school.

The students are working against Starbucks — which, he said, “is not a fair trade company” — and McDonald, a sophomore at WWU’s Fair Trade Coffee. He and several other students are working to improve the quality of coffee for people and the environment.

"We’re trying to get them to work hard on the coffee," he said. "We’re trying to get them to work hard on the coffee."
Time to play fair
Legislature should consider its own 'gaming' before attacking tribes

The past few years, Idaho and other state governments have sought federal support for their creative interpretations of gaming laws to enable them to increase tax revenues for Native American nations. Although these treaties have been largely ignored in the past, recent attitude changes have given them renewed importance. The autonomy of the Idaho reservations has grown so important to the state that Idaho is increasingly finding new opportunities to raise money through gaming. Elected officials in Idaho have been under fire for their attempts to bring the American Indian gaming to Idaho, not because they are interested in the revenue, but because they have not been able to get the money they want from the federal government. The Idaho legislature is currently considering proposals to allow the state to tax American Indian gaming on its reservations, which would allow them to control the flow of money to the state, instead of the federal government. This would be a significant step in the right direction, as it would give Idaho more control over its own finances and allow the state to develop its own gaming industry. The Idaho legislature should consider its own 'gaming' before attacking tribes.
The smooch of death

Now that the Oscars are over, movie-goers can focus on what's truly important in movies: death and humor

By Chris Kornacki

In the tradition of Trading Places, I wanted to smooth out the high/low conflict. The films in this category, "Shadow," "A Touch of Zen," "Mommie Dearest," "Tales of the Crypt," and "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." have been boiled down to their essence.

Both Shadow and A Touch of Zen are about nearly identical storylines. Shadow is about the rise of the Chinese Communist Party, while A Touch of Zen is about the rise of the Japanese military. Both films are characterized by their use of visual effects and their depiction of violence.

Mommie Dearest is about the rise of the Roman Catholic Church, while The Man from U.N.C.L.E. is about the rise of the KGB. Both films are characterized by their use of propaganda and their depiction of religious and political corruption.

Tales of the Crypt is about the rise of the supernatural, while The Man from U.N.C.L.E. is about the rise of the espionage. Both films are characterized by their use of horror and science fiction elements.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E. is about the rise of the Cold War, while Shadow is about the rise of the Cold War. Both films are characterized by their use of espionage and their depiction of global politics.

Shadow and A Touch of Zen were both directed by Akira Kurosawa, while Mommie Dearest was directed by Mira Nair. The Man from U.N.C.L.E. was directed by John Frankenheimer, while Tales of the Crypt was directed by Wes Craven.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E. and Mommie Dearest both had cast members who went on to have successful careers. The Man from U.N.C.L.E. had actors such as Robert Duvall, John Voight, and George C. Scott, while Mommie Dearest had actors such as Faye Dunaway, Glenn Close, and Michelle Pfeiffer.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E. and Mommie Dearest both had box office success, with the former grossing over $100 million and the latter grossing over $50 million. Shadow and A Touch of Zen both had limited release, with the former grossing over $5 million and the latter grossing over $2 million.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E. and Shadow both had critical acclaim, with the former receiving an 85% rating on Rotten Tomatoes and the latter receiving a 60% rating. A Touch of Zen and Mommie Dearest both had mixed reviews, with the former receiving a 55% rating on Rotten Tomatoes and the latter receiving a 35% rating.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E. and A Touch of Zen both had a number of sequels, while Shadow and Mommie Dearest both had no sequels.

Ron Nelson's band, Le Tigre, is coming to Iowa for the first time this weekend as part of their annual "Nikki Le Tigre's Crusade" tour. The group consists of the band's lead singer, Tracie Chapman, her bassist, Tracy Threlkeld, and their drummer, Lauren Patten. They are known for their energetic and raw sound, and their shows are always a hit with fans. The group has a reputation for being one of the most exciting and influential bands on the indie rock scene, and they're sure to bring a great performance to Des Moines. Be sure to catch them if you're in the area.
All that was right with "Blade" is wrong in its sequel

By Tom McCarthy

"Blade II" is the follow-up to one of 2002's successes, almost by promotion, "Blade" an early summer's surprisingly popular movie. "Blade" was a cut-rate "Naked Gun" take on the vampire/vampire hunter story, and I'm sure most people in the audience were still laughing during the sequel. "Blade II" is a cut-rate sequel that probably takes a lot of its humor from the original. The plot, such as it is, is thin, but it's not as thin as the sequel. "Blade II" follows the adventures of a vampire hunter named Blade (played by Wesley Snipes), who is the only one of his kind to have survived. Blade is a man who has lost his family to vampires and has sworn to destroy them. However, his new mission is to save the world from the vampires, who have conquered the planet.

The plot is thin and predictable, and the action scenes are not as intense or thrilling as the original. The effects are also not as good, and the dialogue is often cheesy. The cast is a mix of good and bad actors, with Wesley Snipes standing out as the best of the bunch. The supporting cast includes David Carradine, who plays Blade's mentor, and Luke Hemsworth, who plays Blade's younger brother.

Overall, "Blade II" is a disappointing sequel that fails to live up to the expectations of fans. It's a movie that will appeal to those who enjoy mindless action movies, but for anyone who values a good story, it's a disappointment. The movie is not recommended for anyone who enjoyed the original "Blade."
UI offers little known Spring Break alternative in Moab, Canyonlands

Every year the UI Outdoor Program hosts a Spring Break trip that enables students to visit a wilderness or outdoor area the students may not otherwise see. This year I signed up for a trip to the desert wilderness of southern Utah with six other UI students. This trip was sponsored by the UI Outdoor Program and provided a system of canyons in a remote part of the Moab/Canyonlands area.

The trip was designed to provide students with a true wilderness experience. Each of the participants earned enough money and food on their own to support themselves for a week in the desert. Our education, which was based on the wilderness areas of the Moab region, was not traditional. Each day the group was required to hike specific miles and find a place to camp that night. Depending on our circumstances, we would be required to improvise in the wilderness for safety, weather, and other conditions.

We set out the first day in the middle of the week and completed our regular season on Friday. We started at the 1905-1906 New Mexico State High School base camp in Moab.
