When faith and trust disagree
Local Catholics hold onto beliefs, but begin to question leadership

BY CAROLINE SEARLE

I was born into a family of faith and was raised in a Catholic Church. As a child, I was taught to trust in the Church and its leaders. However, recent events have cast doubt on the Church's ability to maintain its trustworthiness.

I was shown by my family that the Church is the body of Christ and that its leaders are chosen by God to guide the faithful. As a child, I believed that the Church was infallible and that its leaders were always right. But as I have grown older, I have come to realize that this is not always the case.

The Church has maintained a strict code of silence over the years, preventing the faithful from knowing about the wrongdoings of its leaders. This has led many people to question the Church's legitimacy and its ability to maintain trust.

I believe that the Church must address these concerns and take steps to regain the trust of its followers. Only then can the Church continue to be a source of hope and guidance for all who seek its help.

U.S. 95 faces possible 4-lane face lift

BY WENDY HOFF

Future University of Idaho students might one day approach Moscow from the south along U.S. 95, through Paradise Ridge, if the Idaho Transportation Department's proposal to redesign U.S. 95 is implemented. Idahoans recently announced their preferences for a repaved U.S. 95 in a recent survey, made before starting the top of Reiserger Hill, which would have a maximum of two lanes of traffic.

This survey chose an option other than lane widening, which would allow the current highway to flow into Moscow and reduce the grades of some hills. The survey also narrowed the grades of the Revisger Hill, which would be the final ridge of the mountain.

The decision on the preferred alternative is expected in April, after a review of the survey and a review of the survey and a review of the survey.

In the meantime, the survey and a review of the survey and a review of the survey.

No matter what the people said, the Idaho Transportation Department is not going to change its plan. The people's vote is not going to change the decision.

Statement of the administration of the University of Idaho on diversity and human rights

This past spring, a number of diversity flag flap was flown from the dome of the Administration Building on the Moscow campus. Now, the Woodruff Baptist Church of Moscow, an active and open organization, has announced its plans to plant the university and build a similar flag outside the Idaho Commons as part of its "July 4 weekend celebration.

We must be clear about the principles for which the University of Idaho stands:

1. That all students are equal, regardless of their origin, race, gender, sexual orientation or religious background.

2. That we believe in a well-rounded, inclusive, welcoming environment. We must reach out and include all students in this environment.

3. That we believe that diversity is the true strength of the University of Idaho.

4. That we believe that diversity is a human right.

The University of Idaho is committed to the principles of diversity and human rights, and our students, staff and faculty are encouraged to participate in the celebration.
