Vox: Down with Alito

Student group will protest Bush Supreme Court nominee

Group members of Values for Planned Parenthood will be marching on campus Wednesday in opposition to Judge Samuel Alito, President Bush’s newest U.S. Supreme Court justice.

Lena Kasa, a representative for Planned Parenthood of the Inland Northwest in Pullman, said Alito’s conservative viewpoints, which would likely create an anti-abortion sentiment on campus, hinder future dialogues before getting an abortion.

"It’s not only to a woman to choose relationships," she said. "Planned Parenthood would like for women to choose health, safety and their bodies.

"We’re opposed to a nominee, or any man for that matter, who opposes women's health and women’s rights," she said.

Kasa said the values women need to understand to the Bush Administration must be understood to the Supreme Court and are important for the future of women's rights.

"A lot of women do not know how the government affects their privacy rights, affirmative rights and civil rights," Kasa said. "I do that with a group of women at the Women’s Center.

Planned Parenthood in Pullman can help individuals better understand the Bush Administration and its programs, Kasa said. The program offers a number of services dealing with healthcare, contraceptive choices and education.

Part of what Kasa and those involved with the protest on campus are trying to explain, she said, is that even though abortion shouldn’t be illegal, women still can’t get access to it.

EROPEAN PRIDE

American pride is generally positive

If feedback is any indication, the university’s draft of a strategic plan shouldn’t have to change too much before adopting it.

The plans, part of a campus-wide decision for university goal setting, were the result of a year’s worth of work by the faculty, students and administration.

Student Senate President Dave Bahr’s efforts to coordinate and manage the university was disbelieved by the Vandal community as far as feedback was concerned.

Bahr and others will now review the feedback and release a final draft in the plan by December. As of Monday afternoon, Bahr’s office had received 91 email responses and eight telephone responses, one from each of U’s eight colleges. More responses were coming in throughout the afternoon, as more groups began to organize.

The plan was shaped using information from previous plans, U’s mission statement, White’s Plan for Generalist of People, Programs and Place and various outside reports and evaluations, including last year’s survey.

Four goals are outlined in the four-page plan: "Teaching and Learning," "Discovery and Creative Activity," "Counseling and Improvement," and "Organization, Culture and Climate.

The goals are intended to make up the university’s approach to learning and organization.

The draft differs from the university’s current strategic plan in that it calls for engaging students in a "transformative journey" and university work to be shaped around discovery and enrichment. The current plan calls on UI to be a "university of choice" and the West" and places more importance on being globally competitive.

"Our best grand citizens haven’t changed," Bahr said. "This only reflects the needs of the university.

The draft can be found on the university’s website, www.provost.uidaho.edu. ASUI student feedback is valuable, he said.

"Students can be catalysts to let university and recent changes," he said.

The feedback is especially valuable

Black Student Union on the right track

In membership may be misleading, support is growing for the Black Student Union.

The group was established in the spring of 2004 during the Black History Month. Members have worked to support the interest and concerns of black students while creating a stronger sense of community through various events.

Now president Sherri Webster said she was inspired to join the BSU by junior member Sam Williams. "I was really interested in being a part of something," she said.

"When you see an opportunity, you need to take it," Webster said.

Black Student Union was started to improve the experience of being a student like him to speak to (the student's) individuality," she said.

Page played for the NFL while enrolled half-time in law school. He was the first black person elected to state office in Minnesota, among other accomplishments.

He said he was a member of Minnesota Supreme Court building a team with students and athletes in the student section last semester. "I was a part of the student section," he said.

"We have to make sure that the students are just as united as we are," he said.

Organizing an event like the Pagan was something James had always wanted to do.

"It is my goal in life to make people happy and learn the best they can be," James said.

James is working on a BSU merger report, which will help show the organization of the club, including the Black Student Union and Martin Luther King Day.

Hansen said the e-mail was to the office of ASUI with the words "We're open" on the third floor of the Idaho Union. The e-mail was sent from the president's Hotmail account.

Section 207 of the ASUI rules and regulations states: "Any organization that is a member of the ASUI office, Campus Stimulus, and all local organizations, student affairs, student groups, clubs, and other matriculated students that make a mistake, are not acceptable. The rules and regulations for a mistake include: a mistake that was made, a mistake that was corrected, and a mistake that was not corrected.

Unification of page from James' main goal is to be more involved in the group, which got about "Women advocating for women". "We want everyone to know about "James,"" said Hansen. "What the group is important in the form of a picture that black people are like.

James said he was on the position of what the group can do and can accomplish instead of negative experiences and lessons leading to why the group is needed, and he said many blacks have difficulty with the culture because there was a lack of support from the students. "When the few black students we have come together and make a difference," said Hansen. "The group has worked to develop a stronger sense of community."

RU seeks the placement of Barren. African American Concerns and Education, Salinas said. "RU has been at UI since 1997. We know RU is the only active at least a year here."

Hansen said, "The group was heavily involved in Moscow's first Juneteenth celebration, "We're the first Juneteenth celebration," said Hansen. "We want to be involved in the RU, as it is one of a needle-down effect."

Having RU members more involved in the community would involve the opportunity for everyone to do something positive, he said.

"Some people have the knowledge to use abortion, but some don't know how to use them correctly," she said. "There is a lower percentage of effective use because of human factors."

There are other reasons people can take, too, Kasa said, such as the consequences of abortions. In Washington, emergency contraception is covered only in the case of rape. The program can teach an individual about abortion, birth control and safe sex, relationships, sell-out, extreme and pro-choice issues.

"We offer emergency contraceptive pills to students and women, over the counter, would be wonderful, because this is what they should be offered," Kasa said.

Ul's new club gives educators a voice

By Debra Ganezop

A new student club on campus can help people think about education.

The University of Idaho chapter of the Idaho Education Association will sponsor a new club for two years, now has new leadership and a new director.

"We're trying to build up our membership again," said first-year president Shawn Gales. "We want to get members involved again in our campus and local schools.

OPINION

Rosa Parks revisionism

Every American student is or should be familiar with the story of Rosa Parks. Before she was arrested for refusing to give up her seat to a white person, Parks displayed an act of defiance to the first black woman to lose her well-paying job. It is this act that should be remembered, not any other.

Some politician wants to rewrite history. He is absolutely incorrect. In this time of the new age, the potential for rewriting history is more apparent than ever. This is not a place for politics. It is a place for the truth.

As pointed out by columnist Robert Barnes, the term "Rosa Parks" has become the whitewashed version of a name that was tarnished in history. In the real world, Parks was a fighter. She fought for the right to travel without discrimination and for the right to vote. She was a hero.

Harmened on this day, 50 years ago, the nation became aware of the injustices that blacks faced in the South. Parks was a brave woman who stood up to the injustices of the day. She was a fighter who never gave up.

It is this fight that should be remembered. It is this fight that should be celebrated. It is this fight that should be taught in every classroom across the nation.

OUR VIEW

Time to buck the trend

Last week's Murray County attorney, Mike Lott, ran for the Republican nomination for Georgia's 8th Congressional District. Lott's campaign was a typical shopping list of name calling and quicksand offers. A shopping list of promises that would have to be revealed in the real world. How does Lott come out of the door?

Amy Tan takes an atypical adventure

By Tan Roberts

Amy Tan is best known for her descriptions of family and Chinese identity, but her new novel "The Bonesetters' Daughters" is a surprising change in style that is likely to generate mixed reactions from her fans. The book is described as a "hybrid novel" that combines elements of magical realism and realistic fiction. The story follows two sisters, Li Lan and O Henry, who are accused of witchcraft in 1920s China. Touched by their story, the narrator, a white woman named Bette Lee Cottrell, reimagines their lives as a series of interconnected stories, weaving together themes of family, culture, and identity. The novel is a rich tapestry of Chinese history and folklore, as well as a critique of the ways in which women are often marginalized in society.

Zathura wins on character, doesn't rely on special effects

By Tyler Williams

Most movies are in one direction, must work extra hard to keep up with the fast-paced, changing movie industry. "Zathura" is one of the rare films that doesn't need to rely on special effects to tell its story. Based on the children's book by Michael and Kathleen Wilson, the film is a playful, imaginative adventure. The story follows two siblings, Miles and Davey Pettersson, as they use a magical board game to escape from a mundane world and discover a new world.

Zathura" is a competitive game "Jumanji," which was adapted into a 1995 live-action film starring Robin Williams. The plot is similar: two siblings use a magical board game to escape from a mundane world. But "Zathura" is more than a simple retelling of a classic story. It's a contemporary take on the classic tale, with a modern twist on the classic story. The film is a testament to the power of imagination.

"Zathura" has traditionally been a politically-motivated film. The story is about a mixed-race family in the United States, facing discrimination and hatred. The family is forced to leave their home and start a new life in a new city, where they face new challenges and threats. The film is not only a story of survival, but also a story of hope and resilience. It's a powerful reminder that, even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.

Southern cooks can't get by without sugar

By Bill Manuel
The Dallas Morning News

When I was little, my Southern grandmother told me that a sugar biscuit was as essential to life as a Bible, because without sugar, you were wretched. Without sugar, I was told, you could not make bacon grease, and without bacon grease, you could not make biscuits. Without biscuits, I was told, you could not live.

Or so I thought until I went to college and made friends with Matthew Rosley, who helped me realize that while it is true that without sugar, you can't make biscuits, you can live. You can eat eggs, you can make butter, you can eat meat, you can even live on beans.

The sugarless approach to cooking is not for the faint of heart. It is not for the easily satisfied. It is not for those who think that bacon grease is the same as butter.

But it is for those who believe that the world is a better place when you can make a good biscuit without sugar.

The first time I tried to make a sugar biscuit, I failed. I was out of sugar. I was out of time. I was out of patience. I was out of hope.

But the next time, I succeeded. I failed again. But the third time, I succeeded. And the fourth time, I succeeded. And the fifth time, I succeeded.

And I have been making sugar biscuits ever since.

The key to making a good sugar biscuit is to use the right flour. The right flour is the flour that is used to make sugar biscuits. It is a flour that is made from a special type of wheat. It is a flour that is grown in the South. It is a flour that is used to make the best biscuits in the world.

And the best biscuits in the world are sugar biscuits.

So the next time you are in the kitchen, and you don't have sugar, don't worry. You can still make biscuits. You can still make sugar biscuits. You just need to use the right flour. And you need to have patience. And you need to have faith.

Because without sugar, you can still live. You can still eat. You can still make biscuits. You can still be happy.

And that is a good thing.
Aniston, Owen get 'Derailed'

By Stevenson Sessoms

No sooner had Owen and Aniston reunited for the upcoming romantic comedy "Derailed," than reports surfaced that the two were "hot and heavy" romantically speaking. But the credits are a bit ahead of the story.

Although Aniston and Owen are both stars of the popular NBC dramatic series "Friends," they've never been romantically linked. But the buzz about their new movie "Derailed," in which they play a married couple who are attracted to each other, has been quite widespread.

Aniston, who's been with Tate Donovan for four years, and Owen, who was married to the late Rebecca Wills before that, are both known for their commitment to their careers and their desire to keep their private lives private.

But "Derailed," which is set in New York City and centers on a man and woman who are both married to other people but begin an affair, has been generating a lot of buzz.

"I think it's just a matter of time before everyone finds out," one industry insider told the Associated Press. "It's just too hot and heavy to keep it under wraps any longer."

Aniston, who's been open about her past relationships, has said in the past that she prefers to keep her private life private. But she's also said that she's open to the idea of marriage and that she's ready to settle down.

Owen, who's been known to be a bit of a ladies' man, has also said in the past that he's open to the idea of marriage. But he's also said that he's not ready to settle down just yet.

Vandals kicking themselves after loss

By Norman Lamb

The record, 9-7-0 and statistics may not allow it, but the Idaho football team has improved this season, evidence being the Vandals' 41-36 loss to (10) Colorado Saturday at the Kibbie Dome in Moscow.

"The players did a good job of competing," said University of Idaho coach Nick Hill. "We hung back and showed a lot of heart and character, and we should have won."

"We are going to be in every game for the rest of the season and for the rest of our careers," said senior Bob Threeth, "and we need to keep this up for our fans and our teammates to see that we have improved."".

Hill's demotivation after the game was rather marked considering the ups, downs and controversy surrounding each of these rapidly exhausting games. Kicker Nick Brown's puntalicious game tying 54- yard field goal missed his left shoulder-a matter of inches with 30 seconds left in the game.

Brown, who has already committed to the NCAA, will play in 64, 46, 47 and 50-a total tied for first length in Big West history, which was the main reason the Vandals were able to stay in the game despite the final minute.

"I looked at the clock and the yardage and tried to calm myself down," said Brown. "I wasn't going to let the fans or myself down."

"I really hope for us to play in the playoffs next year," said Hill. "We have been a good team this year, and I believe we have the talent and players to make it happen."

By Mackenzie Stone

The Vandals volleyball team that successfully battled Boise State University on Saturday, Dec. 12, 67-63, is a different team than the one that began the season three months ago. The Vandals defeated Boise State, 22-21, 25-22, 25-20, to improve their season record to 14-7, 2-0 in the Big West Conference.

"We have improved a lot this season," said senior Alixa Hart. "Our defense and hitting have been strong, and we are playing more as a team."

"I think we are finally starting to understand each other's strengths and weaknesses," said sophomore shrout Iliana VanDyke. "We have been working hard in practice, and it is paying off on the court."".

"I am excited to see how we will perform in the future," said Coach Mark Lievano. "We have a lot of talent and potential, and with continued hard work and dedication, we can be a force to be reckoned with in the Big West Conference."".

By Alka Hart

The Indianapolis Colts moved to 9-2 after dominating the Houston Texans 32-17 at Bankers Life Fieldhouse Sunday afternoon. The Colts offense was efficient, milking 13 minutes off the clock, and Peyton Manning threw four touchdown passes to lead the second frame.

After a decisive win in the first meeting, many critics wondered what the outcome would be when the worst team in the league made the second trip.

They were missing top running back Donavan McNabb and their offensive line was without three starters. But with an extremely tough weekend ahead of the rest of the season, it’s easy to see why the Colts need to grab every victory they can.

With 9:21 left in the fourth quarter and the Dolphins down 13-7, Miami quarterback Chad Pennington threw an interception that was returned for a touchdown by Colts defensive end Robert Mathis. The play put the Colts ahead 20-7.

But the Dolphins scored on their next possession on a 57-yard pass to receiver Brandon Marshall to cut the deficit to 20-14 with 4:48 left in the game.

With 4:34 left in the game, safety Bob Sanders intercepted a pass and returned it 49 yards for a touchdown.

The defense also came through in the fourth quarter by stopping the Miami offense on four consecutive plays to end the game.

The win moved the Colts into a tie for first place in the AFC East with the Baltimore Ravens. The Ravens beat the Cleveland Browns 37-32 Sunday.

The Colts return home to face the Jacksonville Jaguars Dec. 12 at Lucas Oil Stadium. The win was a great effort from the whole team, especially the defense.

The offense also played well, but the key was the defense which came through in the final minutes of the game.

The Colts dominated the first half and put the game out of reach early.

In the second quarter, quarterback Peyton Manning threw a 2-yard touchdown pass to tight end Ben Utecht with 9:53 left in the period to take a 13-0 lead.

The Colts led 13-0 at halftime and put up 32 points in the second frame.

In the third quarter, the defense made stops to keep the Dolphins out of the end zone.

The win was important for the Colts who are trying to keep their playoff hopes alive.

The Dolphins have lost three in a row and six of their last seven overall.

The win was the third straight for the Colts who have won five in a row.

The defense was the key to the win as the 十 Colts were able to force three turnovers.

The win also extended the Colts winning streak to three games.

The defense was led by Sanders who had one interception.
