Mubita: ‘Not guilty to six counts’

By Malley Nelson

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Stoppers encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Moscow merchants closing their doors

By Malley Nelson

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

New financial VP prepared for UI challenges

By Audry Mattison

After nine months and an extensive job search, a six-time the new financial VP for the University of Idaho.

Nancy Drey, who most recently worked for the US branch of the World Wildlife Fund, will serve as chief financial officer and brand for UI. Her earlier responsibilities included handling the Idaho Board of Trustees and the University of Idaho, and her annual salary will be $265,500.

“Her business background is what sets her apart from other candidates,” Sharp said. “She has a strong background in business, and she’s a good financial officer.”

“I think sharp brings a lot of new ideas to the table,” Sharp said. “She’s a strong financial officer and will be an asset to the University.”

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Mentoring lunch program adds personal aspect

By Sarah Danell

Mentorship can be crucial to a student’s success, but finding the right mentor can be difficult. The new mentoring lunch program aims to make that process easier.

The program was developed by the University of Idaho’s Center for the Social and Professional Development. The program’s primary goal is to connect students with mentors who can help them achieve their academic and career goals.

“Mentors are crucial to a student’s success,” said Sarah Danell, a mentorship coordinator.

“The program is designed to help students find mentors who can provide guidance and support,” Danell said.

“During the lunch program, students will have the opportunity to meet with potential mentors and learn more about their backgrounds and experiences.”

The program will begin in February and will be offered on a weekly basis.

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.

Stopners encountered beer wells and myriad showers in Marketplace Gifts at the University of Idaho during January along with other businesses to Moscow, Idaho.
Experts warn oil, gasoline prices will stay volatile

By Kevin G. Hall
Kriger Mobile Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Mounting unrest in Afghanistan and a banning political showdown with Iran over nuclear program issues sent oil prices soaring Monday as traders scrambled to price the now $45 billion in oil that might soon be in the market.

On Tuesday, the price of crude oil climbed to $60.71 a barrel at the close of trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest close since early October. Some analysts warned that prices could soon push past the all-time inflation-adjusted record of $147.27 set Aug. 31, 2008.

Rising oil prices quickly translate into higher gasoline prices. The national average price of regular unleaded gasoline reached $2.69 a gallon, according to the AAA's Motor Club.

Last year's price fluctuations were unsettling, the year may be worse than the oil crisis that rampaged the world's oil price in 1973.

Ken Davis, manager director for the Pacific International Energy Reporters, said, "It looks like we have a lot less than we thought. If that's the case, we would have to get to $175 a barrel.

"This is a bigger global problem and production is rising slowly against this surge, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.

The international oil market is losing its appetite for oil again, and the oil supply is a threat to the world economy," Davis said. Ken Dunn, a managing director for PFS Consulting in New York.
An uncertain confirmation
by David Rotenberg

Although the questioning of Supreme Court nominee Samuel A. Alito Jr. by the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday was held to focus primarily on the nominee's legal qualifications, many senators seemed uncertain of the outcomes of the confirmation hearings.

Mr. Alito, a federal appellate judge in New Jersey, has spoken publicly and privately about his religious beliefs, which include opposition to abortion. That is a touchy subject on Capitol Hill these days. But it was not nearly as big a deal as the nominee's views on the Constitution, which many senators had decided was not really the subject of the hearings.

During Wednesday's five-hour hearing, the senators asked Mr. Alito about how he would interpret the Constitution, and he tried to avoid answering any difficult questions. He did not say what he would be like as a Supreme Court justice, but rather, how he would interpret what the Constitution requires of a Supreme Court justice.

The senators asked Mr. Alito about his legal qualifications, and he tried to avoid answering any difficult questions. He did not say what he would be like as a Supreme Court justice, but rather, how he would interpret what the Constitution requires of a Supreme Court justice.

The senators asked Mr. Alito about his legal qualifications, and he tried to avoid answering any difficult questions. He did not say what he would be like as a Supreme Court justice, but rather, how he would interpret what the Constitution requires of a Supreme Court justice.

The senators asked Mr. Alito about his legal qualifications, and he tried to avoid answering any difficult questions. He did not say what he would be like as a Supreme Court justice, but rather, how he would interpret what the Constitution requires of a Supreme Court justice.
Spielberg in top form with 'Munich'

By Tyler Wilson
Argus

Tackling the subjects of Jewish-Palestinian relations following the 1972 Munich massacre, as well as other aspects of Palestinian history, is not new for Steven Spielberg. The director, who previously directed a film about the Holocaust, now takes on the massacre in his latest work, "Munich," which has been much anticipated by film critics, with some praise for its exploration of the historical events.

In "Munich," the story begins with a young German student, who is forced to confront the horrors of the massacre. The film follows the young man as he becomes increasingly involved in the struggle against the Israeli government. The film's focus on the massacre, and the events that followed, is a departure from Spielberg's earlier films, which were often characterized by their heavy-handedness and reliance on spectacle.

Spielberg's latest film is a more nuanced and introspective piece, with a focus on the emotional impact of the events. The film's themes of war and peace, and the role of film in shaping public opinion, are explored in a way that is both thought-provoking and emotionally resonant.

The film's cast, which includes a diverse range of actors, is well-cast and delivers strong performances. The film's cinematography, which is both beautiful and effective in conveying the film's mood, is another highlight.

Overall, "Munich" is a film that is sure to be remembered as one of Spielberg's best. It is a film that challenges viewers to think about the complex issues at play in the world today, and to consider the role that film and the arts can play in shaping our understanding of the past and present.
Chubs Togs to perform Friday
The bluegrass-band Chubs Togs will perform at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the IDB. There will be a $2 admission. For more information call 530-654-1000.

Tournaments Thursday
In the first round of tournaments, the participants are as follows:

- The 1st Round:
  - Dan Presently
  - John Presently
  - Pam Presently
  - Rachel Presently
  - Shy Presently
  - Anna Presently

- The 2nd Round:
  - John Presently
  - Pam Presently
  - Rachel Presently

The tournaments will continue until the April 29.</c>
Guard gains recognition for hustle

By Alvin Hart

"Junior Leilani Mitchell, who was originally introduced to basketball by her father, the NCAAs head women's basketball coach, has been a standout performer for the team. Her dedication and work ethic have not gone unnoticed."

Mitchell's skill set is not limited to the court. Off the court, she excels in her studies, maintaining a 3.5 GPA while managing her basketball commitments. Her leadership qualities, both on and off the court, have earned her recognition from her peers and coaches alike. Mitchell's commitment to her academic pursuits is evident in her involvement in various campus organizations, including the Associated Students of the University of Idaho (ASUI) and the Women's basketball team. Her leadership role in these organizations has allowed her to balance her academic and athletic responsibilities effectively.

Mitchell's success has not gone unnoticed by the media. She was featured in a recent article, where she was highlighted for her contributions to the team and the community. The article praised her dedication to the game and her academic excellence, setting her apart as a role model for future athletes. Mitchell's journey exemplifies the importance of balancing academics and athletics, and her achievements serve as an inspiration to many young athletes.

Vandals at a loss after road trip

By Hennan Lamb

"Coach Leonard Perry said his team's road trip last weekend to Nevada and Utah was a learning experience. Although they lost two games, the team gained valuable insights into the game's dynamics and their own strengths and weaknesses."

The Vandals' recent road trip to Nevada and Utah was a challenging experience for the team. Despite losing both games, the players and coaches took away valuable lessons from the matches. Perry highlighted the importance of adaptability in the game, emphasizing that the team must be prepared to adjust their strategies based on the opposing team's strengths.

The Vandals lost to Nevada 82-57 and Utah 78-68 over the weekend. Perry acknowledged the significant improvement in their game play, attributing it to the team's collective effort and focus. He also praised the teamwork and communication displayed by the players, which he believes played a crucial role in their performance.

Perry emphasized the need for continued improvement in various aspects of the game, including shooting, defense, and overall execution. He encouraged the players to remain focused and committed to their goals, ensuring they continue to grow and develop as a team.

"I thought we competed in the first half but Utah State started the second half with those 3-point plays and it took the steam out of us," Perry said.

Rental increases boost Outdoor Program budget

By Mackenzie Stone

"The rental program is an essential source of income for the Outdoor Program, allowing students to access high-quality outdoor gear and equipment at an affordable price."

The Outdoor Program has experienced noticeable growth in recent years, with increased demand for rental services. This growth has been attributed to the program's accessibility and affordability, enabling students from various backgrounds to participate in outdoor activities. The program's success is further enhanced by the support and collaboration with the Outdoor Program committee and the College of NaturalResources.

The Outdoor Program committee, led by faculty members and student leaders, is committed to ensuring the program's success and sustainability. They work closely with students, staff, and faculty to identify and address any challenges, ensuring the program remains a valuable resource for the university community.

During the past year, the Outdoor Program has seen a significant increase in rental requests, with a focus on providing quality experiences for students. The program has implemented new strategies to improve efficiency and accessibility, such as expanding the selection of rental gear and equipment and offering flexible rental options.

"We'd like to see more students taking advantage of our services," Stone said. "It's our goal to make outdoor recreation accessible and enjoyable for everyone."