College students across the Northwest have decided not to enroll this year. In Idaho, enrollment numbers dropped 5% for seven consecutive years across the region. College enrollment numbers dropped throughout Washington, Oregon, Utah and Idaho—including community college enrollment. And the University of Idaho hasn't been spared either. Of a possible 2,175 deep in student numbers on the Moscow campus. State-wide, the decrease was 1.5%.

"We saw this trend coming and didn't think it would be as high," said Vice Provost of Academic Affairs Linda Morris. This year's freshman count at UI was 1,612—a loss of 367. The decrease is even more pronounced at Idaho State University. In Idaho, the 2003 freshman class is expected to number only 400—the lowest since 1997. The number of students at the University of Idaho and Boise State University also dropped last year.

"The campus is not a field for 175 freshmen," said Vice Provost of Student Affairs Lattin. "We're seeing a 25% increase in students in the last year as well." The enrollment numbers, he said, are a result of the economic downturn.

To understand what has caused the enrollment decline in Idaho, one must look to the state's economic conditions. In 2008, Idaho's economy experienced a significant downturn due to the global financial crisis. The state's economy was particularly vulnerable to the effects of the recession as it relies heavily on the mining, agriculture, and tourism sectors. These industries were hit hard by the economic downturn, leading to decreases in employment and income levels. As a result, many families found themselves unable to afford college tuition.

The decrease in enrollment has had a significant impact on the state's educational institutions. The drop in student numbers has led to a decrease in state funding, as funding is often based on enrollment numbers. This has left universities struggling to maintain their operations and support their students.

However, the decline in enrollment has also had positive effects. The reduction in student numbers has allowed universities to focus more on improving the quality of their education and reducing costs. It has also created opportunities for those who may have been priced out of higher education.

In conclusion, the decrease in enrollment in Idaho is a result of the state's economic conditions. The decline has had significant impacts on the state's educational institutions, but it has also created opportunities for those who may have been priced out of higher education.
C.A.A. dedication brings campus together

"It’s not very clear that students witness the dedication of a college, or a major university, at the University of Idaho and the community at large has the ability to be a part of such an experience."

The College of Art and Architecture will hold a number of events on and around campus in honor of the dedication. The event will begin at 11:30 a.m. today with an ice cream social for all students and faculty in Commons Plaza. This will be a chance for the students to see how another college operates as well as giving a hands-on experi-dence in the College of Art and Architecture.

Sophomore architecture major Whitney Nall and she is looking forward to the dedceration event.

"Having our own college gives the students a better chance for success after school. The dedication events will be a great way to show off what we want to accomplish," she said.

All four buildings of the College will have a College dedication and the community an opportunity to see what is going on on the campus of the College of Art and Architecture. The event is open to the public.

The buildings include the main art and architecture building next to the Commons Plaza, the interior design building next door and the Art and Architecture North and South between the Idaho Commons and the Administration Building.

President Tim White will preside over the dedication ceremony on the Commons Plaza. Dust and Interior Dean William Woolden will give a few words followed by a ribbon cutting. After the dedication, the college will have its convocation.

This event is also open to the public and will include all the academic regalia one would expect at a major convocation.

An invitation-only dinner will follow the ceremony. Proceeds from the dinner will be used to cover the cost of the evening and will directly back into the College. Presidential Events Manager Kevin Ketchie expects around 200 attendees to the L120 invitations that were mailed.

Planning for the dedication began during the summer and was specifically scheduled to fall classes began. Much of the planning was coordinated by Ketchie and Woolden with input from fac-culty, alumni and current and past student students.

"We don’t like to sound as if the college wasn’t here," said Ketchie. "This day it is much more common for a college to be gone than it is for one to come back. We have the opportunity to remind the rest of the U of I community in just how the college is doing, our enrollment, student diversity, the student, the chair’s address, the regalia and the academies.

The College Open House, for example, will allow a chance to see our old classrooms and possibly see something tever.

Ketchie said he is excited to see this "embodiment of the dedication" as a chance for students, faculty and others to come together for the first time.

"I’m excited for the convocation," said Ketchie. "It is something you experience as opposed to the dedication ceremony, that is something you watch."

Library changes in hopes of creating better study area

By Jessica McKelis

In an effort to accommodate student needs, the University of Idaho library began two projects this summer to change areas inside the library.

The changes included creating more quiet space, group space and reference services. Graduate student Emily Holzemer worked at the library during spring semester and this summer. She was able to change the building that is more than 45 years old.

"It is important for the library to be a dynamic system because the world changes and part of the library’s purpose is to inform people about the world," Holzemer said. "The better we keep patrons informed the more useful the library is."

Holzemer helped with the summer projects, doing shifting work and making sure materials were renorganized.

The desire for more silent area was expressed in a survey done a few years ago, said Lynn Baird, associate dean of Library and soon to be interim dean of library services because of the retirement of the current dean.

"The library needs many types and styles of learning," Baird said. "We need to create learning spaces that permit collaborative work as well as individual work in a single facility."

About 55 computers were relocated from the fourth floor to the first floor to make the third and fourth floors a little less study areas. There are still some computers on the fourth floor to accommodate students who need quiet computer space, like those taking online courses and exams, Baird said.

Additional signs were posted on the third and fourth floors, asking people to respect the quiet rule, Baird said. When the library was remodeled in 1990 to 1991, there wasn’t an emphasis on the importance of computer in library spaces, and also wasn’t planned that many students would be kept in computer.

"Cell phones came to the uni-campus after they were cell phones," said Ketchie. "For the sake of technology development, it has been much unplanned activity throughout these spaces.

Table is being educated to the first and second floors to accommodate study groups. The space on the first floor was created by retiring the major international jazz collection.

The organizing efforts included adding dictionaries and aeromatic materials to the general collection. The new materials in the general collection can now be checked out, but the circulation periods are for a shorter time.

"One thing we want to be sure we are supporting is people learning," Baird said.

If people prefer to learn at the library, they can now take reference materials home.

"It’s always a balance of putting materials into people hand and having them on site," Baird said. "We are not interested in being a book museum."

The other change involved moving the reading room from the basement to the first floor, where it is now called the common reading room.

This new location also includes non-academic and international jazz festival festivals, in addition to the library.

It also includes government documents and special collections and archivies. Bringing the collections together will make it easier to inte-sensitive research and productive access to the collections.

The new space has new curgiving and chairs, but isn’t complete as organizers have further plans that include replacing the tables and displaying many of the journals.

Last year the combined reading room was the government documents room, the basement reading room was home to Idaho historical documents. It had limited visual-as areas and limited service time, Baird said.

This semester the library is working with the interior design class to create plans that move toward creating a learning combination room, a more collaborative, user-friendly space.

Also, library organizers are working on ways to upbeat the library collections. Right now the library is at half capacity.

New ways are needed to deal with retaining building collections, Baird said.

"There can be much information in this building is unattainable to me," Holzemer said. "And free knowledge is pretty cool."

Senator Reports

Sept. 6, 2006
Open Forum

ASU Director of Academics, Heather Fraser, welcomed the senators to the first Senate meeting of the year. Among the topics discussed were strength in numbers, Senate leadership, and the new academic year. Senator Fraser also addressed the importance of Senate integrity and student achievement.

ASU Director of Administration, Donna Smith, spoke at the open forum. She highlighted the transition of the Development Office (where she has an interim position) to the Senate. She also mentioned the Senate’s role in connecting the university with the community. She noted the recently completed work on the new Senate floor and drove the campus past the new Senate building. She welcomed the senators to the Senate meeting, which is being held in the former Office of the President building.

President Morris thanked the senators for attending. She highlighted the importance of the Senate in the university’s decision-making process and encouraged the senators to actively participate in the year’s activities.

Housekeeping motion to create a Senate committee on campus leadership was also discussed, with the motion being seconded by the President. The committee will meet weekly to discuss campus leadership issues.

Executive Committee

ASU President Bertie Johnson welcomed the senators to the first Senate meeting of the year. He highlighted the importance of the Senate in the university’s decision-making process and encouraged the senators to actively participate in the year’s activities.

The Senate was also reminded of the importance of Senate integrity and student achievement.

UI isn't really known to be a powerhouse in women's basketball. Not to put down the players, but just that it's not the team to beat. So why not?

The question is how we are going to become more competitive. Does UI need to hire a new coach? Does UI need to have a new training facility? Does UI need more girls interested in playing basketball?

There is a question of whether UI is going to recruit more out of state students. The question is how UI is going to recruit more girls interested in playing basketball. It is a question of whether UI is going to become more competitive.

Nickle Nose and Quilt Something were fairly strong successes a few years ago, but today, both are hardly "Great Rhythm\". "The quilt that Nickle Nose produced is on display at the store. As an added bonus, \"Autumn Trail\" is featured on the Philip said she couldn't be happier with the honor being bestowed upon her store.

"I'm pleased to plan their vacation around the event. Not only should families from Moscow go a whole weekend."

One direct beneficiary of Quilt Something's success is Marcia Pinich at the Nickle Nose store.

"Demet through it, I ducked around to get outside to move things."

Neither彭 and Phillip recognized the opportunity to join together to

Finn Riggins, () to come to Moscow

By Michael Howell

A local band with a local history will be performing back in the town they have missed.

For years, members of the band Finn Riggins, () (the comma and the parenthesis were part of the original band name) lived in Moscow, attended the University of Idaho and performed as part of the music scene. Now, after a time away from the Palouse, they’re ready to return. Finn Riggins, () is led by Girard on keyboard and vocals, Cameron Roulston on drums and Lisa Simpson on guitar and vocals.

The three members, who all started out as friends and housemates in Moscow, are no strangers to the town’s music scene. They have been involved in music for about 13 years now, said Girard. "We have played on many different bands in the Palouse area as well as being a solo artist." Girard and Simpson performed with bands in various areas during their time in Moscow. Girard has been part of bands like Batcocoos, Oracle Shack and the Transients. Roulston was also involved in the same bands as well as being a part of the UI marching Band.

Girard said the three band members have been playing in various Moscow bands for years before they finally started performing together with the band Riggins.

"We recently formed up in Halley under our own name," said Girard. "We have performed together in some ways we have played together about four years but never getting serious about this new band." Girard said people have the tendency to label the band "folk-rock," which is true in some ways, but he said that the band has been水泵ed down in recent years.

"As the general level, our music is essentially rock," said Girard. "We end up injecting our own flavor into the music, creating something that even we have never heard before." As for their return to Moscow and their performance at One World Cafe, the band looks forward to debating in a place they all know and love.

"This is our big debut," said Girard. "Most people are usually nervous in their first performances. For us, this is a chance to put all our hard work, our practice and our time together.

The band also hopes to get a look at a few of their home changed. "It’s going to be a good change to see the music come to Moscow," said Girard. "The area has always been a good place (for) music and bands."

Girard explained how many of the musicians performing, around the area, including their opener Mile Duke, are people that they have known.

"It’s not just a chance to see the fun in Moscow," said Girard. "It’s also a chance to see really fellow performers."

Finn Riggins, () will be performing at 8:30 p.m. Friday at One World Cafe in Moscow. The show will be a double show with Moscow’s own Mile Duke. For those interested in sampling the band’s music before their concert, they can see on MySpace at www.myspace.com/finnriggins. In the end, the band hopes to have a little fun and entertainment. "This is for us just like going back home," said Girou.
Ben Affleck seems ready to take flight once again.

By Daniel Hiebert

LOS ANGELES — It was only two months ago when director Ben Affleck was lauded for his work as the director of "Argo," but there’s been yet another achievement for Mr. Affleck, or "O.J. away" as he’s been colloquially known. "The Curious Case of Benjamin Button," which Affleck co-directed, has just opened, and has already been making a splash at the box office.

The film tells the story of a boy who is born at the end of the 1920s and dies at the beginning of the 21st century, with Affleck playing the protagonist, Button. The movie has received critical acclaim and has been nominated for several Oscars, including Best Director and Best Actor for Affleck.

Affleck, who also stars in the film, has been praised for his performance, which has been described as "charming" and "tender." The film has been praised for its "wonderful" and "emotional" direction, and has been described as a "moving" and "thought-provoking" film.

Affleck, who is no stranger to Hollywood, has been praised for his work in front of and behind the camera. He directed and starred in "Argo," which was nominated for Best Picture at the Academy Awards, and was also praised for his performance in the film. He has also directed and starred in other films, including "Live Free or Die Hard" and "The Town."

Long Beach State Tournament offers UI volleyball team a chance for first win

By Ryan Adams

Agoura

The Idaho women's volleyball team has the odds in its favor as it begins the season when they travel to the Long Beach State Tournament this weekend.

To fit this season, coach Debbie Pederson has added a sixth that put the team up against tough competition headed by several former schools. Buchanan said she hopes to become带着 a team with a win, but knows the challenge will be stiff.

"Both teams are really tough, and will be nice challenges for us again," Buchanan said. "Long Beach State is big and they just beat Saint Mary's. They have had some issues but some good things going, and we are just going to take one match at a time." The Memories of the Shemok Triflet

The women will square off against Saint Mary's (Café) and Long Beach State today and Saturday.

Asked if she planned to make any changes heading into the tournament, Buchanan said she was pleased with her current rotations, but her young players are always pushing to get into the lineup.

"It's kind of just gone full circle already after my first couple of tournaments," Buchanan said. "But it is the same for all the girls with this season, as they are just improving and learning as they go. I hate to say, but if they aren't playing at a high level, there are some young kids that can come in for them.

One young player is already playing her way in the middle role for the Vandals with redshirt freshman Debbie Pederson becoming an important cog in the Idaho middle.

Pederson has played in 23 of 22 games and has had the team in block against her with 17. She also boasts a 20\% hitting percentage, which is good for third on the team. And all 4 kills are good for fourth.

These numbers have certainly caught the eye of Buchanan and she is glad to have a team in the middle.

"We have had some problems with blocking and we have to keep improving, but with young kids like Debbie in the middle positions we are going to continue to get better and improve," Buchanan said.

As for the task of the Vandals, Pederson and her Idaho teammates will have to play well to beat out their opponents this weekend.

Long Beach State (5-2) has never lost to Saint Mary's (14-4), and just defeated the Cal State in a five-game match last week.

The 49ers are also undefeated against the Idaho Vandals, compiling a 15-0 record dating back to 1984.

Saint Mary's (13-6) had three straight wins but lost their last three games against the University of Nebraska, Long Beach State and Middle Tennessee.

NBC aided by flexible schedule

By Ed Sherman

Arliech and John Madden are together. James Brown is host of the pregame show, and "Monday Night Football" is back on San Diego's schedule. Bob Costas will anchor the pregame show.

What is different is "Football Night in America," a one-hour program that includes coverage of the day's games, plus analysis from Bob Costas, Al Michaels, and John Madden.

And NBC did all those things: flexible scheduling, scheduling for what is best for the games and viewers. NBC did not have to decide which games to cover, which was the case when CBS had exclusive rights.

NBC did see the biggest troop: flexible scheduling for what is best for the games and viewers. NBC did not have to decide which games to cover, which was the case when CBS had exclusive rights.

ESPN

ESPN had its chance to reinvent the wheel but it, obviously, has not been successful with its new schedule. What is different is "Football Night in America," a one-hour program that includes coverage of the day's games, plus analysis from Bob Costas, Al Michaels, and John Madden.

And NBC did all those things: flexible scheduling, scheduling for what is best for the games and viewers. NBC did not have to decide which games to cover, which was the case when CBS had exclusive rights.

ESPN's schedule is more complicated than NBC's, which brings up the question: Which has better programming? Maybe better programming is the question.

The answer seems to be NBC. The network's new schedule is more appealing than ESPN's.

Saturday night is the big game of the weekend. NBC is the big picture. The network has the opportunity to showcase its best games.

The network is going to be facing a strong challenge from Fox and ESPN. The networks are going to have to work hard to keep viewers tuned in.

On Saturday night, NBC will have the biggest game of the weekend: the Ohio State-Buckeyes against the Oklahoma Sooners.
Men's soccer club expects improvement

The men's soccer club has high expectations and is poised to be a step above the competition, with a roster consisting of former members of the Michigan State University men's soccer team. Martinelli also said this year's team should be better than last season's team that finished 6-5-6 with returning experience and an influx of new young talent.

"We have more talent on the team this year," said Pelaez, a former psychology student from Indiana. "We have a lot of experience and depth, and our team chemistry is outstanding.

The team's expectations are high, with a goal of winning at least 10 games this season. Pelaez explained that the team has been working hard in the off-season to prepare for the upcoming season.

"We've been training hard and focusing on fitness, technique, and strategy," said Pelaez. "We're looking forward to the season and hope to have a successful year.

The team's coach, Martinelli, is also optimistic about the upcoming season. "We have a very talented squad, and I think we can compete at a high level this season," said Martinelli. "We're excited to see how we perform on the field.

Pelaez also pointed out the importance of teamwork and chemistry on the field.

"It's important to have good communication and trust among the players," said Pelaez. "We need to be able to work together effectively and support each other on the field.

The team's schedule for the upcoming season will be announced soon, and Pelaez encouraged fans to come out and support the team.

"We're excited to play in front of our fans and show them what we're made of," said Pelaez. "We hope to put on a good show and make Michigan State proud.

The team's philosophy is to play with passion and dedication to the sport, and Pelaez emphasized that the team is committed to giving their all on the field.

"We'rehere to compete and give our best effort," said Pelaez. "We're looking forward to the season and hope to have a successful year.

Overall, the team's expectations are high, and Pelaez and Martinelli are confident in their ability to deliver a strong season.

Check out the team's website for more information and updates on the upcoming season.
