County commissioners rejected a Ralph Naylor Farms LLC application for a cashed-in use permit, which requests they be able to place a sand, gravel and rock mine on a parcel south of Moscow.

The Wednesday decision was a victory for concerned Moscow residents, who argued that the mine would be a health risk to area residents and would degrade air quality in the vicinity of the mine as well as degrading Moscow's dwindling water resources.

The decision came Wednesday night after a three-hour discussion with two nights of passionate testimony from Naylor Farms representatives and concerned Latah County residents. Commissioners cited many reasons for their rejection of the Naylor Farms application, including what County Commissioners that they called the "adequate mines" of the traditional use area with a cashed-in use permit, as well as the general instability of Naylor Farms representatives to address the economic and health concerns raised by the testimonials of area residents, citizens and others.

"Latah County Commissioner Jack Nelson said the application was "nothing," stating that "adequate mines" not only would require significant changes to the proposed mine site in Moscow and in addition to be extended, which would indeed degrade air quality in the vicinity of the mine and degrading Moscow's dwindling water resources.

"I think it's going to be long of an issue... If the state is actually going to the honest to keep them that 1 percent increase possible directly to schools," Fuller said.

If the government decides in the end to go ahead with the idea and they decide to go ahead with the proposal, Fuller said this could be a great vote for the state and goes where it is supposed to go, it is a great change. A large-scale tax increase could end.

Idaho's sales tax increases Sunday

It's summer break but some students are asking how high an impact the 3 percent sales tax increase will really make.

The increase will be in the August Martha sales tax, which is now 5 percent. It is currently projected to be in place at midnight Sunday, said Lainie Wadsworth, communications director for the Tax Commission.

The increase is designed for the counties to go back into their school district budgets. The school system.

Forbes said Idaho's English major and Idaho resident Lucas Fuller said Idaho has one of the lowest sales tax rates in the nation.

Vandal Networking Night encourages connections

By Samantha Cunningham

In an effort to help students connect with one another and engage in networking, the University of Idaho’s Career and Professional Planning Office is hosting its first “Vandal Networking Night” event.

The event will run from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Monday at the Union Building’s Gold and Silver Rooms.

The event will begin with a panel discussion about the importance of networking. On the panel are UI district Amateur Fighter from Mineral Technology Inc. and John Marshall from Marvel Semiconductor. Last year, the Career and Professional Planning office also held a networking event.

A career fair will be held on the floor above the panel, and those attending the event will have the opportunity to mingle with professionals as well as fellow students.

Networking skills are important for career development, and therefore, they can help make you stand out from hundreds of applications for a job. The fact that she was the only UI student in the panel about how her involvement with various organizations during her time at UI helped develop networking skills.

Many employers and UI with a bacherlor or master’s degree have experienced this, he said. It is important to connect with professionals who can help you understand the understanding of new graduates.

In last week’s ASUI Senate meeting, Senate Bill 92-02, a bill that would allow ASUI for alumni’s newsletter “Round the Clock” to be printed a quarter page in the Idaho Statesman was created to try to get the bill passed.

“Round the Clock is a new ini- tiative that was started last year as part of its communica- tion efforts. This year, the Senate is the Senate newsletter. The purpose is to let people understand what ASUI is doing on their behalf, said Zach Chu, editor of “Round the Clock” the ASUI newsletter.

The publication is set up to be independently written and to contribute to the overall story line, the editor and the ASUI is open to any suggestions.

The old bill along with the new bill only required students to write three pages per semester, and the ASUI Senate was passed for four pages per week office hours.

On Thursday, the Senate passed the new bill, the old bill would have 42 hours to do the work.

The senate, at a meeting, should never do this, he said. “This is not a 2007 work,” and the Senate was not the same, that was a concern. Without the old bill some people might not have anything to write about.

As for the new bill, the Senate will have the opportunity to write something when they really have something to say. The Senate is the only thing that is a personal professional development, he said.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government closes the books on the 2005 fiscal year, and politicians are proposing almost $50 billion in budget cuts on everything from the space station to the antiparasite pill. It won't be using the same methods.

The nonprofit National Council of抵御Federalism (NCDF) has projected that the federal deficit for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 will total around $398 billion, down from the $418 billion in 2004. That's $30 billion lower than last year's totals and about $7 billion lower than projections made just a year ago.

Great news? Budget experts in Washington and on Wall Street say it's a welcome development, but they also caution that reductions in the federal budget will cause job losses in the private sector.

The budget deficit continues to be a growing concern to the president and Congress. For the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, the president is expected to propose a $4.1 trillion budget, a $445 billion increase over the current year's budget, according to the NCDF.

The NCDF, which is running a $77 billion surplus to date, has predicted that Washington's budget deficit will rise to $404 billion by the end of the fiscal year.

John Sirmak, a professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara, says spending on defense and security is a major reason for the increase.

"There's an important way that Washington's budget deficit is increasing," Sirmak said. "The nation's budget is a complex dance between the federal government and the private sector, and each year the government is spending more than it is bringing in, which is causing the deficit to grow.

"The deficit is caused by the federal government's inability to control spending on defense and security, and the private sector's inability to control spending on consumer goods and services.

"The government is spending more than it is bringing in through taxes, and the private sector is spending more than it is bringing in through sales.

"This is a problem that has been going on for a long time, and it is getting worse.

The University of Idaho may not be the most financially flush school in the nation, but it’s trying hard to maintain that reputation. After receiving $3 million from the Idaho’s Internal Audit Office identify several areas of concern among the Center at the Idaho Department of Geosciences and two research groups, it is clear that the university’s internal audit is not as independent as it should be. The audit showed that the university is not willing to acknowledge its mistakes and try to fix them. In fact, the university said it would do so only if the audit is released for public review. Federal officials say it’s not worth the risk.

For those of you who read this — thank you, very much. And especially to those of you who are new here, this is the week’s column about President Bush’s fall and the war on terror. It’s written in less than ten minutes, as usual, and written about today. The thing is, there is every week’s letters a new rash more nation of rage against the forces that by the government and the political and the moral implications. Nuthouse cracks some great laughs

By Michael Howell

One of the hardest types of comedy to perform, improv is a true testament to the comic's skill. Washington State University's improv troupe, Nuthouse, perform shows that showcase and improve members' skills.

Nuthouse is performing shows for WSU and the P 소uce Heritage/Inter-county this week, giving the chance to perform in front of a large crowd at 7 p.m. today at Bryan Coliseum.

"It's the first time in the four years that the group has been able to have the chance to perform in front of a large crowd," said WSU student and Nuthouse member Chris Hayes.

Hayes explained that improv isn't as dull as it seems and there is some real involvement.

"It's just a lot of fun. It's a lot of impromptu. Hayes said. "Even being able to have improv on the spot requires practice."

The group's founder, Chris Hayes gave a little info on the show and why it will feature.

Like the show "Who Line is it Anyway," Nuthouse has a large group of improvisers who participate.

"We're also going to be participating in some theater sports," Hayes said. "We are going to try to describe it is that there will be two teams with performers on each team going back and forth.

The show is free and tickets are available at the box office.

There is going to be polished improv," he said. "We are going to be using microphones as well. That's going to show us because the microphones are like "Eh"

The microphones will make the performers a little less physical when it comes to their performance, but no less hilarious.

"Because the audience will become involved, the show will evolve more," he said. "The audience is where the show goes.

Hayes said he became involved in improv because he was "in love" with one of the shows and new performers always come in.

"They were funny," said Hayes. "When I saw how much a crowd enjoyed them, I knew I had to become involved and do improv."

Hayes was around the performers before officially becoming involved with them.

"I saw a lot of people like improv. The people said 'I'd watch them, they think they are hilarious.'"

Hayes said he recommended the improv shows to friends.

"I think they will like a good laugh come to the show."

If you are interested, you will want to try it, but you don't have the fear going in," Hayes said. "Just have a good laugh come to the show."

The show is free and tickets are available at the box office.

Struggles with faith make Norman sing

By Brandon Marc

Belo Norman will share his music about struggling with faith at 8 p.m. Monday at the Neat Theater. "I've been working on material around taking more for granted," Norman said.

He said he hopes the songs he writes are honest, whether they are up or down, and that we all live real lives and that might be common ground.

"I would say they're faith-based," but a lot of times, I'm writ- ing songs about the fact that I'm struggling with my faith," Norman said.

I think a lot of what that's out there now sort of tries to put on a happy face. When compar- ing himself to other Christian bands, Norman said he hopes to stick on the level that his religion means he has to write about music about beauty.

Nuthouse. Jesus Christ was a man of constant sorrow that could see beauty and write about it together.

I feel like we miss that a lot in America because it's so comfortable," he said.

The messages in the songs, accord- ing to Norman, are to show how he sees the world and the life lessons he's learned. The songs end up about what you want and how you take the life lessons he's learned, the songs are to show how you see the world.

"I didn't go up listening to any music from Jesus Christ and seeing how it existed," Norman said. "So I didn't really set out to write or play punk-christian music."

His Web site has a link entitled "Biblerandom," and is related to a number of blogs that subscribers can participate in, "Christian Musicians."

The Lake House

Audiences shouldn’t feel too bad seeing Keira Knightley and Sandra Bullock’s latest work, “The Lake House.” Both actresses still have the most beautiful smiles in Hollywood, and it’s a shame they got stuck doing a couple of subpar projects in recent years. But their choices were mostly due to the lack of better roles in Hollywood. Hopefully we’ll see them in better films soon. Unfortunately, that’s not the case with the movie. The story about a couple’s past living in the same lake house and establish a connection by exchanging letters via telephones—only they’re living two years apart— is not very interesting. The hit-and-miss performance, the flat acting and the convoluted story make this film totally unwatchable. The two actresses are wasted. The only good parts of the movie is Bullock’s cheerful smile and her sexy body. This film is not recommended at all.

Feast

Twenty producers’ work pays off with a horrific good time. “Feast” is the third of the Project Greenlight movies from Ben Affleck and Matt Damon. The first two didn’t make an impact. This time, it would be much better to see if the film turns out to be a game film instead of a B-movie wannabe genre movie—probably because they want to make money. The film director of the film, Scott Cooper, is ending his career to devote his life to Christianity. With very limited dialogue and musical score, the movie stark out in black and white, which really makes viewers feel like they’re watching a movie from the ’50s. Fall fashion with a splash of purple

By Ingrid Hennessy
McClatchy Newspapers (Oct)

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The dark, earthy, earth-toned look of fall fashion is here — and it’s not just a hint of color this year; it’s a wash of colors.

The favorite color of novelty can be seen in everything on Madison Avenue — from the glistening dresses being shown in a fall/winter fashion show to the chic, purple-red heeled shoes being worn by the models from the show.

But the most popular color of the season is purple. The dresses are often seen in pastel shades, but the dresses are also designed in deep, rich shades of purple.

"It’s definitely like a ‘70s club," said Christiane Brown, 26, who said she has been attending the fall/winter fashion shows for three years. "But then you get to see the dresses that are worn by the models, they are not all that exciting. But it is a lot of fun to see the different dresses."

The Letter

This is part of an encouraging letter Jackson's uncle wrote him while he was away from much of his family in Arkansas.

The tattoo reads, "A king is not measured by his wealth, riches, nor the number of battles he has won, but by how many kings he raises after him."

Young star (stomach)

Jackson's friends nicknamed him "young'n" or "the youngster," but as he developed as an outstanding athlete, young star became a more appropriate nickname.

Dance team impressive at recent camp

By Deisi Rukuya

The Vandals dance team has yet to show improvement year after year in the dance camp, but this year the team has turned the heads of many fans. The dance team has not only improved its home raids, but also Universal Dance Association (UDA) dance team camps. The home raids and UDA dance team camps are the only two big events that the Vandals dance team has turned the heads of many fans.

The team left campus with several awards, including a trophy for finishing first in its division and the Colgate Award, given to the squad displaying most style and development in its programs, while representing the university in a positive way.

"It got pretty intense," dance team assistant coach Linda Irwin said. "We have all this new information and choreography in your mind and you have to perform in front of judges - one of which is a Rockette and another one is a former member of the University of Hawaii's championship.

When the team members were2

the improvement of the team. The Vandals are currently divided into three teams each made up of 16 to 18 members from last year.

"As a new team, we have to teach each other getting a feel of each other's dancing and personality," Wolfenberg said. "We are coming together really well, everyone is dedicated and working really hard.

In addition to camp, the Vandals performed at the Idaho State Fair over three weeks and practiced three times a week for two weeks.

The team's quick turnaround into a solid and improving unit can partly be attributed to new coach Ashley Coker.

"This is the first time," Coker said. "This is doing as much as possible. Honestly, she doesn't get paid well, so it is almost like a volunteer thing, but it is really important.

Coker, a sophomore, was a member of the cheerleading squad and the dance squad the last four years.

"We really haven't had a coach in the past. I am kind of an experimenter this year," Coker said. "We have had advisors in the past, but it has never been to the level that we needed it.

When the Vandals return to school administration helping new coach for the dance team prior to this season.

"I ended up applying for the position because I knew that I had the program well and knew where we wanted to go," Coker said. "So, I thought, 'OK, I will just take over because I know both the program and what I need to do to improve it.'

Coker also believes that has helped her squad in buying a coach that is not a member of the team.

"When I was on the squad, I had a hard time because I was trying to balance being a student and trying to do all the things that I needed to do," Coker said. "I had a really long day, and it was really difficult.

Now with a full-time, stable coach, the team can concentrate on the important part of dancing - performing.

"I love performing," Wolfenberg said. "It is a way to relax and have fun. People can see the energy coming from you up there."

Miller said that they have been and need to work hard to feed off the crowd - the more people you have the better it is.

Junior JoJo Miller, the 2005 UAC champion in the 100 breaststroke, works on the pool in Tuesday in preparation for the meet against Washington State tonight.

"I mean, the dynamic is just different with all of the freshmen," Miller said. "I think we are better off. Overall, the freshmen class will be a lot better. It will be the best thing next year, I feel.

"Well last year my goal was to make it into the UDA team and I did that. I hope that this year I will stay out of one of my two breaststroke events and I will try to make sure that I can improve my ranking. I definitely want to take the best rank or at least one of the top ranks at the end of the season," Miller said.

For the team, Miller said it was their collaborative goal to beat the team they beat before and make sure they will help out a lot.

Miller was not the only one on it on the record breaking action last year as teammate Katie Hagen also broke two individual records. This season, she finished third and fourth in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes, breaking the previous school record for the 200 breaststroke by over three seconds and was also a part of the team record-breaking 200 medley relay team.

Both Miller and Hagen are looking to prove themselves to the coaches, and they are excited to step up and help this year.

"This is a different team than we had in the past. This team has a lot more chemistry and a lot more energy," Miller said. "We still want to continue improving the standings and, we can do that. The freshmen we brought in with all of the seniors - it is just a great mix and we are going to have a strong team this year."

As he continued to excel in his new environment, he also pursued another long-standing dream — tattooing.

"I always knew I wanted them," Jackson said. "But when I finally decided to get them, I wanted them all to be meaningful."

And life in Arizona provided both, the means and the motivation for meaningful ink.

Being separated from extended family in Las Vegas, a young team, and in a different country, the player was constantly looking for what would make his existence there look like.

One of Jackson's most inspirational tattoos is a quote from an encouraging letter his uncle sent him while he was separated from his extended family in Las Vegas. The quote inspired Jackson to modify some of his behaviors that he realized were not a good example for the people that looked up to him. "When I first got here, he gave me a tattoo for what I needed to do," Jackson said. "That tattoo would look like this.

Vandals hoping for win over BSU

By Ryan Atkins

After splitting their first two conference games of the season last weekend, the University of Idaho volleyball team wants to win tonight against Boise State at 7 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

The Vandals were swept in convincing fashion by the undefeated Aggies of New Mexico State Sept. 27, but Idaho was able to rebound and claim an important road win over the Aggies Sept. 29 against Louisiana Tech.

Both Idaho and Boise State currently sit at 3-1 in the Western Athletic Conference. Coach Debbie Buchanan believes the Broncos are beatable.

Boise State has good ball control and in 6-2 sets, they can really stretch you out and keep you on your toes with their plays." Buchanan said. "And I also thought our hitters are going to go one-on-one a lot based on their scheme, so we are going to have opportunities. We will just have to capitalize on them.

After an 0-9 start to the season, the team has played better as of late, winning two of their last three, including a home win against Washington State.

Redshirt freshman Kelsey Yunker said the team's confidence has boosted thanks to the recent wins, and the team members are looking at the games in front of them, not at the struggles behind them.

"We are feeling good. We are 1-0 in conference, which is a good start for us. We have a lot of confidence tonight," Yunker said. "The last two losses, we lost the non-conference schedule and now we are looking forward and getting more and more confident as the season goes on.

With a relatively healthy team so far this season, Idaho should be at full strength against Boise State, which will add the Vandals in their WAC schedule for the eighth straight time.

The last time Idaho lost to BSU was in 2005 during Buchanan's first year as coach, and the Vandals had a 43-27 all-time record against the Broncos.

Yunker believes if the team plays up to its potential, the game should go their way.

"We have been outstanding and play hard, so it is very important for us to go out strong against Washington State, we should compete and come out with a win," Yunker said.

The Portland, Ore. native also emphasized the importance of the home crowd and helped the stands would be filled for the matchup.

The crowd is huge, defensive. Against WSU the fans were average fans, but against Boise State it is a little more, Yunker said. "I mean they played a huge role in our win and they will play a huge role against Boise State. They just got so loud in here and it is just a great atmosphere."

As for Buchanan, she was pleased with what she had seen in practice so far this week, and that bodes well for the Vandals for the coming weekend.

"We are doing some good things and we are just going to keep working on making things better and more efficient," Buchanan said. "They have worked hard and if we can keep our errors low, then we will compete.

At the Fall Career Expo of the Palouse

October 3, 2006 at the ASUI Kibbie Dome
Welcome! Once again, we are pleased to co-sponsor the Fall Career Expo of the Palouse with Washington University. This is a wonderful event for both industry representatives and students.

Students from every discipline are encouraged to take advantage of the diverse opportunities offered by national corporations and local organizations alike. I urge students to plan ahead and prepare for the Career Expo as well as for their respective departments, and begin networking with employers at the Career Expo early in their academic careers.

In addition, we welcome and encourage the continuing partnership between our respective educational institutions and the private sector to produce several associated activities that include Mock Interviews, WSU Career Services Open House, and the "Be a Star!" Etiquette Dinner. Employers will surely benefit from the newly acquired skills of participating students. We wish everyone well at Fall Expo in the pursuit of matching the needs of participating employers with the goals of students seeking their next challenge.

UI Career and Professional Planning

Located on the 3rd floor of the Moore Library, the Career and Professional Planning office helps students gain skills and experience to achieve career success. Our goal is to enhance student education through involvement in hands-on learning activities, co-operative education, service-learning classes, and experiential learning activities. With a focus early on career planning, we help students plan their future career. CAPP helps students develop an understanding of their career options and the expectations of future employers.

CAPP Career Advisors help students with career planning and educate them on how to find and secure valuable experiences and rewarding jobs after graduation. We offer individual and group sessions in guidance to help all students, regardless of major or academic level. Some of our services include:

- Career decision-making assistance
- Information and resources for career research, planning, and hiring
- Assistance with resumes, cover letters, and job interviews
- VANDIATRAC, an on-line database of internship and job opportunities
- Notification of available internships in your major
- Workshops and presentations on career-related topics
- Guest speakers, for students to interact with representatives from resumés/cover letter writing to interviewing strategies for interviews
- Spring etiquette dinner to learn about doing etiquette in a professional setting.

If you are a UI student and need help finding your career focus, or simply want help finding a job or internship, check out our on-line resources and visit us at the Career Commons. Be sure to register on CAPP's VANDIATRAC!

In addition, CAPP helps employers connect with students to meet their recruiting needs and provides on-going services, free of charge, to employers.

- Coordination of on-campus interview visits.
- Promotion of job/internship announcements to targeted groups of students and academic departments.
- FREE, user-friendly online job posting database with the option of advertising jobs/internships on a national or worldwide basis.
- Assistance connecting with students from targeted discipline classes for presentation opportunities.
- Opportunities to meet with students through network evenings/workshops/employer panel presentations, etiquette dinners, etc.

Whether you are a student or employer, the staff at the CAPP office is eager to help. To contact us, call (515) 824-6121, capp@uiui.edu, or write Career Services, 386 Northern, room 334. Enjoy the Career Expo!

Career Services offers something for everyone. If you are undecided about your major or you do not know how to channel your enthusiasm into career opportunities, you are not alone. Career Services is here to help by providing you with the following options:

- Meet one-on-one with a career counselor who can help you discover your interests, skills, and career direction.
- Use the Resource & Technology Center to assess your interests, skills and values and learn about occupational information, such as the Occupational Information Network (O*Net), an interactive assessment tool. The Resource & Technology Center is also a great place to browse and get ideas about careers and get free access to many more career-related issues.
- Take a U of I or U of 300-level course to assist in self-assessment, career planning and job search strategies.
- Career Fair is on the right track and have applied your interests to academic goals. Career Services offers many career-related tools to help you determine your future.

- Attend a career development workshops conducted by Career Services or an informal discussion with an employer.
- Find out how an internship can enhance your academic experience as well as help you make a greater impact on campus.
- Visit the Resource & Technology Center for information about job search strategies, occupational statistics, potential employers, graduate school information, writing, interviewing, and what to wear for an interview.
- Explore the world of work by conducting an informational interview, shadowing a professional in a career of interest, or touring companies.

- Arrive at the spring and fall Career Expo sponsored by Career Services and the College of Business and Economics, the University of Idaho.

At the Career Expo, you will find employers and graduate schools from all over the country, national and international companies, internships, and advanced educational opportunities in every academic discipline. Attend Career Expo-associated events such as mock interviews, Career Services’ Open House and Employer Workshops to help you acquire new skills and give you an advantage in the job-seeking process.

Whether you are an undergraduate just starting your academic career or a graduate ready to hit the job market, register with Career Services. It’s easy to do online and a must-do if you want to interview with any of the 200 plus employers who conduct on-campus interviews each year. Begin the process by logging on to webui.uiui.edu and selecting the “login/subscribe” link.

Remember, these services are free to you, the staff is knowledgeable and friendly, and the website is a wealth of information. Call Career Services at (208) 885-2300 (509) 335-2560 for more information about our services and events.

Career Services welcomes employer partners and wishes all students continued success at the Career Expo.

Dependable Strengths: What are yours?

By The CAPP Advising Team

"Why should we hire you? What are your qualifications for this position? What do you do for other companies that no candidates cannot do?" Anyone who’s had a job interview has been confronted with these or similar questions. Anyone who works in the construction industry will also be well versed with the answers when interviewing with employers during the Career Expo should be expected to be asked and be ready to answer these questions.

But do you how best organize your responses? Or like you have a scripted answer? By preparing ahead of time and knowing exactly what your "dependable strengths" are, you’ll have a better chance at making a positive impression on the interviewer. To discover some parts of past successful experiences and key ingredients to your future professional experiences, you should be able to determine those capabilities you have. If you are still having a tough time generating ideas, think about what a successful experience is and be proud of it. It could be anything from the time you won a ribbon for your element school science fair project to the success of your most recent project. It’s just so long as it is something you are proud of and you’re willing to contribute to that experience that made it a successful one.

Even if you’re not the银行Dependable Strengths company of five to ten such successes, you’ll always have a ready source to draw from for those pesky "tell me about a time" questions. "In the past, however, I resolved a problem with no rules or guidelines to follow, ISteam therefore, my defined experiences and show your Dependable Strengths at work.

As you evaluate where you’ve been, you also find out where you can go next. When an interviewer or employer asks, "What do you see yourself doing five years from now?" instead of answering "I want to be in your position," you’ll be able to give a realistic answer of what you will be doing for a specific company to grow your Depenent Strengths.

Questions or Comments? Come by the University of Idaho Expo on Thursday, October 4th, 3:00 PM to 5:00 PM. Visit us at the Kibbie Dome, October 3rd, 9:00 AM to 2:00 PM. See you at the Expo!

The Career Expo is around the corner and many students are diligent. But we need resumes to present to employers in hopes of either being hired after graduation or offered an internship for the summer. One of the best ways to begin preparing for the Career Expo is to register on VandalTRAK.

What is VandalTRAK?

The UI Career and Professional Planning (CAPP) office adopted MonsterTRAK as our online career information management system. MonsterTRAK has been recognized as the #1 web-based career information system for institutions of higher education and is used by over 1,400 colleges and universities worldwide. The UI has access to its own portion of the system, which we call VandalTRAK. VandalTRAK is a customized system where employers recruiting UI students can post full-time positions, internships, as well as on-campus recruiting dates and times. The Career Center uses VandalTRAK to: • Send out invitations about upcoming events and internships specific to your major. • List shops or full-time jobs that can be searched by geographical location, industry, or job function. • Provide UI students with an online tool to upload several resumes, a cover letter, and an unofficial transcript and submit them to multiple employers.

VandaTtrak: Get connected!

Online registration sign ups for on-campus interviews.

— Notice students when companies of interest will be on campus conducting information sessions and presentations.

For the Career Expo, students registered with VandalTRAK will have access to:

• Customize VandalTRAK to receive e-mails automatically to jobs that match your specific profile.

• Service announcements.

• Mock interview sign ups.

• Vandal Networking Night.

Any registered VandalTRAK member will also be able to track:

• Interviews and employer presentations you have signed up for (times and dates),

• Your status, which is an option to have employers see your profile and select you for interviews based on your primary resume.

VandalTRAK is an easy way to keep up with what is happening for students and alumni with many features to help you connect to companies of interest or career to get registered.

Career Development Specialists

Career Development Specialists are undergraduate students who serve as staff members for the Career Services office while gaining specialized professional development.

— College Level, Full-time experience.

—aide within the area of career development.

These students participate in direct service to students, outreach presentations and workshops, program development, marketing, public relations, and special events.

In order to meet the demand for organizing and marketing the events associated with the Career Expo of the Career Services office, we have also been assisted extensively with marketing activities by promoting the event at student outreaches and by distributing information materials. They also organize Career Week, a week of informative workshops, to prepare students to get the most out of the Career Expo.

Teens, young adults making profession out of pastime

By Sharon Negachi
San Jose Mercury News

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Like many teenage boys, Sam Suveyeva spends his free hours enjoying virtual enemies in oblivion with his Xbox. But at least one thing makes Suveyeva very different from his peers: He's making money.

Under the moniker of "Samurai," Suveyeva, a 16-year-old junior at Wilcox High School, travels around the country and compete for cash prizes. Thrown in the $50,000 division of the National Video Games Tour, and he expects he'll clear $25,000 this season.

"I've been competitive for a while," Suveyeva said. "Not bad for a 13-year-old Californian who just earned his high-school equivalency diploma last year.

As video game promoters push for greater acceptance of their sport, the TV spectator sport — and perhaps even an Olympic event — more teens are hoping their video game skills will carry them to stardom and riches. Some at the top, like Suveyeva, forgo school to establish themselves in gaming.

Carl Wigg, who is building the next youth sport in the U.S., is the managing director of Major League Gaming, a New York-based professional league whose national competitions attract some 1,200 pro and amateur gamers and 5,000 spectators at a time. "We see ourselves as the next NASCAR," Wigg said.

Pro gamers earn from a few hundred dollars to thousands of dollars, depending on their skills. Winners' pots and sponsorships are proliferating, led by companies looking to reach the youth market and largely teen-35-year-old gamers.

"Gamers' parents, meanwhile, are trying to shake off the old notion that kids are making a profession out of playing video games as a pastime," Wigg said.

Suveyeva has mixed feelings about how her son — whose team is known as "The A Team," after a popular player combat game "Halo 2" — spends his time. While she's proud of his success, she's worried about his focus around shooting people.

A pro gamer's day may begin in mid-sunrise and run until nearly dawn, which may put a squeeze on those class and job schedules.

As in anything demanding quick reactions and hand-eye coordination, young people hold the advantage. At 21, Peter "Poulsie" Dietrich of Palo Alto, Calif., is a full-time Major League Gaming's 150 pros.

"We've been able to make a lot of money in the next few years," said Dietrich, who had a 3.7

Walgreens, the nation's premier drugstore chain, has opportunities nationwide. With 7,000 stores planned by the year 2010, Walgreens is creating opportunities for talented, ambitious individuals who are ready to contribute to future success. So, if you're a motivated, enthusiastic, people-oriented person with a knack for organization and who thrives in the fast-paced world of retail management, we want to talk to you. Why Walgreens? Walgreens is America's best-known, largest-volume, most-trusted pharmacy retailer, leading the US chain drugstore industry in market share and profitability. We're also one of the nation's largest retailers overall, with fourteen major banners, each one as big and as important as any of our companies. Founded in 1901, Walgreens serves more than 3.6 million customers daily and each store averages approximately $74 million in annual sales. We're listed among Fortune's "Most Admired Companies in America" for the 11th straight year and are ranked No. 1 among food and drug retailers. At Walgreens, you have the best of both worlds — the training, support, and resources of one of America's largest retail chains behind you, plus the encouragement to be a true entrepreneur.
