Enrollment dips again

UI student enrollment numbers down for spring semester
By Christine Lords

Despite hopes fueled by renewed recruiting efforts, enrollment numbers have decreased again this year.

The University of Idaho Moscow campus dropped another 3.7 percent in student enrollment, which means 304 fewer students enrolled this spring semester compared to last spring semester. That number comes from counts taken on the 2006 school day of the spring semester; 7,894 students were enrolled.

The full-time student enrollment was 55 percent, down by a 4.7 percent drop from last spring. Spring enrollment numbers in 2005 were reported at 8,046 students, and 8,103 are for the Moscow campus.

The university’s statewide enrollment dropped 5 percent to show a total of 950 students from campuses outside of Center of Boise Area, Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho State.

"Enrollment typically goes down in the spring," he said.

"However, we lost 315 students this year compared to last year. We lost 11 percent this year, so we are down quite a bit," he said.

All of this decrease is due to a more than 4.5 percent increase in student enrollment numbers from last fall.

The overall enrollment numbers from the 2005-2006 academic year do not differentiate between part-time students and full-time students.

"Full-time enrollment on the Moscow campus is something we do not report," said Dan Davenport, director of admissions and financial aid.

Davenport said many different factors — including an increase in full-time students — go into creating the intense analysis.

Numbers are up for non-UI undergraduate and graduate students. The campus shows a 12.3 percent increase in new undergraduates and a 15 percent increase in new graduate students.

"The thing that we were pleased with was that the numbers were up for spring (for undergraduate and graduate students)," Davenport said.

In 2007, UI's total enrollment was 10,184, which was up by 255 students from last year, which was at 10,159.

American Indian student enrollment numbers are up.
Towels caused locker room blaze

Staff report

We took photo on scene because most likely caused Saturday's fire in the Physical Education Building women's locker room, investigations announced Wednesday in a press release.

After studying from pattern and the fire evidence, officials from the Idaho State Fire Department and Idaho State Fire Marshal's office determined the fire started close to the sauna's heater. Interviews helped them determine that sauna users often placed towels near or on the heater to dry out between workouts and use them again.

Jane Bellinger, assistant director for Institutional Research and Assessment, said the National Survey of Student Engagement will be sent to a random sample of freshmen and seniors across about 200 institutions, and that the data will be announced by the end of March. She said the data is more useful for individual institutions, and that the data will be analyzed and released to the public at a later date.

The survey has a response rate of about 80 percent, and that the data is more useful for individual institutions, and that the data will be analyzed and released to the public at a later date.

Director of budget retires, UI begins candidate interviews

By Sean Canice

The position for director of the University Budget Office was left vacant Wednesday after the current director announced his retirement from the University of Idaho 22 years ago, after a career in banking.

According to Jana Dye, president of the Associated Students of University of Idaho, there will be a replacement for the position.

"We think there's good in the budget office.

Mark Brainard, former budget director

The interview process for the new director will take place in the near future.

Though there was no indication that electrical malfunctioning played a role in the fire, there will be further analysis of the heater and other electrical components in the sauna.

The fire caused more than $10,000 in damages and required removal of some of the facility's furniture.

There is no official estimate for when the facility will reopen, but Thompson said it may be a matter of months.

The U-Sium remains open, and alternate locker rooms are available in Memorial Fieldhouse.

While the act under consideration would have let him feel as though he were back in the old days, the students said that they would not be surprised if some of the students who are committed to getting involved in the campaign "went to the races" and did not have the time to get involved.

"The question is whether the students want to put in the good work," said the students. "I would not be surprised if some of the students who are committed to getting involved in the campaign..."
The young fines of the fashion world are stemming themselves against those who question the value of prestigious brands. In a world of fast fashion, designers are increasingly turning to sustainable and ethical practices, and some are even advocating for the end of consumerism. However, the fashion industry is still struggling to find a balance between profit and sustainability, and many critics argue that the industry is still too focused on profit at the expense of the environment.

There is movement in the way we think about fashion and beauty. People are becoming more aware of the environmental impact of their choices, and many are calling for a shift in the way the industry operates. Some are甚至提出 to do away with the concept of beauty altogether, suggesting that we should instead focus on the idea of being comfortable in our own skin.

High fashion models are no different. They work with designers who are committed to creating sustainable and ethical clothing. But it is not just about the clothes themselves; it is also about the message that the models are sending. By choosing to work with designers who put sustainability at the forefront of their work, they are helping to raise awareness about the importance of ethical fashion.

This movement is significant, as it suggests that the fashion industry is finally starting to take sustainability seriously. It is an encouraging sign that the industry is finally starting to listen to the concerns of consumers, and that it is finally starting to understand the importance of ethical fashion.

New age outlaw: Jesse James pays for pollution

Take your medicine correctly

The beginning of a new year is traditionally a time when millions of resolutions to improve our health — to quit smoking, lose weight, or exercise more. I have a suggestion for a New Year's resolution that is so simple it almost sounds silly — take a prebiotic supplement correctly.

Prebiotics are powerful and, when taken correctly, can help reduce weight gain after bariatric surgery, lower cholesterol levels, and make you less stinky. One problem many people have is that prebiotics don't work as well as they should. Many forget to take them, or take them at the wrong time, or lose too much of the prescribed dosage before it reaches the gut. It is not unlike running a marathon only to take a wrong turn before the finish line.

Not taking the right drug, at the right time, or not taking it at all is a serious problem, according to the latest research. For example, resistance to many medications is not something that happens suddenly. It is a process, a progressive setting of norm, and is non-compliance. Experts estimate that non-compliance costs the United States nearly $100 billion per year in extra medical costs. So, patients not taking medications properly can have dangerous, and potentially, deadly consequences.

To improve compliance, the first step should be to calibrate as close as possible to the body of the person taking the medication. Pharmacists have the knowledge and tools to help you with this. If you need to know how to schedule your pill taking and when to take it, what side effects to watch out for, and what could possibly caused a side effect, all of this is available on the internet. If medications are made and how they work would make the best health care professionals and patients understand the science behind your medication regimen.

Talk to your pharmacist. They are the people who can help you with your medications correctly and can give you direction and advice on how to support your health and lifestyle choices.

For the past two years, I was drinking water from a WSU water cooler. The water was so bad that I used bottled water instead. I even bought a Brita container to filter the water. This year I decided to replace the water cooler. I thought that the new water cooler would be better.

I was wrong. The new water cooler is worse than the old one. The water still tastes bad and it is full of sediments. I am not sure what to do. Do you have any suggestions for what I can do?

Matthew Foulk

The Argonaut

Dear Matthew,

I am not surprised that the new water cooler is not any better than the old one. Water coolers are typically not effective at filtering water. They are designed to cool water, not purify it. If you want to get rid of the sediments, you will need to use a different method.

Sandra

P.S. Don't forget to drink enough water! It is important for your health.

Greatness among mediocrity

By TJ. Tranchell

Charles Bukowski’s following is almost cultlike, while he has been dead since 1994, his popularity among a certain pointy head remains high. The following is not enough to propel 2006’s “Factotum” to success. The recently released DVD should be the “factotum.”

TJ. Tranchell

“Factotum”

A series of short films ranging in length from ten to fifty minutes each. The jobs range from chopping wood to being a pilot for a biplane manufacturer to wandering on a country one road in Oxford. During each film, Bukowski speaks about his own life and how he would rather live. He’s consistently sending off handwritten manuscripts in the hopes of getting published, but the audience can see how he’s doing and if things are going well or not.

“Factotum” has more than its fair share of fails, yet it can be thought of as one of Bukowski’s best pieces of work. His writing style is a masterclass in mediocrity.

Senior's design in competition

By Lauren Legulish

To have their designs recognized nationally, many graphic designers may choose to study at the University of Idaho. Cindy Leuren is one of those designers. She is a senior graphic design major at UI and is originally from Moscow, Idaho. Leuren is a University of Idaho studio art major and is an intern for ASUI Student Activities Leadership and Volunteer Programs where he does graphic design. He is graduating in May and will receive a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Graphic Design. He has been interested in graphic design since high school and decided to come to UI because his brother’s friend was already here. She has spent five years in school one year to learn English and then the usual four years of university classes. Leuren designed the cover for the university’s student planner, those few pages many take for over six months. His cover got the most votes in the college contest which will give Leuren $500 in prize money. He has six elimination rounds and categories for each school level (beginning, middle, and college). The winners of each category will be announced in April.

Tender Looms, the Coordinator of Student Activities Leadership and Volunteer Programs, got me into the contest,” Ota said. The inspiration for Ota’s design was the students of the university. “I wanted to be bright and show spring weather,” Ota said. The whole process took about a week. I had seven or eight designs at first. After I decided on the one, I went around campus and took pictures of campus landmarks. I wanted to give a picture of the campus water tower, a tree, and the Administration building. I wanted to have healthy young students. Ota said, “I also want to show of everyone who would see it.” The design was also used for the cover of the campus directory. Ota said: “The white margin around the edge is blue, and I like the style.”

The next, Ota will use the prize money to buy a new computer. Also be guideline, he still wants to design. Hopefully I can find a graphic design job here,” Ota said. Ota’s design color scheme was http://www.capp.uidaho.edu. To win the poll, click on the “Cover Design Contest” link on the left side of the screen.

Food, beer, commercials, halftime... ...oh yeah, and football too.

Ladies and gentlemen, it's almost here. Months of preparation, blood, sweat and tears have brought these people to Miami. The stars are aligned, the fans have been planted, the players have trained, and the games have been played. It's a long time coming, but tonight this all comes together.

The Super Bowl has always been a time for celebration. A time to come together, to enjoy each other's company, and to cheer on our favorite team. But for many, the true meaning of the Super Bowl is not just about the game itself. It's about the commercials, the beer, and the halftime show. And tonight, all of these elements come together in a way that has never been seen before.

But let's not forget the football. The game itself is the real star of the show. The players have trained hard, and the coaches have spent countless hours preparing for this moment. And tonight, they will take the field to battle for their chance to be remembered as champions.

So sit back, relax, and enjoy the show. Whether you're a fan of the Patriots, the Rams, the Saints, or the Eagles, there is something for everyone tonight. And as the night comes to an end, and the clock strikes zero, let's take a moment to appreciate what we've just witnessed. It's a moment that will be remembered for generations to come.

"My Father’s Dream, My Mission"

BY KATIE NOBLE
ASUI Vandal Entertainment Vice-Board Chair

Dear Students:

As the majority of you all know, the University of Idaho has recently changed their slogan to "Open Space, Open Minds". We can all be reminded every day while we watch the snow drift over the palouse hills of our open space. But where are the open minds?

With yet another new semester at the University of Idaho, I question what this semester may bring into our lives.

New people? New opportunities? New experiences?

It has been my experience that each of these questions become true each new semester at UI, with new classes, new neighbors, and still nowhere to park on campus.

It is, however, these questions that remain unanswered for some. Often times it is far easier to stay in a day-to-day rhythm, remaining in situations where we are comfortable.

It is in my experiences at UI that I challenge you to quest for more.

This semester we have a unique opportunity to expand our education beyond the classroom.

On Monday, February 5th Martin Luther King III will be speaking at the University of Idaho’s Kibbie Dome about the continued quest for social equality that his father (and many others) have died fighting for.

Tickets for this event can be purchased at the UI Athletic Ticket Office or by calling 885-6466.

Tickets will be $2 for students and the general public.

We encourage you to purchase tickets prior to the event, but tickets will also be sold at the door.

I believe that it is in the interest of every student of every background to attend this event.

This will be a momentous event for the University of Idaho that will encourage our campus and community to open their minds; because with open space, we can prove to have open minds.

Sincerely,
Katie Noble

Legislative Trip Nets Support for Idaho

BY TRAVIS SHOFNER
ASUI Vice President

February 15-17, 21 student leaders from the University of Idaho traveled to Boise to express the needs of University of Idaho students to state lawmakers.

Representatives and Senators in the Idaho Legislature, where they discussed two key issues: Faculty and staff salaries and Governor Otter’s proposed $38 million endowment to be put aside for needs-based scholarships for Idaho college students.

ASUI strongly encouraged members of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee and the Education Committees to support both measures.

Of the near two dozen meetings taken by the students, only a handful of state legislators expressed concern over the measures, while Sen. Gooe and Representative Nonini, chairmen of their respective Education committees, indicated general support for scholarships for students and increased salaries for state workers, including university employees.

Despite strong general support for ASUI’s causes, the state budget proposed by Governor Otter may see reductions or cuts in any of the proposed increases by the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

Co-Chairwoman of JFAC Representative Maxine Bell expressed concern with the potential funding and indicated that some, if not most, of the proposed education-related increases in the governor’s budget would see reduction.

ASUI will continue to present the views and needs of students at the University of Idaho through the legislative session, by contacting state legislators about salary equity and needs-based scholarships until the budget is passed.

If you are interested in contacting your state representatives on any issue, please contact ASUI Lobbyist Emily Davis at davi4056@uidaho.edu.

ASUI Vandal Fitness Challenge Draws in over 300 Participants

BY ADAM THUEN
Student Recreation Board Chair

How many years in a row has your New Year’s resolution been to get healthier? This year for many students it may be the year they stick with it.

The Vandal Fitness Challenge is up and running with over 300 participants. Incentives to join, besides the obvious of being able to get into those clothes you have been keeping around, there are more than $2,800 in prizes that a participant can win.

Mp3 players, athletic equipment, gift certificates, and many more great things will be given away to the winners.

What is the best part about completing the Vandal Fitness Challenge? It might just being saying good bye to those large shirt and pant sizes forever.

So a note to those who are participating, stick with it and remember you are not alone in your quest for a healthier you. Come April, with some consistency and a little hard work, this campus may just be a stronger, lighter, and most importantly, a little healthier.

Good luck to competitors.

2007 Idealist COOL Conference Application Due

CENTER FOR VOLUNTEERISM AND SOCIAL ACTION

You won’t want to miss this year’s COOL Idealist National Conference, which will host over 1,500 engaged college students, administrators, faculty, and others who are active in social change efforts for three days of provocative learning and idea exchange. The event, held March 22-25 at DePaul University in Chicago, will include forums and workshops on everything from leadership skills to career development to model campus programs from across the country, and networking with over 70 nonprofit organizations.

This year there will be more imagination based workshops and small group gatherings around various social action and interest topics with increased networking opportunities for all attendees.

For more information on forums and the conference please visit http://www.idealist.org.

ASUI Center for Volunteerism & Social Action is pleased to announce that we will financially support up to five undergraduate students to attend this conference. Students who have a strong history of community involvement and leadership as well as a commitment to future service endeavors and involvement at the University of Idaho are encouraged to apply.

Past conference attendees have included students involved in the residence halls, Greek community, student government, student clubs, and from a variety of different majors and walks of life.

Upon returning to campus, each of these students brought innovative ideas, valuable information, and an incredible enthusiasm for volunteerism and social action, and service oriented leadership back to the University and Moscow communities.

This year’s attendees are expected to do the same and may be asked to make presentations on campus about information they learn at this year’s conference. Students with at least one year at the UI remaining will receive priority consideration.

Please complete the attached application by February 9th, 2007 and deliver it to the ASUI Volunteer Center by 4pm (Room 301, Commons) if you are interested in attending the 2007 National COOL Idealist Conference.

Students who are not selected are encouraged to solicit financial support from their clubs and organizations.

If you have any questions or concerns, please contact Steve Janowiak at 5-6331 or Shannon Hohl in the ASUI Volunteer Center at 5-9442.

Shogo design our 2006-2007 Academic Planners and now he is competing for the coveted cash prize. All you have to do is vote, vote, vote.

In the first round of the three round event, Maryville University is outvoting Idaho students 52-48 percent. Ota’s design is the obvious champion so get online and vote by Feb. 9.

Go to www.schooldatebooks.com and click Cover Design contest in the left column.

Go to Round 3 of College/University school level and Shogo’s design is in group three. Vote as many times as you want to ensure the UI design is the winner. Happy Voting!

Cinema at the SUB

Babel
February 2-3
Three intertwining and tragic stories are set in Morocco, Tunisia, Mexico and Japan. A series of unintended consequences lead the shooting of an American wife and an ill fated trip to Tijuana in this film that explores terrorism, immigration and American entitlement.

In English, Spanish, Arabic, Japanese and French with English subtitles "Showing only at 7 p.m. due to length.

50 Years Later
February 5 & 6
Until lions tell their story, the tale of the hunt will always glory the hunter. Filmed in five continents, and over twenty countries, 50 YEARS LATER engages the authentic retrospective voices, told from the African vantage-point of those whom history has sought to silence by examining the collective atrocities that uprooted Africans from their culture and homeland.

UK / USA: English Director: Owen Alik Shahadah

Catch a Fire
February 7-8
Patrick Chamusso is a sweet-natured South African with a beautiful family and a better-than-average life who remains outside of the political world that surrounds him. However, due to unexpected circumstances he finds himself becoming a freedom fighter during Apartheid who carries out solo attacks against the regime.

Black History Month Film

When We Were Kings

February 9-10
The epic 1974 heavyweight championship fight between Muhammad Ali and George Foreman in Africa provides the basis for this documentary. Assembled from over 250 hours of footage, WHEN WE WERE KINGS focuses on the controversial life and meteoric rise of Ali as well as other events leading up to the well-publicized "Rumble In The Jungle."

The Tiger And The Snow

February 12 & 13
A story of unconditional love and poetry. Soon after the start of hostilities in Iraq, Rome-based lovestruck poet and lecturer Attilio (Academy Award winner Roberto Benigni, LIFE IS BEAUTIFUL) heads to Baghdad where he learns from his friend, Iraqi poet Faud (Jen Reno), that the woman he loves has been critically injured in a bomb explosion.

Italy: Arabic/English/Italian/English subtitles

Director: Roberto Benigni

Mail Order Wife

February 14-15
This mockumentary finds filmmaker Andrew Gurland seeking to pay someone to order an Asian bride as long as he gets to film the story. The slovenly Adrian is happy to comply and when Lichi arrives he treats her more as the hired help than a spouse. Andrew gets angry at his treatment of Lichi and when he himself fails for all his objectivity in his film goes out the window.

Valentine's Day Film
