Something like home

By travis roberts argonaut

Richard drives a Buick, it’s not much to look at, but it works. The truck is equipped with all of his books and belongings. He keeps his clothes behind the driver’s seat, along with the next two books he plans to read. On the passenger side, the front seat is ripped and stained, and Richard sits on it, wearing a sweatshirt he bought at a thrift store. The seat supports a foam mattress. Richard sleeps here.

Richard has asked to remain anonymous because at his age and family knows him as his car. In fact, only about 20 people at the University of Idaho, where Richard is a full-time student, know of him. One of the biggest stories of living day-to-day, he says, has been the fear. His parents, who are not aware of his situation, cannot be reached, and he avoids questions from acquaintances by not getting specific, just saying he lives over the other side of town. “I’d rather be telling the truth, but it’s too...shocking that I live in my car for most people. Like, they can’t deal with it.” Richard says. “It’s normal. I know that. I know it’s not accepted. I don’t give a f*ck, but it’s true. Richard’s situation is not unique. Though there is no way to identify them, there are those at UI who are homeless or without a traditional home during their time at college. It is not homelessness in the usual sense — it is not due to circumstances that would make it acceptable to bring a homeless student only at — but it is a way of life for some students.

State police, a psychologist at UI’s Counseling and Testing Center, have been aware of the situation throughout the years. Some have stayed in hotels, others were sleeping on friends’ floors. Most students were between the ages of 18 and 22. None of them came to the CTC because they were homeless — rather, they were dealing with related problems, such as stress.

This says some of the blame associated with homelessness is one of the greatest challenges a homeless student must face.

“arrested? He’s in jail,” a friend once said. “That’s the original thing. It was just basic, he’s in jail.”

Richard’s friend, a dust-to-dust boyfriend who was arrested in a trendiness arrest at 833-756.

The decision

At the end of the 2006 spring semester, Justin Lewis announced his run. Lewis, who received a law degree from Gonzaga University, decided to run for the position of president of the student body. Lewis’s campaign was focused on the issue of homelessness and the need for a campus-wide solution to the problem. He believed that by addressing this issue, he could make the university more inclusive and accessible to all students.

Undergraduate students interested in running for ASUI’s spring presidential and vice presidential elections must collect 25 undergraduate petition signatures, while students running for the vice presidential and presidential ticket must collect 55 signatures. Candidates will also be able to file a biography about themselves that will appear on their campaign website.

ASU current student attorney Becky Allen said the time line is to bring more attention to the spring election season.

We hope to use them like the Argonaut and KUSC, and bring in local media for the election...
When Richard realized that living in his car was going to be temporary, he made a few plans. He had been saving money for his new apartment, and he used that to buy some clothes and a few personal items. He also bought a TV and a few books to keep his mind occupied. When he moved into his new apartment, he set up a small corner as his kitchen and living room. He was able to find a part-time job, and he started saving money to buy a bigger apartment.

Richard's mom has been helping him settle into his new apartment. She cleaned his apartment for him, and she even helped him buy some basic household items. She also taught him how to cook simple meals. Richard is grateful for his mom's help, and he is determined to make a better life for himself.

Richard is an avid reader, and he often spends his free time reading. He has a small library of books that he has collected over the years. He is a member of a local book club, and he enjoys discussing books with other members. Richard is also a fan of movies, and he plans to buy a DVD player and some movies to enjoy in his new apartment.

Richard's apartment is not very large, but it is clean and comfortable. He is happy with his new life, and he is looking forward to the future.
Grant promotes paper conservation

When Kimberly Higgs was in the library hunting students who were printing pages three at a time, “It’s a waste of paper,” she said. Higgs and others have been working for a while to make a difference.

"It’s a waste of paper," Higgs said. "And people don’t know how to print PowerPoint (2006), so they really waste a lot of money." Higgs decided to help other students make more use of the space, especially the students who were printing pages more than one at a time.

"We decided to help other students use the space more effectively, especially the students who were printing pages more than one at a time," Higgs said. "By teaching them how to print PowerPoint (2006), we can reduce the amount of paper used by 80 percent."

Best Raider Competition aims to test cadets’ physical, mental strength

From start to finish and even in between, senior cadets leave the Army ROTC course behind. The competition is open to be a 24-hour event. They are not required to be physical and mental strength, but it is important for cadets to be prepared for college life.

"To be a successful cadet, you need to be prepared for college life," said Captain Rick Stein, who helped run the event. "The competition pushes the cadets to go further than they expect. Once they reach the point where they think they cannot go any further, they reach that point and then they know that they can go further." The officers are looking for.

"Military is about a team," Stein said.

Instead of competing alone, cadets were paired with other cadets. Officers, who were not required to be physical and mental strength, but it is important for cadets to be prepared for college life.

Cookie Monster gave positive message to kids

In recent years there have been growing concerns over our children’s exposure to the American Idol factor and habits and mistaken stems from such mass media personalities. It’s that we should regulate these factors instead of the actual causes of the problem. The change to Cookie Monster is only one of the recent changes that have been made. In the past Cookie monster has always been dressed up in a colorful poppin purse and wearing a green t-shirt. This new look makes it a little harder to see the bug. The Cookie monster is now more of a poppin purse and it is more difficult to see the bug. The Cookie monster is now more of a poppin purse and it is more difficult to see the bug.

The paintings in Moscow were almost always available. She'd be standing in the street, a girl in a short skirt or a stage to give the performance.

Vasilevsky, however, said that the paintings were so expensive that she couldn't afford to buy them. "I'm just trying to give the audience a visual treat," he said. "I'm not asking for them to buy anything."

Terry Smith, the director of the Moscow Dance Theatre, added that the paintings were also meant to be an audiovisual experience. "When you see the paintings, you can hear the music and feel the rhythm," she said. "It's a total experience."
A new director for the Heart of the Arts

Laura Loggiola Addison

Moscow, known as the Heart of the Arts, has been looking for a month now for a new director. Kathryn Burns has been the interim director for two years, and many are wondering when the Moscow art community will see the new director they have been waiting for.

Kathryn Burns is Moscow’s new director, as she took over the position in February after Hands left the position after 15 years. Burns has been working in the arts sector for over 10 years, and she is excited to bring new ideas and programs to Moscow.

Burns has been involved in the arts for over a decade, and she is looking forward to working with the Moscow art community. She is excited to bring new programming and events to the city, and she is looking forward to working with the community to make sure the arts continue to thrive in Moscow.

Burns is a graduate of the University of Idaho, where she received a degree in art history. She has worked in the arts sector for over 10 years, and she is excited to bring new ideas and programs to Moscow.

I am looking forward to working with the community to make sure the arts continue to thrive in Moscow. We have a lot of great artists and programs here, and I want to make sure that they continue to thrive.

John Smith
Director, Moscow Art Center

Burns will be responsible for overseeing all aspects of the Moscow Art Center, including programming, events, and community outreach. She will also be working with local artists and organizations to bring new programming and events to the city.

300 MOVIE

Studying the movie "300" can be a great way to understand some of the primary themes that are explored in ancient Greek culture. The movie is a great example of how literature and film can be used to explore the human experience.

The movie is set in ancient Greece during the Persian Wars and follows a group of Greek soldiers who are defending their city against a much larger and more powerful Persian army.

Students learn Indian culture

By Isabella Abburi, Staff Writer

The University of Idaho is a cultural melting pot populated with students from all over the world. Many students come to Idaho from India, which is a large and diverse country. Within India, there exists a multitude of different cultures, each with its own unique traditions and customs. Among these cultures, the Indian culture stands out as one of the most vibrant and dynamic.

Indian culture is deeply rooted in tradition and history. The country has a rich history dating back thousands of years, with ancient civilizations like the Indus Valley Civilization and the Mauryan Empire laying the foundation for modern Indian culture. This heritage is reflected in the country's art, music, dance, and cuisine.

Music is an integral part of Indian culture, with a wide variety of musical traditions. Classical Indian music, with its intricate rhythms and melodies, is considered one of the most sophisticated musical systems in the world. Traditional Indian dance forms, such as Bharatanatyam and Kathak, are also highly respected and widely practiced.

Cuisine is another important aspect of Indian culture. Indian food is known for its bold flavors and diverse ingredients. Dishes like curries,Dal, and Samosas are just a few examples of the delicious cuisine that can be found in India.

In addition to music and food, Indian culture is also known for its rich literary tradition. The country has produced some of the greatest writers and thinkers in the world, including the likes of Rabindranath Tagore and Mohandas Gandhi. Indian literature spans a wide range of genres, from epic poetry to satirical essays.

The Indian culture is also characterized by a strong sense of community. The people of India are known for their hospitality and warmth, and the country has a long history of hosting and welcoming visitors from all over the world.

In conclusion, Indian culture is a rich and diverse tradition that is deeply embedded in the history and heritage of the country. It is a culture that is loved and respected by millions of people around the world, and it continues to inspire and influence cultures in countless ways.

Viacom files suit against Google over YouTube

By Michael Miles, Staff Writer

YouTube received its first major attack from big media last week when conglomerate Viacom announced that it has used Google for billions in damages from copyright violations.

"YouTube is a significant, profitable organization that has built a lucrative business out of exploiting the creative work of others," said Al Gore, YouTube's co-founder and CEO. "It's time for YouTube to be held accountable for its actions.

"Viacom is dedicated to protecting the rights of our content creators," said Viacom's CEO, Bob Bakish. "We believe that YouTube's failure to remove infringing content is a violation of the law.

"We're taking this to court," said Bakish. "Viacom will not let its creative works be used without proper compensation.

"We're not the only ones who are concerned about this," said Hurricane Hoffman, a leading copyright attorney. "This is a clear example of how the digital age is changing the traditional copyright landscape.

"We're looking forward to a fair trial," said Hoffman. "We believe that Viacom is entitled to compensation for the use of its content.

"Viacom is committed to protecting its intellectual property rights," said Bakish. "We will not tolerate the theft of our content.

"This case is a test of the future of copyright law," said Hoffman. "We believe that Viacom will prevail in court.

"We're confident that the court will agree with us," said Bakish. "We believe that Viacom is entitled to compensation for the use of its content.

Three Vandals earn All-American honors in track and field

UI women's basketball is starting the rebuilding process again after two freshman receive conference awards

By J.D. Cone

The University of Idaho women's basketball team had the last game of their season last Thursday night at D. and C. Gymnasium. This year's team had several new faces, and they continued to play until the final game.

Also, the Vandals had two sections led by Head Coach Mike Divilbiss. The first section was the freshman team, and the second section was the varsity team.

For next year, the Vandals have so far signed transfer student, Natalie Westbrooks, from Concordia University at Portland. As a junior at Prairie High School, Westbrooks was part of the 1985-86 WIAA 4A State Tournament championship game. The team finished the season with a third place finish and a second place finish in the tournament.

Cameron was a big part of the team's success as he was the leading scorer and rebounder in every tournament game.

"Both of them worked hard this year and improved a great deal. They're very deserving. They give us a good foundation to build on," said Mike Divilbiss.
