A record 8,100 students are expected to register by Monday to determine 10-day student enrollment numbers for the University of Idaho. This represents an increase in enrollments for the past several years.

Student enrollment at the Moscow campus this fall is projected to be 21,580 students, up by 1.4 percent in the same time period. This increase represents an increase of about 11,000 students, and continuing efforts to increase enrollment.

While the university has the lowest graduation rate in the state for seven years, the trend is upward.

Getting it off your chest

We all have them, those parts on our bodies that we don’t always pay attention to. They’ve been there since we were born, but we don’t always think about them. We don’t pay attention to them because we don’t think anything about nipples.

Nipples are very sensitive parts of the body and can give a lot of information to a person, both in terms of health and emotion. So if you are being afraid of your nipples, or if you feel a nipple-related pain or swelling, you should be concerned.

We explore the role of nipples, especially during breastfeeding, and how to manage nipples.

Ordinance seeks to break up fighting in Pullman

Greg Connolly / Argonaut

Pullman officials have crafted a new city ordinance that may help cut down on fights in the college town.

The ordinance, drafted by Police Chief Ted Wastbury, would fine anyone involved in mutual combat $500 for a first offense and $700 for a second offense.

The ordinance was presented at the city council's Aug. 23 meeting. Wastbury expects the city attorney's office to be finished with the final draft of the ordinance sometime this year. Because Washington laws are vague on the issue of fighting, Pullman needed to draft a more specific ordinance, Wastbury said.

The number of fights in Pullman is on the rise, Tennant said. All of Pullman's police officers support the proposed ordinance and believe the city will benefit to stay down on the number of fights.

"Just with an ordinance, in those cases where you won't get a good criminal case, we help to create a more peaceful Pullman where you don't fight," Tennant said. Citations issued as a result of the proposed ordinance would appear as civil infractions instead of a misdemeanor.

cases of assaults were filed with the Pullman Police Department. Wastbury hopes that with the ordinance in place, people make people think twice about fighting.

"If we can constructively use our city resources, like the Chris Tennant of the Pullman Police Department, as the last sore, a criminal case must be, unless people now fight in Pullman. This is obvious because the burden of proof is on the defender. If a fine is not paid, Wastbury said, police officers are not allowed to make a criminal charge.

"If at this time the Idaho statutes are applicable to the disorderly conduct that we do have in the Washington statutes," said Mayor Assistant Chief of Police David Duke. There has been no direction by the city council on the time period for the ordinance like the five-year.

Senate REPORT

Presidential communications (RCIT) President Jon Shirley gave Larry the Looping to Ben. Dean Tennyson, acting for the Senate, and Bill Dickerson, the Senate Majority Leader, introduced the Cite D'Alene senate re- treat. He recommended using the ASU programming budget instead of the general presidential reserve for the BPF-24.

Unlimited business.

BPF-24, an act appointing the present ASU president as ASU director of sustainability, went to Senate Government Operations and Appointments.

BPF-25, an act appointing Jeffs Nelson to the position of ASU director of diversity and affi- liation, was sent to Senate Government Operations and Appointments.

BPF-26, an act appointing Danae Nielsen to the position of ASU president, went to Senate Government Operations and Appointments.

BPF-27, an act naming Zachary Anthony to the position of ASU vice president adjut- ant, was sent to Senate Government Operations and Appointments.

BPF-22, an act appointing a member of the ASU board of directors to the position of ASU director of academic and community affairs, was sent to Senate Government Operations and Appointments.

BPF-23, an act setting salaries for previously appointed ASU employees, passed, with funding, for the Darfur movie right and information session, was immediately considered and passed.

BPF-25, an act providing for the assignment of senators to bring groups, was immediate- ly considered and passed.

Funding available to promote diversity at UI

Jessica Molina / Argonaut

A year ago, senior Manuel Diaz, 4th from Bainbridge Island, came to the University of Idaho. As a student in the School of Business, Diaz began his journey here and soon wrote a proposal memorandums for a proposal for the National Association of Latino Americans and Students (NALAS) Latino Festival. He re- ceived the grant the next semester.

Like Diaz, individuals or groups of UI students, staff and faculty in Moscow and beyond can now write proposals, too.

The funding is made possible by the Idaho's Fulbright 2006-2007 Government Grant (DGOG) program.

The program provides grants for UI students, faculty, and institutions. The UI's diversity program is being funded for the first time, after receiving a $15,000 grant.

"I think the DGOG grant provides the ability to bring in more diversity," said Harvey said.

The grant has been able to fund several small activities, Harvey said. The digs help support diversity, Harvey said.

"Idaho has a great program," Diaz said.

Diaz also attended one of the great program, workshops to improve his proposal for this round he said, which will be for the same event.

"The DGOG program is a great program," Diaz said.

But the University of Idaho's director of diversity, the CMA director, was not the only one to be looking over the plan for the future.

The new plan, which was adopted by the Senate, was not developed for the University's diversity plan.

Bin Laden plans new video in advance of 9/11 anniversary

Associated Press
CAIRO, Egypt — Osama bin Laden will release a new video message advance of the 9th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, images of the terrorist mastermind in near-cliffhanger for the first time since he was first shown in a video in Dec. 2001.

First seen in 2001 when he was shown in a video released to the al-Fauj online, bin Laden has not been seen in a video since he was first shown in a video in Dec. 2001.

"They've always gone out of the way to commemorate (the attacks)," said Ben VENZKE, a security analyst.

NOAA scientists say their research affirms predictions of sea ice loss

Conservative Republicans are drooling over the prospects of a Thompson candidacy due to his Reagan-esque voice, which is what could be like that” speaking abilities. Which are just one of a dozen for a Thompson. Wade, gay marriage and “standing up for the little man” are being fought from that base. Everyone loves the “males” for a possible candidacy. Several months now. However, he has re- moved him and now with the other Republican frontrunners Bush and Edwards in almost every poll and not much sense a possible candidacy could come to light. Which is rather interesting since Guliani is far more a moderate in the world of men, such as abortion and same-sex marriage. This could imply a possibility of the Republican party between its more conservative and moderate wings might be breaking. However, in the revealing the Republican party could be in a good deal of hot water with a September 2008 polls around. The breaking point of most Republican candidates will likely be in the fall issue. The poll watching majority of Americans want the candidates to discuss issues. The Daily Show has accurately dubbed “Bush’s Potanna.” Most Republican candidates, certainly all of the front- runner, sound very hawkeyish with regard to their gay politics. It seems they aren’t getting the message that the country is no longer interested in foreign concern. They seem to have sole- ly domestic issues in mind. The Democrats don’t have any problems when it comes to gay, since technically it was a Republican war, even though several Democratic candidates voted for the war at the beginning. Not surprising at all in Hillary Clinton’s 20 point, or close to 20 point, lead over Barack Obama in almost every poll. The Clinton campaign will of course face a strong one, after all her husband was elected president twice, and the family probably knows the right people to call for this sort of thing. The Clinton campaign is a lot of an enigma. Obama is regularly criticized for not adequately funding what he stands for, or what he plans to do while in office. Which turns out to work well, since he can talk up mean votes are concerned about, without telling voters or finding that any policies that would be good for the country. However, his due is the polls in John Edwards. Edwards was the run- ning mate of John Kerry in 2004 and was seen as a moderate. What’s interesting about Edwards is his attention to detail. Talks about his pres- 2004’s race and policy points of the Democratic candidates. He is often compared to Robert Kennedy, as one of his goals is similar to our current president’s in America within 30 years. Unlike the other Democratic candidates that appeal universal, but elective, healthcare, Edwards is pushing his universal and mandatory healthcare. At first, this policy may seem a bit excessive, however it’s worth considering as ensuring universal coverage would have no gaps in the payment cycle within the healthcare system, reducing overall costs.

Nuart hosts free block party

Jason Hess Against

One to two thousand people are expected to fill the area between 3rd and 6th and B and N streets for a second block party on Main Street from 2-7 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 7.

The musical event will feature national and international bands from Tijuana, Ljubljana’s Slamen from Slovenia, Matt Klubstra from Nashville, Rock Storm from Düsseldorf, Germany and local artist Eric E. and The Clone Kaiser Band from Chicago.

All performances are free and begin at 7 p.m.

Event organizer and performer Eric Engerbretson said the Nuart began planning the event in January.

"The Nuart Theatre, located downtown, has live music venue featuring that sort of music," Engerbretson said.

Over 1,500 people have been invited to attend and all students and community members are invited to attend as well.

"We want everybody to come," he said.

The festival is entirely funded by donations and corporate sponsors. Although the performances are free, Engerbretson said the event will feature national and international acts.

"Every one of these acts have performed here before," Engerbretson said. "Most of these bands would be $15-$20 higher. This is a deal of a deal, musically.

He said the Nuart Block Party will be an annual event, and he wants to see the end result. There will not only be music, but there will be ramps set up for kids and regular performances by a magician.

"Sunrise Band is one of the music acts that will perform Sunday.

The group received national airplay on their first album. "The Farthest Place," is an acoustic single of the same name.

The band has a catchy, medium-paced modern rock sound.

The band just performed at Casino, Do. Ra. for Disney's "Night on Jay."

The Nuart will be hosting a block party in downtown Moscow on Sunday night, but will be on thePalace stage. "They played a concert in Eastern Idaho last summer, it turned out to be a big show," said band manager Eric E.

He said the band will be traveling, but is looking forward to coming to Moscow for the first time.

"They are super excited about being here," Engerbretson said.

They will be playing some new material from their album that is coming out in February, creating an opportunity for students to hear new tunes before they're released.

Barchus lecture and art at McConnell Mansion

Kevie Otzenberger Against

The Lewis County Historical Society will open their second exhibition on regional landscape artist Eliza Barchus at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 8, at the McConnell Mansion, 11th and South A streets.

Thirty years ago, Eliza Barchus was hosting the exhibit, "The Western Landscape of Idaho," from 1967-1968. Since then, this will be the first time Dan Dunn, 20-some years by Barchus and "I think she was a very good artist who didn't necessarily get the credit she deserved when she was actually painting," Dunn said. "I'm happy to show off what she did."

Dunn has been a great at the exhibit in Moscow before, but has not yet gotten a formal presentation.

"Thirty years ago, Dunn first noticed Barchus' work on the front of an address book that had been on display at the 1935 Centennial Exposition in Portland, Oregon.

"She turned me on to Eliza Barchus," Dunn said.

He has been collecting Barchus' original works from around the country. Dunn has several in his estate.

Crowds gather to mourn Pavarotti

Cullen Barry

MILAN — Hundreds of people gathered Thursday in Milan’s main piazza to pay final respects to Luciano Pavarotti, whose vibrant high Cs and ebullient showmanship made him the most beloved and celebrated tenor of his time.

The 71-year-old’s unexpected death, following a battle with pancreatic cancer, has spread shock and mourning throughout the world. His fans, from the smallest opera houses to the biggest concert halls, have been left reeling from the sudden loss of a major figure in the world of opera.

Among the attendees were fellow opera stars such as Plácido Domingo and Luciano Pavarotti’s own daughter, typing in her notes. Terni, was keen on opera and had a talent for singing.

Pavarotti was known as the "King of the High Cs" for his ability to hit the top notes. The Verdi tenor emerged from humble beginnings, his warm baritone voice and intense stage presence made him a phenomenon.

Within hours Pavarotti’s death, Moderna authorities had posted information on the city’s website and theINIolated island into a vibrant cultural center. Pavarotti’s voice was a gift to the world of opera, and his influence will be felt for generations to come.

NEW YORK — The Bedigley Mischka spring collection offers a gentle mix of town and country. The lineup that has been a fashion favorite for years is featuring a parade of Bagel Mischka pants, aprons, skirts, bags, sunglasses, sandals, and dresses. Bagel even shows bags down the runway at the largest venue of the season, the New York Fashion Week Thursday.

"That was glamorous enough to wear to a date. It really was a modern way for a woman to wear a piece of clothing," Bagel said.

University of Idaho opens Athletic Hall of Fame

Hugh James

Friday will mark the opening of the University of Idaho's Athletic Hall of Fame. All former student-athletes and members of the hall of fame cannot be present for the formal event, but they will be included on Friday, making it a memorable event that will be enjoyed by all.

The hall of fame has been in the air for some time. Last year a committee was formed to create the University of Idaho Hall of Fame. It has been working throughout the year to create the new Athletic Hall of Fame.

The athletic department is very excited to have a forum where they can celebrate the achievements of their athletes.

"It's wonderful to finally be able to recognize all of these people for their great accomplishments," Hall of Fame board member Bobby Paul said.

When discussing their inducements, people want to be sure to include all of the individuals from each of the university's various sports, even those that no longer exist like tennis and men's swimming.

Among these inducements are Marchee Taylor and Guy Webster, for whom Idaho's athletic field is named — and Dan O'Farrell, their last head basketball coach.

The news comes at a time when more and more universities are releasing the names of their basketball and football teams.

In regards to the new Hall of Fame inductions, Merri Cozzetto said, "They will be attended, as is the tradition for the hall of fame. Tickets are $150 for singles and $250 per couple.
