Moms checking in

Every year moms flock to campus to see what their students have been up to.

Meagan Roberts

Moms’ Weekend is an opportunity for parents to see what their students are up to and what college life is all about. John Hileman, associate director of University Communications, said the event was first held at the beginning of the 1990s. In the late 1990s the annual Moms’ Weekend event was changed to Parents’ Weekend.

“The lady had Dad’s Weekend in the fall, and the moms could attend Parents’ Weekend in the spring. They found that a lot of Idaho parents were too busy in the fall to make it to campus, so we changed the event.” Hileman said.

In the mid-1990s, Parents’ Weekend was changed back to Moms’ Weekend, and since then, UI families have been traveling each year to visit their students on campus.

“It’s a unique opportunity for moms to come and experience what students are going through,” Hileman said. “They can see where they live, where they go to class, which friends they have and what student life is like.”

Hileman said that he tracks where each student’s parents register and that it’s pretty evenly split between Greek parents, incidence hall parents and off-campus parents. However, while around 500 parents will register for Moms’ Weekend through the Alumni Office, thousands of grandparents come up each year.

Lauren Andrews, who is in charge of marketing and an assistant for University Residence, said that there are two main events in the residence halls.

“Last year we had a string quartet come and play for them and it’s a really nice time for the residents to sit down with their moms and dad.”

The other event is the Goldin Dinner, an award given to residence hall staff that promotes and enhances campus community.

With the Golden taxis, students within the residence halls are nominated by their fellow residents for different awards,” Andrews said. “It’s a formal event and it’s next to the Goldin Dinner.”

SBOE approves preliminary proposal

On Thursday, the University of Idaho Board of Education and received approval for the proposed extension of the College of Law.

The board voted to grant the University of Idaho board of trustees the authority to implement a proposal extending the College of Law.

The board received a series of comments regarding the proposal including how resources between the two locations would be allocated. According to Dan Bartlett, dean of the college of law, the Boise law school would be an extension of the UI, which the Moscow location would remain separate.

Beaver stadium was the site of a united campus,” he said. It was the original home of the university that upon approval, the Boise location would be developed as soon as possible with operations beginning as early as fall 2004. The board approved the proposal, “...the request by the University of Idaho for authority to proceed with implementation planning for the two locations concept, including operating budget, capital budget, facility needs and analysis, curriculum and an implementation timeline.” The university will return to the board for review and approval of an implementation plan when it is fully developed.

President Tom Alwin and the Board of Trustees are extremely pleased with the first step on the proposal and said the university wanted to do whatever necessary was necessary to make the proposal happen.

“We’re looking for ways that the concept has viability in your minds. That was the intent,” he said.

The College of Law has received multiple requests and discussions have been held with the Boise State University Division of Equity.

You may think I gave up on our practical joke war last year. But see this? It's odorless, tasteless, and hitches into topworms.

The worst of all the shots

Today I really want to talk about diseases. There is no need for this dinner today, except for that it stands fun and I want to. The one I finally want to talk about also involves something else, but not get 'Cold Comfort Food of Approval.' I also did not work, while for the price or the overall protection, I talk today about HPV.

University facilitates open discussion on diversity issues

Lisa Shepherd, Argus

When Kurt Quinn, a Regent faculty member, said that an international graduate student from China used to go by "Don Quixote" in the Commons saying that all immigrants should be treated as "less than human," he said, "It's not as if one got up and addressed them or even said, this is what you can say.

"It's obviously a61 discussion on diversity on campus, but it's surprisingly the way the university is trying to deal with things," Quinn said.

"I haven't yet thought about what I would say on this subject," Quinn said. "Diversity is an important thing for the campus, but it's not a black and white issue.

The author of "Diversity in the First-Year Classroom" is working with the United States Department of Education on the issue of diversity in higher education.

Kendall is quoted on the importance of providing an environment that is free from discrimination and in which students are encouraged to participate in civil dialogue.

"Kendall is a leader in the field of diversity and equity in higher education," said Quinn. "She is a great source of information and advice for those who are interested in this topic."
Chef prepares more than good nutrition

Relocating to a city across the country sounds like a big change for anyone. Mary Abele, executive chef at the Wallace Food Court, known by Bob's, did just that. Abele and her husband, Ed, made the move to 129-mile commute from their home in Pocatello, Idaho, to Boise last month, so that Abele could begin work at Bob's on March 1.

Joining Abele on Friday and Abele started in the food court last week serving several courses of prospective students, parents and actual students. "I haven't been screaming yet," she said.

An executive chef, Abele is in charge of the kitchen. In addition to the things Abele said she owns general food preparation (she has 25 years of experience), her main focus is on making sure that the fewest ingredients are used while making sure the menu is cost-effective and accessible, and then we move to something new until everything runs smoothly, Abele said.

The Wallace Food Court, said Abele, has been a place of opportunity for the many staff on the staff. "They are amazing." Abele also said that the quality of the food is high.

"According to Christian Steinf, a cook who works under Abele, "Secretary made up the menu ourselves that is well-organized and has items that are very important." The food was then presented to the people in the kitchen. "We kind of like the idea," he said.

Abele instituted the daily preparation of meat and produce, and within a week, she said he pushed to make it as much as possible and when implementing changes, such as the menus in or eliminating items, it means the menu must be current and accessible, and waits to move on to something new.

Portland, Ore., intends to move forward with its plans to open a law school in 2009. The law school is one of the many new programs that will be offered at Portland State University (PSU).

The board of regents, a private school, approved the new programs in May at the request of the school's board of trustees.

The $80 million project will be housed in a new building on the university's downtown campus and will include law classrooms, a law library, a law clinic and a law school bookstore.

The rentals will be open at 9 a.m. on March 29.

Donating blood cells not only benefits humanity, but can prove posthumous as well.

"Each donation is $30. If you get the second donation for being a donor, it's free," he said.

Donors are required to go through a process to ensure the safety of the recipient and quality of plasma. A potential donor must be between 16 and 56. There are also screening requirements, such as not being pregnant or postpartum, and not smoking in the past 6 months. The process includes a pre-donation questionnaire, a pre-donation test, and a no-drug test.

Mikkelsen explained the donation procedure is performed at the clinic itself and although it's simple, it's still a medical procedure.

"There are a lot of things that can go wrong," he said. "The tissue is separated and every blood sample is tested for every possible disease that can be transmitted through blood."

Mikkelsen said the donors are required to have a photo ID and a driver's license to confirm their identity. Additionally, donors must be at least 17 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds. "We also require that donors are in good health, have a heart rate between 60 and 100 beats per minute, and have no history of heart disease, high blood pressure, or any other medical conditions," he said.

I deserve your money more than you think. Why?

Money has value. This may seem like an obvious statement, but the way people think and talk about money often makes it seem otherwise. Money, in the form of bills or coins, is readily available. People are always aware of how much money they have. It's not unusual to see people keep up with the latest in money-saving tips or to have a change jar filled with coins. Money is easy to spend or donate. You can use money to buy almost anything you want, from groceries to luxury items. But did you ever think about the value of money? Money is more than just a means of exchange; it is a representation of our society's economic system.

Money is used to buy goods and services, which are essential to our daily lives. Without money, it would be difficult to buy food, shelter, or clothing. Money is also used to create wealth, which is necessary for economic growth and development. Money has the ability to stimulate and stabilize economies, providing an incentive for businesses to invest and create jobs. Money also plays a role in economic inequality, as those with greater access to money tend to have better opportunities for education, housing, and healthcare. Money is a powerful tool that can be used to achieve positive outcomes for society.

It's time we started thinking about the value of money more seriously. Let's recognize its importance and respect it as the tool it truly is. We should all be grateful for the opportunities it provides, and we should use it wisely to make our society a better place for everyone.

Smoke if you got it

Saturday is Hempfest in Moscow and to many of you this is a day of prosperity and fun. But there will be some who will use marijuana. And it should be legal.

Some people need to just chill out and smoke a joint. Marijuana is not cocaine, heroin or meth. One pull on a joint will not kill you or make you an addict. Yes, they've never done it, but don't believe it. They are just too afraid of the law.

Medicinal marijuana support is not supported by the national afraid of the law. It has never been shown to be addictive. It is a drug that is not a drug to many people.

Not. So. Here's your chance to show up Hempfest in Moscow.

This doesn't sound like a choice. It sounds like a demand. It's a demand that you will be watched. It's a demand that you will be watched. You should not be able to go to a store and buy it. You should not be able to go to a store and buy it. You should not be able to go to a store and buy it. You should not be able to go to a store and buy it. You should not be able to go to a store and buy it.

This is not something that should be done. This is not something that should be done. This is not something that should be done.

Plan to be here on Saturday. The 4/20 celebration is going to be huge.

Tiffiny Campbell

'The Monsters' are the bad guys. 'Spaghetti Monster' is the good guy. They're good guys.

The Monsters, or "Spaghetti Monster," are the bad guys and are the subject of the movie "Spaghetti Monster.

Spaghetti Monster is a character from a comic book series created by Mike Bordin, former drummer for the band "Monster." The story is about a group of high school students who are forced to compete in a "Spaghetti Monster" tournament.

The monsters are portrayed as evil and dangerous, while Spaghetti Monster is portrayed as a strong and intelligent character who is able to defeat them. The comic book series has been popular among teenagers for its action-packed storyline and appealing characters. The series has been praised for its creative use of spaghetti as a weapon and its humorous take on classic monster movies.

Rock star fans can't replace policies

McGea tried to bring in the crowd, and Obama has it. McCain is one of the few who have a chance at big crowds on this campaign trail. He has been criticized for his lack of a strong presence on television and radio, but he has improved in recent weeks.

One argument is that these debates allow the candidates to respond to each other and open up the conversation to the public. However, it can be difficult to gauge the effectiveness of these debates and determine their impact.

The goal of the debates is to provide a forum for the candidates to present their policies and arguments. However, many people question the effectiveness of these debates and wonder if they are truly making a difference.

Overall, the debates are a valuable part of the campaign process, but they are not the only factor that will influence the outcome of the election. Other factors, such as advertising, fundraising, and grassroots organizing, will also play a role in determining the winner.

Dance Off-Hand opens
dance to community

Sydney Boyd

The bi-annual Dance Off-Hand Concert gave everyone an opportunity to enjoy a fun and entertaining night out.

The concert happens every year and is a great way to support local artists and musicians. This year's event featured a variety of performers, including dancers, singers, and musicians.

Participants included a wide range of acts, from classical ballet to hip-hop.

Dancers and musicians from across the community came together to perform, creating a vibrant atmosphere.

The concert provided a platform for artists to showcase their talents and bring people together for a night of entertainment.

Barbershop choruses sing back into style

Singers from around the area come together for "Hey Look Me Over"

Makuen Robertson

Music will be in the air this Saturday as "Hey Look Me Over," which is a barbershop chorus from Spokane, marks the debut show for the Palouse Harmony Chorus.
The group, which was first created back in April 2007, is comprised of 17 men, ages 20 to 72.
John Mx, a member of the Palouse Harmony Chorus, said barbershop choruses in the country are a dying breed and since they’re found new—the group is something to be proud of.
He said the other groups from around the northwest that are coming to sing at the show are made up of barbershop choruses on their own, which is a rare gem.
Each group will sing two or three songs, it will be one of the many varied choirs we’ll be able to hear,” Mx said.
Since Brickleys, the pioneer of the Palouse Harmony Chorus, moved to Pullman last January and moved within a month or two he was going through withdrawal from his barbershop singing.
When Brickley lived in Boman, Montana, he was an active member of 16 barbershop choruses, but when Brickley moved to Clarkston shortly after moving to Pullman, last January, he said he was going through withdrawal from his barbershop singing.

Japanese designer adds recycling and polyester to luxury in 'ecological fur'

Yuri Kagayama

TOKYO — Building a runway spotlight at a Tokyo fashion show Monday was a case of lowly polyester sewn with chinchilla as an "ecological fur.

The case of chinchilla and other exotic species designed One line is made with chinchilla and silk from farms, but their fabric parts and lining are made of recycled polyester from Teppei Ltd., a Japanese plastic and pharmaceutical maker.

"We have not compromised quality," Imai said. "And so ing ecology with fur is not a conflict. We used chinchilla that has been used up. We're using the latest fur designer and use synthetic materials for fur. We can make something we should respect -- and returns to the earth."

‘88 Minutes’ is 107 minutes too long

Daniel Germain Associated Press

Bad news: Al Pacino’s serial-killer thriller “88 Minutes” is not a thriller, nor a Pacino film, nor a serial-killer thriller.

For the Past and the Future.

Pacino plays Caesar Granoff, a Ukrainian mob hit man who, while in Cuba, is approached by a CIA agent to kill an important Castro collaborator. Granoff’s one condition: He gets to choose the method.

When he arrives in Havana, a sumptuous mix of colonial architecture and tropical vegetation, he is told that the Cuban government has appointed him to assassinate the largest Cuban mob boss, the head of the Quito cartel.

Cuba, you see, has very different ideas about how to kill somebody: They blow him up.

Granoff is given his choice, and he opts to go car bomb.

They’re part of the family.

Granoff’s mentor is the parasitic Tito Orsoy (Jordi Mollà), the namesake of the former Cuban leader (and granoff’s old nemesis); and the Cuban government is the logan family of the Mob.

All tools. All weapons. All at once.

From milk jugs to explosives to car bombs to machine guns, the Cuba Mob is armed to the teeth.

They use everything, from dynamite to machine guns to rocket launchers.

Both the Cuban government and the Cuban mob are part of the family.

Granoff is a part of the family. He’s a part of the Cuban Mob.

He’s the Cuban Mob.

Granoff becomes a part of the Cuban Mob.

Recipe for Coffee Marinated Sirloin

JAMES H. BROWN
Associated Press

Though it calls for potent ingredients, this marinade imparts subtle Avery, almost creamy notes to the steak. If you want more taste, increase the seafood flakes. The acid in the coffee also helps tenderize the meat.

Coffee marinated sirloin

Serving: 4

Total Prep Time: 30 minutes (20 minutes active)

Sorrows: 4

2 tablespoons instant coffee
1 1/2 teaspoons minced garlic
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
4 boneless sirloin steaks, 1 1/4 pounds each
1/4 teaspoon seafood flakes
4 1/2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
4 1/2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
4 1/2 teaspoons sugar
4 1/2 cups water
1 teaspoon coarse salt

In a blender or food processor, combine the coffee, pepper flakes, peanut butter, honey and garlic. Add the 1/2 cup water and mix until smooth. Pour half of the marinade into a baking dish. Set the steaks in the baking dish, then pour the remaining marinade over the steaks. Cover the dish and refrigerate for 6 hours or overnight.

When ready to cook, preheat the broiler. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil. Drain the steaks and pat them dry. Pour the remaining marinade into the baking dish. Set the steaks in the baking dish, then pour the remaining marinade over the steaks. Cover the dish and refrigerate for 6 hours or overnight.

To grill the steaks, lightly oil the grill. Grill the steaks about 6 inches from the heat, for about 7 minutes per side. Serve immediately.

For a special touch, use food coloring to tint this glaze, which does not resemble powdered sugar. Any fond water coloring will do, but be careful not to overwork. If you prefer a translucent glaze, pour the powdered sugar into a jar. As it solidifies, sift the powdered sugar through a fine-mesh sieve to remove any lumps.

Women's tennis looks to close with a win

Scott Stone

The University of Idaho women's tennis team took to the courts Wednesday in hopes of adding a win against Hawaii, by their tune-up, the team has already played a total of five matches. Against Hawaii's 1-2-1 player, the match was over in just two hours.

"We started off really slow and didn't think we were moving as well, so they got a bit of an edge on us that first set," Stone said. "Then we started to come back in the second set and the match was over in just two hours.

Mahalo's struggle continued into the singles match with losses to Hawaii's 1-2 players. Justine Kishi defeated Kishio Kubo 6-4, 6-2.

Levi's have been the first set, when she didn't convert on a 40-15 lead, immediately. Berneman said. She was a great experience for me as a player, and that's what I'm thinking about. We need to keep things going.

It's time to grease your wheels and pull out your ride order for the first annual Moscow Bicycle Race Ride on April 28.

Whether you bring your mountain bike or your unicycle, this race is open to all ages and all types of tires. According to event organizer Roger Phipps, Moscow's University of Idaho graduate student in sports and recreation management, there is a need for your bike and the registration fee is free.

We expect to see all kinds of different bikes," Levente said. "If you want to come with a bike, they can come with a bike, or if you have a car, you can bring a car. And if you have a bike, you can bring a bike. Whatever it takes.

Who ya got for this year's MVP?

For those of us that pay attention to the NBA on a nightly basis or in the off-season, we'll know this season has been anything but; it's been one of the most exciting and unpredictable campaigns in NBA history.

The MVP award is the greatest individual honor one can receive in the NBA and to achieve it during a season is an achievement in itself. This season, there are a couple of very worthy candidates vying for the title. It's a two-horse race. Considencing the season's NBA has had this year in which players have been on a whole new level, I don't think you can go wrong with either candidate. And, according to my opinion, there are three candidates.

Kobe Bryant, Chris Paul, LeBron James and Kevin Garnett all appear to be those to tie the MVP award this season. Those all deserve it, in my opinion.

It's shocking that he's never won NBA MVP. Kobe is the type of player who could win every season if he chose to. His game is so good any good point guard in the league could

A familiar pair of Terri Johnson in victory lane at the Subway Fresh 410 Non-Winners final at California Speedway Saturday night. The Johnsons have taken home a couple of the Subway Fresh 410 Non-Winners trophies in each of the last three years.

The Subway Fresh 410 Non-Winners Series is a 410 sprint car series that races in California and the Southwest. The Johnsons have had success over the last three seasons, and are looking to repeat.

Terri Johnson is a two-time champion in the series, winning the title in 2006 and 2008. This season, she is currently sitting in second place in the championship standings with two races remaining in the season.

Johnson is a accomplished sprint car driver who has been competing in the sport for over 20 years. She has won numerous races and championships throughout her career.

Johnson's most recent championship came in 2006 when she won the Subway Fresh 410 Non-Winners Series. The following year, she continued her success and won the title again in 2008.

Johnson is not only a talented driver but also a valuable asset to her team. Her experience and knowledge are invaluable in ensuring the success of the team and their drivers.

Johnson's dedication to the sport and her success on the track have earned her the respect of her fellow drivers and fans alike. She continues to be a shining example of excellence in the world of sprint car racing.
Ochoa opens with 68 in bid for fourth win

Women's Golf

REUNION, Fla. — Lorena Ochoa got off to a solid start Thursday in her bid for her fourth consecutive victory and fifth in six starts this fall.

Playing for the fourth straight week, Ochoa shot a one-under-par 70 at the Garden Greens Finish. That dropped her three strokes behind Colette Pettersen and Terri Tesch, who each fired par 71. All three are members of the Symetra Tour, which has a total of 13 events on its schedule.

"I think I was playing solid today," Ochoa said. "I was a little bit nervous, hitting tees shots but in the middle of the fairway, the field wasn't chasing me.

"It's impossible, I guess, to be winning a tournament by seven shots the first day. You have to have a great start, a great round of golf to win any tournament," Ochoa said.

She also earned a seventh career LPGA title by winning the International three weeks ago and a tournament in her home country by winning the Nabihius Championship.

For whatever that’s worth, she said, she has eight events this year and is looking back to her first-preliminary rounds before missing the cut at the Nabiius.

John Force's midlife crisis at 330 mph

Associated Press

Driving a funny car at 330 mph might not be the best time for a mid-life crisis. It's not like John Force is a novice to this kind of thing. For 30 years, winning races and making deals has been Force's life. All of a sudden, he's trying to make it as just one of many.

"I can't partly like I used to, and some days I'm all over the track," Force said. "I used to love going to Budweiser and feel like I had used to be a choreographer, made a kind of guy and last night had a level of fun and a bunch of round for dinner."

But hey," he added, "I'm still around."

The golden days of racing might be in a few weeks. When Force left the SeaWorld dragway near Orlando, his brain idea "slow down," and the current rate of his body from being in a car and being shot for a solid week and still alive is the result of eight cars. This month, he's already driven nine.

Then the other side of his brain reminded Force he can't afford to take the chance to go to New York City with sponsors, advertisers and his publicity. So he's at least another four years. So it's off to the gym — something else Force didn't used to do. At 6-4, 223 pounds, Force is not a small guy.

Last month, Ashley Force, John's daughter, was another race car to prepare her to take over the family empire, went off the track in Salt Lake in Las Vegas. That was enough to shake up even more people's confidence in the Force family.

Ashley Force moaned Thursday.
"But Dad is the one who starts him, who's been there down every path. To do that you should tell me something right now."

"I'm going to go," Force said. "It's the only thing I can do."

"You want to go out and debrief on the race," Force said. "All the things in Force's universe that aren't running according to schedule are on the schedule, on the track."

The only things in Force's universe that aren't running according to schedule are the social life, the car. But still he's the man of the moment. That's how you go around the track.

"I am not the driver I used to be," Force said, "I know that, I'm in the gym most every morning, and I don't run and play hard, and if you put me a situation, I'm maybe 25 percent of what I used to be." Force said. "And believe me, I've already set up for every situation you could do it in.

"I feel like we can drive again," Force said. "I can deal with it.

The fire was fueled here since last August. He won 11 against Ashley and tried to put that in the finale at Dallas last season when the seasoned round car shut off their last battle with a championship at stake. "The more you dream, the more family Force's biggest support group.

All the time spent piling up these wins, Force believes the only one climbed to see. Safe enough, anyway, despite breaking too many windows on the car to come, to put Medlin and his daughter in these situations. That's the result of hard issues, there hasn't been a family in a national racing race for over 30 years. To see that Force has Force every day's saying no more.

"I can't tell you much work I do for this," Force said. "All the things I do, especially the bad things.

"It's still to come. I don't even know what they're telling about until someone else says it," Force said. "It's hard to see when the Champagne line comes up or the flag gets up."

And he's what you saw. It's hard to see someone else appreciate what you've got."

"You can't think that would be easy," Force said. "I have won 14 funny car championships, I sit in a car at one, but it's a different kind of" near Atlanta on April 27. Force was in a car, the air temperature was 1,000 mph and 1,000 mph wind, and the plan for his daughter Ashley, 22, was to see her win the NHRA Qualifying round.

"I don't know if that's never, never, never, but I don't know if you're appreciate what you've got."

"You can't think that would be easy," Force said. "I have won 14 funny car championships, I sit in a car at one, but it's a different kind of"

West Recruiting Roundup

Associated Press

Finally, the wild West playdinner is getting ready to end in a new round of college recruiting.

The best could be Styler Antronio, who starred in a four-state series in last year's recruiting season, and the team to watch for at the 2002 recruiting season is the New York Times.

The 2002 Recruiting Roundup, which was held in Chicago, was the first of its kind to be held in the city. The Times is known for its coverage of college Recruiting Roundups, and the event was attended by more than 5,000 people.

The Recruiting Roundup is an annual event that brings together college coaches and recruits from around the country. The event is held to help student-athletes find schools that are a good fit for their skills and interests.

The 2002 Recruiting Roundup included a panel discussion featuring college coaches from across the country. The panelists discussed the current state of college Recruiting Roundups and offered their insights on how to improve the recruiting process.

The event also featured a recruiting fair where student-athletes could meet with college coaches and learn more about the different schools that are interested in recruiting them.

The 2002 Recruiting Roundup was a success and helped to raise awareness of the importance of college Recruiting Roundups. The event has since become an annual tradition and is attended by thousands of student-athletes and college coaches each year.

the history of college Recruiting Roundups

The history of college Recruiting Roundups dates back to the early 1990s. At that time, the NCAA began to regulate the recruiting process in order to prevent abuses such as pay-to-play schemes.

As a result, college Recruiting Roundups were established as a way for student-athletes and college coaches to meet and discuss the recruiting process. The Recruiting Roundups were held in different cities across the country and were open to all college coaches and student-athletes.

Over the years, the Recruiting Roundups have grown in popularity and are now considered to be an integral part of the college Recruiting process. The events are held each year in different cities across the country and are attended by thousands of student-athletes and college coaches.
