Community and contact in-formation have led me to the University of Idaho, where I have opportunities to explore the world of Life on Wheels — an annual conference for RV owners and potential buyers that has been held at UI for more than 15 years.

The conference, which is estimated to have brought more than $150,000 to local businesses, began in May 1987, with 30 years of experience, said Peggy Waterman, co-founder and president of Life on Wheels. It is the brainchild of Caylynn Mier, who now is a vice-university programs office, where Waterman worked at the time, with the idea.

"We feel strongly that people who spend this much money for a trip have to know how to use it properly," Waterman said.

The conference is held in December on the university campus. Last year, Life on Wheels took place in Moscow. It has five national confer-mence locations each year, in Idaho, Pennsylvania,

The University of Idaho community can submit written proposals to take place on the University of Idaho campus, according to Murali H. Venkataraman, the dean of the College of Engineering and Computer Science. The book is currently owned and read

The open forum is unusual for the request for proposal, said Michael Hefley, assistant vice president for auxiliary services.

"We thought it was a great idea for them to be able to submit any type of submission, as long as it is appropriate," Hefley said about the company," he said.

Two events have been planned for the book. The first one is the First Annual Book Sale, which will be held on February 22nd, from 10 am to 4 pm. The second one is the Book Club Luncheon, which will be held on March 1st, from 12 pm to 1 pm.

The title of the book is "The Art of the Book" and it is a collection of essays on the history and culture of books. The book is edited by Michael Hefley and includes contributions from noted authors and scholars.

"We are excited to be able to bring these events to the University of Idaho community," said Hefley. "It is a great way to celebrate the beauty and importance of books."
So, at first I heard that prices for everything are going way up and I was, well, skeptical. Because I’m not about to sell my books before the price of a pound of lettuce goes up. I mean, it’s still more than 30 years since I sold any more books at the same time, as the economy really does stink. So I said, hey, if I could figure that out on my own than my major or Econ-majesty.

Honor code may have been stolen

San ANTONIO — Their goal was an honor code that discouraged cheating and plagiarism. Now, the university’s student magazine at the University of Texas at San Antonio appears to match another school’s code — without proper attribution.

The student currently in charge of the honor code project said it was an oversight, but church officials are discussing moving on to other projects. An assistant professor said they are looking into options for preventing Internet-accessible Web sites from cheating.

Edward Swenson, chair of the Religious Studies Department, said the code was written without consulting other sources.

"The idea is to present the Internet and all its evils to the students and their parents. It doesn’t mean I would be a book, try Google it and have it come.

Student, Alondra Thorsen said that when he took over the project a month ago he had been told to ignore the project participants, including several students who attended a conference five years ago put out by The Center for Academic Integrity.

Matzinger said the emphasis, which was on the many universities with Web sites, was the same as the one at the University of Texas.

The party was held by a high school student who wanted to show violin that teens don’t always drink alcohol at their parties. It has gained Denver’s attention.

"Until now, there was a party after a friend’s party, but there were no positions or alcohol. That’s because the keg contained root beer."

The root beer was served and it was okay for the teens to drink.

When the party was over, there was beer in the keg, and the teens were allowed to drink.

Senate may revive local-option tax bill

Associated Press

BOISE — In a late-hour session of political theater, Senate leaders said Monday they may revive a local-option tax bill to allow cities to raise sales taxes to build sports and entertainment projects including malls and stadiums.

The decision came hours after the Idaho Senate Government and Technology Committee voted 6-1 to kill the measure. It was one of about 10 controversial amendment-related constitutional amendments that were scheduled to be voted on during a special session of the Idaho Senate on Monday. The Senate authorized the special session Saturday to take effect this week.

Senate leaders, including Majority Leader Mike Mischler, D-Boise, and Assistant Majority Leader John Goedken, R-Blanchard, refused to confirm that key lawmakers were expected to vote on a local-option tax bill after the House rejected the proposal last week.

"We will still try to get the bill through," Senate Majority Leader Bob Goddard, R-Blanchard, said Monday. "We don't want to be in the position of totally losing the next election, which is what could happen if we lose on it."

Three of 10 amendments on the agenda, including Majority Leader Mike Mischler, D-Boise, and Assistant Majority Leader John Goedken, R-Blanchard, refused to confirm that key lawmakers were expected to vote on a local-option tax bill after the House rejected the proposal last week.

"We will still try to get the bill through," Senate Majority Leader Bob Goddard, R-Blanchard, said Monday. "We don't want to be in the position of totally losing the next election, which is what could happen if we lose on it."

Any loss could mean a local-option sales tax bill that has been in the House budget proposal would be defeated.

CELEBRATING THE CENTENNIAL OF EDWARD R. MURROW’S BIRTH
We want to be your bookstore...

Most students aren't aware of the options available to them when it comes to doing homework on their home computers versus a school lab. They often complain that they don't have the necessary software to complete course assignments. Computer use doesn't come pre-packaged with Microsoft Office or Photoshop.

This may be an exciting topic, but it's something students and professors should know about and address.

Squirrels

Wibbling by the Naches building I found a plastic Squeak-Yent someone had overlooked during their Easter egg hunt. I don't know how many of it is at play in pitch black, but a squirrel had chewed a hole in both ends but left the plastic scoop around a Lemon Flood Street. Good thing too, I love Lemon Heads — spicyly amped.

I am currently looking for an apartment to rent in Seattle and it's a little harder than I thought it would be. Most of the apartments I've seen in the last few years and I forget about the whole melting process. I think I'm going to start new by putting all my new resources into it. I have to live with plus or minus for a while at my apartment for a while, but it's better than doing nothing at the last minute.

Algae balls

I decided that I wanted a put this semester, but I didn't want anything I would likely kill. After a little research, I found the perfect solution — algae balls. Known as Marimo in their native Japan, these little balls are completely safe in the tank and free of any potentially harmful substances. They are easy to take care of and tend to look really nice. I made my tank much more aesthetically pleasing.

Alex

Counting down

With only 40 days and counting until graduation day, the time will until that point is bitterweet. I want to go out and do everything at once. I want to do as many things as possible with all my friends. I want to live every resource with the same enthusiasm that I found out in my youth. Yet with the onslaught of things to do before graduation, I had to stop and make it a priority.

I am now graduating in a little more than a month and I am no longer the person I was before walking at the commencement ceremony.

Christina N.

Random love

Last week I met reminded of how someone random acts of kindness are. They really can make the world a better place. So take time, enjoy your day and spread kindness. You may one day encounter a loving world fellow.

I've been hearing about cheating. I see it everywhere I go. Everyone is aware of it, but it's not talked about. I don't think I'm the only one, but it's better than doing nothing at the last minute.

Waging peace, not war

Three Cups of Tea

authors come to UI

David Oliver Relin is out to change the world's approach to war. Relin, award-winning author of the book Three Cups of Tea, is here to discuss his work.

Three Cups of Tea

Relin, an award-winning journalist, is known for his work that helps to improve the world. He writes about the differences between people and seeks to bring them together. By doing so, he wants to help end the violence that exists in the world.

Relin believes peace can only be achieved through understanding and dialogue. He has spent his career reporting on conflicts and international affairs, and he uses his work to bring people together.

He will be discussing his new book, Three Cups of Tea, and how it has impacted his life. The book tells the story of Greg Mortenson, a building contractor who built schools in a remote Pakistani village to help bring peace. The book has been translated into 40 languages and has sold over 10 million copies worldwide.

Relin is a former correspondent for The New York Times and has covered conflicts in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other parts of the world. He has received numerous awards for his work, including the Pulitzer Prize.

Relin will be joined by several other speakers who will discuss their experiences with peace and war. The event will be held at the University of Idaho's Moscow campus and is free to the public.

Relin encourages everyone to come and listen to his talk, as he believes that every person has the power to make a difference in the world. Whether it's through understanding others or simply being kind, every act of humanity can contribute to a more peaceful world.

Relin is an inspiration to all, and his message of peace should not be missed.

'Secret Sunshine' brings intensity to the screen

Pulito, Harvey

The film has received critical acclaim and has been nominated for several awards. It is a must-see for anyone who enjoys intense drama.

Finals Fest up in the air, again

Kevin Ottosen, Argus

Despite a student vote last month, alternative pop singer Sarah Bareilles will not be performing at this year's Finals that concert series.

Vandal Entertainment's Lecture and Performance Arts Chair Jennifer Mano said that roughly two months ago, Vandal Entertainment began reviewing options for music that could be performed at the events.

When they had settled on four major options, they decided to have a student vote.

The decision was between The Maine, Yelawolf, Coheed and Cambria, The Doomsday Hills.

By the time students had decided to bring Bareilles to campus, Vandal Entertainment contacted her booking agent to see if some of her original tour dates would work.

"We were always permitted that the information about us coming wasn't getting out as we were promised," said Student Activities Coordinator Dritina Kampa. "We still offered a large concert, we're just not negotiating.

The process of acquiring a performer involves the university making an offer through a middle agent, who then communicates it to the performer. If the performer accepts the offer, the agency draws up a contract and sends it to the university.

"I think we were more active than the agent thought," Mano said.

Mano said that a delay in communication between the university and the east coast agent was likely the reason that the booking opportunity was lost.

"Our voting process took a month, and I think that could have been done faster," Mano said. "We wanted to get the band that students really wanted."
Highland Players dive into theatre. A dirty time in Paris

Rylly's NETFLIX QUEUE

For the day or whatever, we've decided to dive into the wonderful world of Netflix and see what's currently being offered. This week, we'll be exploring the classic French film "La Boum" directed by Bertrand Blier.

"La Boum" is a coming-of-age film set in the 1980s that follows a group of teenagers as they navigate the complexities of relationships, friendship, and identity. The film is known for its naturalistic portrayal of the Parisian subculture and its depiction of the social dynamics and challenges faced by young people during that time.

The movie is particularly renowned for its depiction of the music scene of the 1980s, which was a significant factor in the film's cultural impact. The soundtrack features a mix of popular songs from the era, which adds to the film's authenticity and nostalgia.

Despite its age, "La Boum" remains fresh and relevant, capturing the essence of youth and the struggles that come with it. The film's themes of friendship, identity, and personal growth resonate with audiences worldwide. If you're a fan of classic French cinema or simply enjoy a good story, "La Boum" is definitely worth a watch.

The Vandals learned what it feels like to win again this weekend, as they went undefeated and picked up another Women’s Athletic Conference win.

The women sweep both Southern Utah University and Bethel College 7-0. They also picked up a victory over New Hampshire State in the opening round of the NCAA Regionals.

tied at 30. It was the victory in the doubles spot that defined the Vandal with a 6-4 win. Early in the season, the team was struggling with their doubles matches in the season. They had changed up the doubles team and proved that they have the ability to win with their 94 doubles records. The Vandal women will have gotten off to a slow start this weekend with the first 10 matches, they are showing no signs of a slow start. However, Tuesday will be the first time in the 2006 season.

Nicklas was that day.

The previous personal best number in the 1500 meters was 4:18.11.

Nicklas is a fast runner and is the only other runner besides Kyle Hook in the 1500 meter race.

The Vandals will compete in the NCAA Regionals on May 4 and 5 at Brigham Young University.

Baseball’s opening day full of ups and downs

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

Opening day of the regular season was baseball’s opening day for the second year in a row, a day to remember as the Cardinals’ Opening Day at home, and the Yankees’ Opening Day in New York.

There were two pairs of glasses at Wrigley Field: one for the fans and one for the opening day ceremonies. The visitors were led by the World Series champions, the Arizona Diamondbacks, who took the field to the sound of the national anthem. The fans were thrilled to see their team celebrating their victory over the Chicago White Sox in last year’s World Series.

The Detroit Tigers, with their 16-0 record, defeated the New York Yankees, 9-2, in the opening game of the season. The Tigers’ pitcher, Roger Clemens, threw a complete game, allowing three hits and striking out seven batters.

In the first inning, the Tigers took an early lead when Miguel Cabrera hit a two-run home run. In the fourth inning, the Yankees scored three runs to take the lead back. However, the Tigers came back in the sixth inning to tie the game at 6-6. In the seventh inning, the Yankees scored two runs to take the lead again, but the Tigers answered with a three-run home run by Carlos Beltran to win the game, 9-8.

narrative of those players who were not present at the game. This included the team’s top performers, who led the team in scoring and blocking.

Mitchell now plays for Club A in Arizona, where he was awarded the Mvp of the Year award at the World Series in San Francisco.

The 2007-08 season, fourth season for the Vandal team, left the program in a much better position than it was last season. But while the home team was favored to win, they won’t have enough to beat the World Series since 1945.

Just understand that the Yankees should be in a much better position now, with a much better budget of $130 million.

Crew team offers summer rowing

Andrea Miller

The Washington State University crew team is sponsoring the third annual Palouse Community Rowing program for adults and children ages 12-90. The program is designed to teach rowing in the Palouse River and to encourage more people to try the sport.

The program will be held at the WSU boathouse in Pullman from July 1 to August 15. The program will offer three levels of instruction: beginner, intermediate, and advanced. Each level will have a minimum of four participants and a maximum of eight.

The cost for the program is $25 per participant per week. Participants can register for one week, two weeks, or the entire four weeks. The program begins on July 1 and concludes on August 15.

There are two types of camp: the first camp is from July 1 to July 15, and the second camp is from July 16 to August 15. Each camp will have a maximum of 16 participants.

The program will be led by experienced rowing coaches and instructors from WSU’s Olympic Rowing Club. Participants will have the opportunity to row in single sculls, doubles, and quads.

In addition to rowing, participants will have access to the WSU boathouse facilities, including the boathouse itself, the Hough Mansion, and the Palouse River.

Those interested in registering for the program can contact WSU’s Olympic Rowing Club at 509-335-2668 or visit their website at www.wsu.edu/rowing.

Divibiss resigns as women's basketball coach

Mike Divibiss has resigned his position as head women's basketball coach at the University of Idaho after seven seasons and much more than a season of change for the Vandals.

"I hereby resign my position as head women's basketball coach at the University of Idaho," Divibiss said in a statement Tuesday afternoon. "I would like to thank the University for the opportunity to work at the University of Idaho for the past seven years.

"I would like to thank my staff at the University of Idaho for their support and dedication. I would like to thank my players for their hard work and dedication. I would like to thank my former players for their support and encouragement."

Divibiss' resignation came after an assessment of the program's needs and objectives. "I believe that it is in the best interest of the program to move in a new direction," Divibiss said. "I would like to thank Mike for his support and understanding."

"Mike has been a great coach and he will be missed," Divibiss said. "He is a great person and a great coach."
