UI professor proposes psychological resolution for highway crosswalk

Lisanne Shepherd

When Benjamin Barton, an associate professor in the psychology department, first heard of a University of Idaho student being hit on the Moscow-Pullman highway, his reaction was to see how he could help.

"I got in contact with the Moscow Police Department and just tried to learn what I could about it," Barton said. "I don't know all the details yet, but I realize it's not if we'll have another incident, it's when."

Barton is one of more than 77 new faculty and staff members hired during the summer. He describes himself as a developmental psychologist who works monthly with children and students safety.

"It's a research as a whole looks at the psychological factors of the individual and the context surrounding them," Barton said.

On Sept. 22, James Hazlett, a UI student was hit by a car while crossing the Moscow-Pullman Highway. Hazlett was in the crosswalk when John Hunt, 30, of Pullman, struck him head on with his Dodge Intrepid. Hunt didn't see him in the crosswalk, so the collision occurred at full speed.

"I don't use the word accident," Barton said. "I say unintentional injury. An accident implies some sort of recklessness, but research shows that most incidents can be prevented."

According to Barton, having all pedestrian traffic funneled between the highways three crosswalks, contrasted with the flashing lights and flags, create a false sense of security matching in probabilities. "When people feel like they're protected, it lowers their sense of awareness," he said. "A lot of factors go to making the decision whether to look or not to look."

UI determines academic program cuts
Alexis Turner

With the recent announcement of a 1 percent cut in state funds, the University of Idaho is working to determine how and where to make changes. University Provost Ben LaRocco said in a UI Faculty Council meeting Tuesday that more answers will come as the discussion on the topic of "Program Prioritization," the process used to decide which academic programs have reached the end of the line.

With annual budget cuts undecided, Daley-Laursen said the total number of funds being reallocated is unknown. The holdback issued by C.L. "Bud" Otter last Friday alone will force the university to strike a budget of $1 million from its 2007-08 budget.

"That funding has been a steady downward trend as the total percentage of the university's funding," Daley-Laursen said. "We need to be very careful and manage our resources."

Daley-Laursen encouraged faculty to make investments in necessary areas and disinvestments in others. He said no aspect of the university will be immune to cuts.

The 77 faculty positions included this year also include possible cuts, Daley-Laursen said, but they did not yet know.

"We would not take anything off the table," he said.

The Program Prioritization model, created by the President's Cabinet, consists of a series of decision-making processes. The president and provost will choose initial programs to review before their decisions are given to the Provost's Council for development.

The UI Faculty Council and President's Cabinet will have a chance to advise the president and give his or her decision to the Board of Regents. Chairs, faculty, staff and student organization may give input to the faculty council or the president's cabinet. Academic Affairs Vice Provost Doug Wright said the decision making is expected by January.

Faculty and second consecutive meeting to discuss the prioritization process. Faculty and second consecutive meeting to discuss the prioritization process.

"I'm not sure if any measure will be taken with faculty within their department and across our institutions," Faculty council member Jamie Murphy.

U.S. Senate candidates debate at UI

Bald Wright

Two very different candidates for the U.S. Senate debated Wednesday for more than an hour without personally attacking each other.

"We can be respectful of each other. This is how U.S. senators should be," said Independent candidate Rex Rammell. "We can debate vigorously and still be Americans." Rammell and Democratic nominee Larry LaFaro are running for a six-year seat representing the state of Idaho in the U.S. Senate. They participated in the debate Wednesday night at the University of Idaho Administration Building with the Idaho Commission on Communications.

U.S. Senate candidates Larry LaFaro and Rex Rammell visited the University of Idaho Wednesday for a debate held in the Administration Building. Republican candidate Jim Risch declined to attend. The candidates went quick to take stances on the current Wall Street bailout plan passed by the Senate Wednesday.

"I predict that the House of Representatives will now pass this same plan, which needs to be reviewed by the Senate," said Rammell. "We need someone in the U.S. Senate who understands the regulatory regime that needs to be restructured to move for- ward," Laffaro said.

He said he had served four years in the House Banking Committee. This was part of two terms he had previously served in the U.S. House of Representatives in the early 90's. Laffaro said he believed it was a "too big to fail" economic philosophy that led to the current economic mess and tax payers should have never had to bail out the failing banks and institutions. He said taxpayers should be repaid if the purchased loans turn a profit.

"You can't blame a free market system," Rammell said. "Because we don't have one ....Congress has voted for more government, and I disagree on that.

Rammell said he believed govern- ment regulation was to blame for the crisis because it is regulations that forced banks to lend money even if the market was not.

"This would not have hap- pened if this free market was in charge," he said.

The solution, Rammell said, was to offer tax cuts to companies willing to purchase the high-risk loans.

"We would like to make sure that those who were responsible for this mess get punished," he said. "But there is some corruption in the network of the access here.

Rammell said after the crisis was resolved the economy from the economy to free-market control, which he believed would prevent another crisis in the future.

Hispanic culture: learning origins

Data Barney

Hispanic Heritage Month is observed in the U.S. according to Victor Mazo, a University of Idaho junior and a Mexican-American artist, by engaging in a week-long celebration of the contributions of Hispanic Americans to the nation.

"We all gathered together in one in the same way we deal with labels," Mazo said.

Mazo is the Vice president and founder of Idaho's Latin American Studies Program. Mazo said it is important to recognize the Hispanic contributions to the United States' social, political, and economic development.

Although some people may not be aware of the contributions, Mazo said it is important to educate people about the Hispanic culture and history.

In addition, Mazo said it is important to promote and support Hispanic businesses and organizations.

Mazo said the goal of the Hispanic Heritage Month is to promote awareness and understanding of the Hispanic culture and to encourage people to learn more about it.

He added that he hopes to see more attention given to the Hispanic culture in the future.

Exploring faith in a safe haven

Callie Dohner

Some deliberately avoid ever thinking about the possibility of a world without the world's religions. But for some, this can lead to feelings of isolation and fear.

For others, the cure is to turn to the world's religions for comfort, guidance and strength.

In the case of the United States, which has a diverse population of people of different faiths, there are many options to explore.

For those who are interested in exploring faith in a safe haven, there are various options available.

One option is to attend a faith-based community center or church.

Another option is to join a faith-based group or organization.

There are also many faith-based websites and resources available online.

Ultimately, the key is to find a faith that resonates with you and helps you feel comfortable and supported.

And whatever your faith may be, remember that there is always strength in numbers.

Local radio station to celebrate birthday

Regent

It's been almost four years since Radio Free Moscow first began broadcasting, and it plans on celebrating with a party.

Beginning at 7 p.m. on Friday, Radio Free Moscow will celebrate its birthday to the sound of live music.

The station first hit the air-erways on Oct.

12, 2004. It's become a fixture on the station, but it's going to host a milestone event.

Some of the live music will be aimed at raising money and having a good time, said Leigh Rober-tes, the manager of the station.

While the exact dates of the party and coming onto the air, don't match up, Robertes said the plan is to have the celebration along the cloud washes and in the way they plan on hosting the event, the covers the cost of snacks and live music.

Bob Hoffman, a volunteer and member of the board of di-tors at Radio Free Moscow, said they hope to raise between $500 and $1,000, and he would be happy if they were to hit the mark. The money is strictly used to finance the operations of the

After applying for a low-power station permit in 2001 from the FCC, Radio Free Moscow has been in a waiting period to start broadcasting in 2004. The station currently uses a radio-car to broadcast its signal. It has enough power to broadcast to the city of Moscow and a couple of outlying areas.

It's only possible to pick up the signal if the radio is at a really good quality, Robertes said.

Radio Free Moscow has applied to become a full-power station. Robertes said they're planning on planning a full power FM system that will transmit to the inhilling full power FM to Filbert Ridge.

With the new full-power output, Radio Free Moscow would meet the city of Pullman as well as many outlying areas. It's a time-consuming process to get a permit from the FCC, so the station won't be making the move into the full power for a little while.

Radio Free Moscow is void of advertisements and is the low-budget version of volunteer DJs. Robertes is the only paid employee.

"It's a lot like college radio," except with more listeners, members instead of college students, Robertes said.

The station supplements the local broadcast with broadcasted news from around the country.

The event will include a silent auction, featuring donations from local businesses. A partial list of items in the auction can be found on Radio Free Moscow's Web site — www.radiofreemocow.com.

There will be a raffle to raise money for the station, also featuring items donated from local businesses, Robertes said.affle tickets can be purchased in advance at Paradise Creek Bicycles.

Anyone who attends the party is encouraged to wear a costume, and prizes will be awarded. The categories for the prizes won't be anounced in order to encourage creativity.

"We'll have beer and wine," Hoffman said. "This isn't a sit-down dinner. There will be music, dancing, mingling and very few speeches."

Live music this year incudes Finn Riggins, a band that has roots in Moscow. Finn Riggins is currently touring the country and is based out of Pullman, Wash. Also included are James Mann & the Grown Children from Portland, and local duo Brian and Katrina.

Aside from the annual birthday party, the station raises money by sending letters to people on a mailing list who have donated in the past and accept donations on its Web site. The Web site also offers a streaming broadcast at no cost for anyone interested in learning.

Anyone can DJ on Radio Free Moscow. After turning in an application, the applicants take a class about radio operation since many of the prospective DJs have no experience in broadcast radio, Robertes said.

There are three schedule changes for a year, each one allowing for new voices to find a place on the station.

any of the world," he said. "Up until now, they have been the envy of the world because of our pre- sent regulation ... we're going to have to start putting together a program to regulate these baskets. I'll tell you the timeline to do that." The candidates also outlined their positions on the war in Iraq. "Our policy should be simple," Rammell said. "Get out of there as soon as possible." He said he supported the overthrow of Saddam Hussein and the liberation of the Iraqi people, but he thought the U.S. should withdraw from Iraq now because it was draining the economy. "Now it's a problem in trouble, and we continue to pay mon- ey to prolong the stay of these guys," said Rammell. "The 'right' strategy worked in Iraq and we should support a similar strategy in Afghanistan if the U.S. president asked for it." "I like President Reagan's philosophy — once you win the war, you stay the hell out of there until you're done with it," he said.

LeRocco said he was skeptical of the Bush administration's reasons for going to war in Iraq. "There is no connection be- tween the Sept. 11 attacks and Iraq," he said. Rammell disagreed. "The terrorists that were in- volved (in the Sept. 11 attacks) were in Afghanistan and moved to Iraq. I'm not sure that's was a totally unjustified war," he said. LeRocco said he was the only veteran of the five candidates running. He was in the Army from 1964-72 as a captain in military intelligence. He said he believed that U.S. troops were in Iraq to keep the government from falling apart and from civil war. "We're going to need a 'soup' of diplomacy," he said. "As a member of the Board of America we have to get strong," Rammell said. "And say that anybody that attacks us or threatens our freedom will pay the price. "I support what we accomplished in Iraq.

The candidates debated the increasing education costs and debt from student loans. LeRocco said the cost of higher education was "out of control" and wanted to lower interest rates on student loans. He also called for a national service as a way to pay back student loans. "This is a very important us for us to be competitive in the future," he said. LeRocco said that he was still paying off his student loans. "I reflect back on my two years of higher education and all that debt, and I wonder if those student loan programs really was that much," he said. LeRocco said that he believed that the U.S. never funded a federal student loan program and that student loans should be funded by private firms. Both candidates agreed that the U.S. was crucial, and that they were interested in exploring alternative en- ergy sources. LeRocco said traditional energy sources — such as nuclear, outer- continental oil drilling and coal — should not be overlooked for ex- pansion nor should they be re- gulated by government. "Someday we will try to build a coal plant, somewhere we are going to have to destroy the environment," he said. LeRocco said he would support tax credits for the research and development of alternative energies, which he believed would also have created jobs in the economy.

"Alternative sources of en- ergy could create 14,000 new jobs," Rammell said. Rammell said he was unsure if coal can or currently restricted continental shelf would be up for sale to countries. As student loans, Rammell said social security and Medicare should be privatized. LeRocco said that privatization was a mistake and that he sup- ported Barack Obama's universal health plan. LeRocco also said he supported the Troop-stay program that was being put into place in Iraq. "It is true that we need to enrich- ament and Rammell said. Both candidates agreed that there was incredible poverty in the Dar- fur region of Sudan, and that some- thing should be done about it. "I wish the U.S. was in a better state to help," Rammell said. "To help everyone in the world." LeRocco said he believed diplomatic pressure should be put on Sudan. "It's disgraceful, and we should all use all of our clout," LeRocco said. While Rammell said he had re- duced public coffers, he believed that his experience of being involved in seven legal cases with the state of Idaho over his military service had qualified him for the position.

"I've been ground-up by traveling around the world and working with aver- age Idaho workers in their jobs and that he would continue to do so after the election. He also said he had worked for a day in the work- house of North Willamette River Supply Company.

Rammell said as a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he believed he would graze By, and that he was a "strict" claquesman" when it came to implimenting the religious freedom constitutional amendments that the Constitution allows. "The proper role of government is to protect liberty and property," Rammell said.

LeRocco said he was a practic- ing Catholic, and his faith helped him deal with the pressures of public life. "I have to deal with a moral complex," he said.

Rammell said the future rested on young people and U.S. students. "The younger the better we have in America," LeRocco agreed. "We can do this together. — This is the most important election of your lifetime. We've got to get it right.

Don't miss out on this great opportunity!
University of Idaho students will have the chance to develop leadership skills and promote interest among Latino students at the first annual University Latino Student Leadership Conference in Sept. Students learn about the ability to be leaders and outside of the community, and this meeting will be held at the Doubletree Hotel in Boise on Sunday.

The conference will be held at the Doubletree Hotel in Boise on Sunday. The United States Latino Student Leadership Institute holds several conferences across the United States in addition to the national conference and has chosen to host the first National Latino Student Leadership Conference.

"It's important for the students to be able to hook-up nationally and with local communities," said President Brian Bilello, Multicultural Program Coordinator.

The focus of the North-Western University Latino Student Leadership Conference is on Latino issues, but non-Latino students are also involved.

"It's a great opportunity for students to network," Veliz said.

Registration and van travel arrangements must be confirmed by Monday. To register and sign up for registration fees and van travel, contact Christian M. Labit at 692-5560.

Cascia Helms, the cheerleader coach who was responsible for the uniforms, said they were intended to promote physical fitness, but she resigned after the clothing was controversial.

The cheerleaders unveiled uniforms Saturday, an event that prompted mixed reactions among students.

"The old uniforms simply didn't work out. It's time now for everyone to let us get back to what we do," said Gudgel. Spot squad members were consulted about the new uniforms and approved of them.

The squad is funded by the Argonaut. This will be the rec

Feminism: the scary 'F'-word

To be associated or identify with it. "They've always been difficult. I know that's why that's such a feminist, but they won't identify with it because they're not strong women". "Most feminists are ugly," said Jessica Valenti, author of Sex, Gender and Politics.

Every day I come across bright and beautiful young women who have been taught about feminism and freedoms that would have been unattainable, unaffordable, or nonexistent in the past. These new feminists are bright, beautiful, and ready to take their place in the public eye.

Democrats visit campus

Finally, there are two candidates in the campaign for the UConn Co-op, who are actively paying attention to who their constituents are and listening to what they have to say. Both Wilt Missick and Larry Laffoon have visited the University of Connecticut campus, some thing neither of their opponents has done. Who would you rather have representing you? Bill Fall, who's voted against numerous bills of legislation affecting such as you can go to school, or Missick, the candidate who supports Campus Funding? The candidates who have come to our campus and are interested in meeting us, or the ones who couldn't care less if they have our votes or not? You decide.

Make me laugh

The amount of attention the vice presidential debate is getting is surprisingly more than what was garnered by Obama and McCain's debate. Are people paying more attention now? Because they're actually considering each candidate intellectually, or are they waiting for Palin to say something ridiculous that Palin has that will be used for Foe's next SNL skit? I'm for it with Palin, there is no intellectual side.

Old news

In preparation for The Argonaut's 130th anniversary, I stumbled upon a box of newspapers from the 1970s and '80s that has been the editor in chief's office for God only knows how long. These things are dying a slow and pain ful death. Can anyone do anything to preserve them—someone from the library or alumni office perhaps? Help!```
Did Enlightenment make us stupider?

I'm sure Pierre Brossan is an intelligent man, and it is not my intention to offend any of the readers of the Argonaut, but I have a problem with one film as a negative example.

The film "Argonaut" is a documentary directed by Daniel Bäder's "What If...?". When the interviewers ask "Why should the children have this?" it shows that there is no one here. He asks the interviewee saying "Is there no one here?" and he says "There is no one here." This is the problem. But he must also be the manager of his own life or religion, which the reader' attention is not to think too much about our interest. We may be living in a world where people are not aware of our religion beliefs themselves have not stayed there. The result is today most people hold religious beliefs but do not connect them to reason. In fact, we seem to have a new generation thinking we use in other areas to religious relativism.

When talking to many people, it seems they do not even think it is possible to apply logic and reason to religious ideas, or some are even offended when you try to do so. At first glance it may seem we are being highly reasonable and skeptical, not allowing religion to claim it has anything to do with us. However, since we still hold religious "or spiritual" beliefs, this is what we believe, in fact, stupid.

Many women who enjoy all those freedoms feminists fought for and say, "I'm not a feminist, but..." and then express feminist values and demands such as equal pay, equal work for equal pay, without being dismissed as not really being a feminist and the need to end violence against women. The concept of feminism is a step in the direction towards a better future. We are ready for a big change in this way and the way we approach it. What better way to do it than to live with fresh, bright minds who are uncontrollable, independent women that don't want to be so-called "well "women". Employers go on strike and have a better chance. You'll find women that are not "pretty-donna" than our big dreams might have. We know it's a long road to get to the office, managing the clients and people and having early retirement. Our American dreams are traditional, but we are not the generation of any generation before us. In the 21st century, opportunity, the guidance and the fast lifestyle are not as much as we think, because there is a new and innovativeворство with victory.

Feminism

Down until they fit the assigned gender role.

Valentis calls this fear of identifying as a feminist as "the Not-A-Feminist-Best Stereotype." These are women who do not express feminism for fear they will be seen as "feminist." And then express feminist values and demands such as equal pay, equal work for equal pay, without being dismissed as not really being a feminist and the need to end violence against women. A millennial 'American Dream'

Eddie Smith Daily Missippian, Jackson, Miss.

With all the talk of financial disaster and economic boom, it is easy to lose sight of the perilous time we are living in. Presidents conditionally have been successful with their plans, but it appears retirement and Congress have not yet combined to benefit the millennials, members of our generation entering a volatile job market.

Still blinded with idealism, however, we want more than higher wages and lower taxes; we areaching social and environmental issues in search of a generation who can promote the good work being done and encourage new generations to do the same.

We have a millennial philosophy, which states we will eat our own and yet, these are our parents' generation. But today's generation has more than a single pension, a dog, and a kid or two. Although the most affluent generation has seen a rise in the numbers of low wage calls and a complete collapse of the middle class, we are future-thinking in some generation.

We don't have a history, we have a philosophy.

We are a nation of saddle ghosts, students, artists and hipsters. We believe we are on the front lines of the future. We are the new generation, the most innovative, the most creative, the most diverse.

We are a generation of ideas and action.

We want to see a world where all women have equal access to college, where people are not discriminated against for their gender.

We want to see a world where all people have equal access to health care, where people are not discriminated against for their race or sexual orientation.

Death Cab’s Chris Walla talks politics

Kevin Ottenberger

Some musicians have a lot to say about politics. Some want to know what their listeners have to say.

Seattle-based indie rock band Death Cab for Cutie has teamed up with an organization called Why Tuesday? to orchestrate a large-scale college voter registration drive called The Ultimate College Bowl.

The goal is to promote grass-roots organizing by giving free concerts to competitive colleges. Among a few smaller prizes, Death Cab for Cutie will perform at the school that registers the largest number of voters. More than 400 schools are currently involved.

“We wondered how we could insert ourselves into this election cycle without being a pain in somebody’s ass, and this seemed perfect,” said guitarist/multi-instrumentalist Chris Walla.

On Sept. 24, Walla spoke to nationwide college crowds through a phone conference — The Argonaut was on the line.

While members of the band have been vocally supportive of Barack Obama’s campaign, Walla said the band’s personal preferences are not a factor in its political activity.

“Death Cab’s never been a political band with a capital ‘P.’ I think Ben’s stuck to the time-honored mantra of ‘write what you know.’” Walla said. “I can talk politics and even comes from a military family, but it doesn’t drive him day to day, so logically he tends to stay away from it.”

The Columbus Chronicle

Q: The Columbus Chronicle: Do you think you have a responsibility to pass along some sense of political power to young people?

A: We’re doing it just as concerned citizens. It’s nice to feel like you can do something, and this sounds like a perfect fit for us. It’s large in scale and feels like it is going to work. It seems to be seen how and if it goes, but I feel positive.

The Heights (Columbus) City Life: Why do you think it’s important for college students to vote?

A: We’re not even sure where to start. In the 2006 election, it was disheartening to see how many young people ended up at the polls. Sometimes it’s difficult to remember everything that happens around us as we have some kind of control over.

The Badger Herald (University of Wisconsin-Madison): As a voter, what is your biggest political issue with this election?

A: I think it’s the war for me. In terms of big media coverage, it’s the forgotten issue, and that is really troubling to me because this one involves 150,000 people in another country that are in harm’s way. It’s not reporting on that with the same fervor that we’re devoted to portions or trivial crap like really frustrating, and I think it should have more coverage and we ought to care as a nation. It should be headline news every day until they are home.

The Argonaut (University of Idaho): I understand that as a band, you’re pretty involved with PETA, vegetarianism and the overall theme of animal rights. Do you guys spend more time dealing with social movements like that or with political elections?

A: We’d love to see. It’s kind of a thing we do in our spare time. We can cross over onto the band news and then... The thing we can all agree on is that our point of political activity, like this, is about who... It’s about getting people involved. That, to me, is just critical, and we’re passionate about it.

This is a small portion of the interview transcript and is not necessarily in order.
Celebrating a legacy

Megan Boyles

In 2003, Dave Chappelle satirized “Making the Band 2,” an eventful rap show on a comedy sketch. In a thick Jamaican accent, Chappelle’s “Black Jesus” embarrassed the top five rappers, who were quickly dismissed into the audience by “Dywayne,” “Dywayne,” and “Dywayne.”

The hip-hop icon’s proclamation reggaeton lyricist who owned the perpetually failed television Talent Show. Although Mr. John didn’t make it past the show’s first round, his music and the Band 2. Kermit Offishall seems to have taken his lead and run with it. “Not 4 Sale” from the album John White has made.

“Not 4 Sale” was accompanied by live performances with Miller Hicks, Jazmine Sullivan, and the top five rappers, who chose to forsake a feature of the show and essentially disappear. “Digital Motown” features producers Carl Field and a dancefloor-friendly, hip-hop-friendly, ghost-like, Star Jones as a special guest, with the Las Vegas resident who announced the album, “This is a mixtape of the sounds that were made in Las Vegas and the sounds that are made in places like Las Vegas. It’s called the ‘Las Vegas’ mixtape.”

It’s only been 6 years since the pop-punk, hip-hop band Sun, 2002. Their formula is essentially unippable, the sound of the group’s debut album, “Not 4 Sale” is as ghost-like, as though he’s being spoken to through a dashboard voice mail that hasn’t been played in years.

Noah and the Whale sets sail

Jordan Grey

Folk music comes in a lot of forms, but unique is usually the best way to describe it. One of the bands who can surely be placed into that particular category is Noah and the Whale. The London-based band released their debut album, “The First Time I Met Myself,” this year on Interscope Records. The album is currently available in stores and on iTunes.

The songs range from slow, melancholic tracks that are sure to get to a little too much, to faster, more upbeat tracks, some of which, like “Is What You Do,” sound a bit like an old folk song.

Noah and the Whale, the band, is made up of four members: Peter Cragg, Scorpio on bass, Graham Coogan, lead vocals and guitar, and Nathan Gaskin, the band’s drummer. The band’s music is unique, as is their way of playing it live.

One way the band does this is through a screen on stage, which is projected to the audience. The band also uses a variety of instruments, which are visible on stage.

The group’s music has been well received, and they have been featured on a variety of television shows and in a number of movies.

“Almost always the first reaction we get when people hear our music is that it’s unique,” said Gaskin. “And we’re definitely going to try to keep it that way.”

The band’s debut album, “The First Time I Met Myself,” is currently available for purchase on iTunes, Amazon, and other online music retailers.

Kardinal Offishall attempts to spit hot fire

Wednesday, November 2, 2008

Kardinal Offishall, a Canadian hip-hop artist, has announced that he will be releasing a new album in 2009. The album, titled “The First Time I Met Myself,” is expected to feature a mix of hip-hop and R&B music.

In an interview with the Toronto Star, Offishall said that the album will be a departure from his previous work, which has been characterized by his aggressive style and his use of gangster rap.

“The First Time I Met Myself” is set to feature a more mature and sophisticated sound, with Offishall exploring new themes and ideas in his music.

Offishall has also announced that he will be embarking on a tour in support of the album, with stops in both Canada and the United States. The tour will feature a number of high-profile guests, including Damian Marley and Nas.

Offishall’s previous album, “The First Time I Met Myself,” was released in 2007 and was a commercial success, reaching #1 on the Canadian Itunes Chart and selling over 200,000 copies. The album included the hit single “Not 4 Sale,” which was a top 5 hit in Canada and the United States.

Offishall has also been active in charitable work, having founded the Kardinal Offishall Foundation in 2006 to support education and music programs for children in Canada.

The new album, “The First Time I Met Myself,” is expected to be released in early 2009 and will be available for purchase on all major music retailers.
Comedian cut for Palin comment

New York University senior Alex Yacovelli is an alumnus-supporter rock fan with a tragic story. In 2005, Spin Magazine reported that at a New York City Weezer concert, one fan lost his life due to a sign asking for the band’s classic “Buddy Holly” was torn down by Weezer lead singer and guitarist Rivers Cuomo over the moshpit in front of the whole crowd.

“Christo,” a character-driven drama that explores the phony world of Weezer fans. The plot line follows a band that is struggling to make a living. While the band is on tour, they receive a piece of information that could make all the difference in the world.

“The movie is about the power of the music industry and the way it can manipulate people,” Yacovelli said. “It’s not just about making money, but also about controlling people’s minds.”

Although the movie is set in the world of rock and roll, it also explores deeper themes of identity and the quest for fame.

“I think the movie is really about finding your place in the world and the challenges that come with it,” Yacovelli said. “It’s about being true to yourself and staying true to your beliefs.”

Yacovelli said that he was really excited to see the movie because he is a huge fan of Weezer and the music industry in general.

“I’m really looking forward to it,” he said. “I think it’s going to be a really cool experience.”

Yacovelli, who is also a music enthusiast, said that he is excited to see how the band’s music will be incorporated into the film.

“I’m really hoping that we get to see some of their songs in the movie,” he said. “That would be really cool.”

Yacovelli said that he is excited to see how the movie will be received by the audience and how it will be received by the music industry.

It’s the weekend for Vandals in Idaho. The Vandals (1-0) will play host to the Nevada Wolf Pack (2-2), a team that has a coming of 49-27 victory over the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. The Wolf Pack will bring with them last week’s Western Athletic Conference Offensive Player of the Week, Colin Kaepernick, the sophomore quarterback who accounted for 415 yards and five touchdowns in the victory over UNLV.

I thought Vinnie Young had game to the NFL but evidently he’s in Reno. Yes, new right now be cause he’s wearing No. 10, and he’s flying around all over the field.” Idaho coach Rob Akey said. “Kaepernick is a hell of a player.”

Defensive captain Shilo Keo said the defensive game plan won’t change against Nevada, and he believes they should be able to slow him down.

This year’s offense is absolutely different, Kien said. “If we stop 10, we have a good chance of winning.”

The defense will again be without Keo Saturday — he thought he’d be back by an Oregon State but isn’t the first round instead put in the emergency room after suffering from a heart attack.

He said he will be back next week. Keo’s playing the role of team captain and was on the sideline against San Diego State calling the plays. He said he believes haw the offense has performed this week during practice and is looking forward to taking on the Wolf Pack in the Dome.

Keo said the Idaho defense this week has been pretty exciting. It’s been a great week of practices so far.”

Akey agreed this week was productive and said he’s not See WOLF PACK, page B6

DIARY OF A FANTASY GEEK

ICYMI, football’s back, and that means it’s time for a Fantasy League. If you’re a newb, let me explain: you pick the best players from each team, pay a little bit of money (or a lot of money, if you’re a real pain), and then go back and forth all season long playing your team, just like you're playing with the real teams. It’s usually a lot of fun, and it’s a great way to stay engaged in the sport.

A true Vandal tradition

College at the nation’s collegi e-Dad for the weekend in the fall is an obvious reason. There’s an additional reason special about being at a football game with Dad — the memories of the play fests past. Dad, Mom, and the kids used to go out in the parking lot with “Tailgate Dad.” The guy with an oven over his back, beer in a keg, and rope on the grill: the dad who plays the music, makes the cheese and drinks a cold one before moon catches him in the act.

For others, it’s having the “Alumni/Alumni Dad,” the dad who was the president of something and started for the Vandals at some time. He comes complete with stories and blow-out Wolf fans to prove it. He’s the dad you can hear from across the field yelling and cursing at the players that his blood is probably still on the nasty turf.

The dad Rcawes was with “Tailgate Dad,” a close relative to “Super-Alumni Dad,” who thinks of Dennis Brock lison family cany and remember when Idaho delivered countless beat inges to Boise State. The dad who remembers the bad times when Vandals fans didn’t show their support in the parking lot, but bashed beer into the Idaho Dome when the legal age was 19.

No matter what your dad See TRADITION, page B6

It’s time to trade in fantasy football land, so choose wisely

You’re going to have players who are performing well and trade for one that isn’t. Be the guy who pro mises trades, the guy who never trades. You may end up striking someone’s first or second round.

Also, you should have a deep bench when it comes to players overwhelming your league. Don’t be afraid to deal a player coming off a great game. You always want to buy low and sell high when it comes to fantasy football.

In fantasy football, players’ value changes with each week. You’re going to trade Larry Johnson against the college in my league. And I’m happy that you’re doing it, but you’re also giving yourself off two great games while Addai has struggled due to the Cali for an offensive injury. Learning the other teams and the other players.

There are a lot of players to consider buying low and selling high: Ryan Grant, Katy Perry, Brandy, Ryan. Grant has 13 and has a few more games coming up. Katy Perry has 13 and has a few more games coming up. Brandy has 13 and has a few more games coming up.

Dad is the best guy I ever knew, and I love that he plays in cold. I love that he plays in cold. Dad is the best guy I ever knew, and I love that he plays in cold. Dad is the best guy I ever knew, and I love that he plays in cold. Dad is the best guy I ever knew, and I love that he plays in cold.

Addai to Start

Joseph Addai will start against the University of Idaho. Addai had 64 yards and a touchdown against the Wolf Pack.

Vandals will take on the Nevada Wolf Pack this Saturday 2 p.m. in the Kibbie Dome.

The University of Idaho senior quarterback is now halfway through his season with one win, one tie and eight losses.

Captain and fifth year senior Aimee Gospel said the team is working at being positive on the field allowing them to maintain a mental attitude that will feed them to the wire.

When we have a chance on goal, we need to just take it. Gospel said. "We need to make the opposite of what we did the week before."

The Vandals want to change the eight losses into eight wins as they finish out the second half of the season.

"We have actually been playing very well the past few games," said Gospel. "We are just lacking wins, we need to give that little extra bit to win."

The Vandals' worst defeat this year was against Wyoming. Wyoming where they suffered a 3-0 loss.

"Maybe I need to go out and get everyone a foot, a four-leaf clover and some magic dust to put on those goal posts," Pete Showler, senior quarterback said. "The next 7 of 9 games are conference games."

Showler said playing well and producing wins is a team goal because they have not won since the Governor's Cup nine months ago. As she had been out since the first week of Sepem.

Last week the Vandals traveled to face fraternal Idaho State University and the Big Red are considered a talented team.

University's response to the unlucky outcomes of the games this season are all directed to the need for a consistent cycle of wins.

"Maybe I need to go out and get everyone a rabbit's foot, a four-leaf clover and some magic dust to put on those goal posts."

"I'd say may be I' ll have to do a special good luck ritual before our next game.

Eight minutes into the match, the Cougars scored their first goal from five yards out after a scramble for the ball during a free kick. The Vandals lost 1-0.

"We' ll get to challenge them and see if we can score," Showler said. "Namely what level of team you' re playing against. Consistency is what's going to win you games."

The final score resulted in a 2-0 win for the Cougars.

The rival game coming up against the Boise State Broncos. Hosted in Moscow, and the players are anxious to compete with the Frogs who are 6-3 this fall.

This weekend the Vandals travel to Idaho State University and Monsoola to play at University of Montana.

RAIDERS FIRE KIFFIN HIRE IDAHO ALUM

JOSH DABOW / ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALAMEDA, Calif. — As reports of his treatment of women surfed across the media in recent weeks, Lane Kiffin said he’d keep plugging away on Oakland Raiders coaching until he heard directly from Al Davis.

The Raiders owner delivered his message loud and clear Tuesday. Davis informed Kiffin of his decision to fire him in a morning meeting after days of lengthy afternoon news conferences that had made the team’s 행정者 than many Raiders generals in recent years. Davis’ shock fired-up way of speaking on an overhead projector a three-page warming letter that he had given to Kiffin more than two weeks ago, cajoling on the couch to “create your listener’s personal life free campaign” of criticizing the team’s media.

Davis called Kiffin immaturation, immaturity, and detailed acts of what he called inhumane treatment by Kiffin.

Kiffin’s agents got on much longer with what I would tell the propaganda, thelying that he had been on my wheelchairs for two weeks and in the rest of the time,” Davis said.

The 44-year-old conservative coach Cable will take over on an interim basis before the bye this week before Cable coaches the Raiders in New Orleans on Oct. 11.

The Raiders fired Kiffin was fired for causing, meaning they will not pay him for the remainder of the three-year deal worth about $6 million he signed when he took over in January 2007.

Kiffin’s agent Gary Uber

As Davis’ agentry had already been Malcolm’s allegations and said there would be an internal review on Wednesday Kiffin’s relationship with the commissioner in a group with Davis.

Kiffin earlier told ESPN host John & Co. that Davis was watching the Raiders while watching the Nazis.

"It was very painful for me and my family," he said. "It’s a lot of accusations because I was watching the Nazis while watching the Nazis, and I was watching the Nazis while watching the Nazis.

Career Development Specialists provide a valuable service to WSU

Career Development Specialists (CDS) are undergraduate students who intern at the Career Services office and gain specialized professional experience and knowledge within the area of career development. CDS students provide direct service to students, develop and facilitate presentations and workshops, and participate in program development. These students also participate in public relations and special events.

In order to promote the Career Expo of the Palouse and other Associated Events, the CDS students extensively assist staff members with marketing and organization through student outreach and distribution of promotional materials. CDS students also develop and facilitate presentations to help students to get the most out of the Career Expo.

If you are interested in participating in this on-campus internship next semester, please contact the Program Coordinator, Virginia Tavares-Delgado at vdelgado@wsu.edu or call Career Services at 335-2546.
