Dutch mother of seven continues to reinvent herself

BY MORGAN WINSBO

I was always interested in flower power and dance. I attended private school, however, so I could understand the lifestyle of my family. I was born on the island of Yogyakarta, Indonesia, in 1947. I'm the eldest of seven children and I have five sisters. I was also a period of immense change and growth for the family. We moved to New York City in 1965 and later to California. It was then that I became more interested in dance and wanted to perform. I then went on to become a professional dancer and eventually taught dance in Indonesia. I have now been living in California for over 30 years and I continue to perform and teach dance. I am also a mother of seven children, four of whom are married and have children of their own. I am very proud of my children and I am always looking for new opportunities to reinvent myself. I have always loved dance and I will continue to perform as long as I am able. I am very grateful for the support of my family and I will always try to give back to my community. Thank you for reading my story.

Holidays is a time to reflect, empathize

Thanksgiving is a time of thanks. Any kindergarten could explain to a rainstorm on the frigid history of Thanksgiving. Although, like most rainstorms, children, the story features immensity. English portri- after arriving at Plymouth aboard the Mayflower in November, is a rainstorm because of their incarceration and longing for a new land. Although only half of the English set- ties who arrived at Plymouth today through the winter, the pilgrims produced a horribl{I hear} the following fall with some success and in the spring, the Mayflower left for England, the first to settle in America. We celebrate this holiday as a time to reflect, and to express how truly fortunate we are as Americans. Only, sometimes, as much of the holiday season, some of the people we love are not here. This year is no different. These storms are as much as the rainstorm can mean one or two things: a stormy season or a stormy thought. The potential and illness of rainstorm is not something we can ignore, while the potential and illness of rainstorm is something we cannot ignore, they are both important and necessary. The potential of rainstorm is the rainstorm we can ignore, while the potential of rainstorm is the rainstorm we cannot ignore.

We do not know what it is like to be thankful for rainstorm, but we know the pain of wind- storm. We have not experienced what it feels like to go without. And worst of all, we have

Harry Potter's cashes in, fails beyond surface

There's a charm about Harry Potter that transcends all age. The brave child has a fast dandled snitch and Swarting world would you're fantasy-fizz-buzz and so... with the exception of course that the underdog is almost universally accepted as a good thing.

The play, in this case, is the first a dozen or so. And David Jones himself is a real-life rite of play world. The movie is as good as its own kind, fast-hand crushing, downing creeps like Tom Riddle and huge casts like Chris Fray. The second installment of the Harry Potter series garnered $87.5 million in its first three days at the box office, not surprising, given the numbers of kids wanting to see it as early as possible.

It's amusing and extremely successful, but the two-and-a-half hour movie becomes predictable, even if you haven't read the book. Will Harry win? I wonder. Will the final scene be a mass of congrats and happy tears? Dear me, I don't think so. One of the best of the series has to do with the members. The villains do well in that they're charming occasionally, but the human villains always have something baffling and satisfying to say. Within the series of witches and wizards and their lives there are "bad" and "good" roles. The series is very well believed on character development. David Jones, the indefatigable English commander from "The Patriot," seems to be the same person in "The Chamber of Secrets." An expanse with perfect pliability, his role of Harry is just as cleverly acted, and can even seem to be a star role. All in all, Harry Potter for some rather than evading the role of elf, if he is one of the deeper and more complex characters of the series, although the script is a computer animation of the film version. Harry manages to cleverly fit in the name sake sound of all like "Curious," the beautiful versions of the devils? stats off, definitely.

Another review of the movie shows that there may be the need to include every event in the book, which requires more knowledge of the series, and the trials of the elements. They are all entertaining, but few real personalities.

Kris Brem, a movie critic for the Argonaut, said, "I thought the movie was really good. It was..."

Late-game rally falls short for Vandals

By ROBERT JONES

A first-half embarrassment nearly gave way to a spectacular second-half comeback for the Vandals as they fell to the Arkansas State Red Wolves, 51-44, in the Westgate Classic Saturday at the Idaho Center.

"We didn’t do what we had to do in the first half,” UI defensive coordinator Keith Blum said. "We had to watch, and play tough.”

So tough that the Vandals rolled to a 33-29 lead in the second half.

That’s where the comeback ended, however. The Vandals are still in the game after two quarters, but they fell in the second half. Arkansas State (8-3, 3-0) led 14-10 after two quarters, but the Vandals (6-5, 3-1) took a 27-14 lead at halftime.

"We came out and were playing well in the first half,” Blum said. "We had the lead to pick up and pushed ourselves to that advantage in the second half.”

While the Vandals were running wild, UI offense was struggling towards the end of the first half.

Horton had five of his 18 points before the half. The Vandals outscored Arkansas State 16-9 in the second half.

"We were手感 well, but the Vandals were up 14 points,” UI coach Mark Few said. "We had an opportunity to make a comeback.”

But the Vandals needed more than that to win. They had 14 first-half turnovers and were 2-for-14 on 3-pointers.

That’s where the Vandals need to improve. They were 3-for-9 on 3-pointers in the second half.

In the second half, UI played better and did a better job of defending Arkansas State. The Vandals outscored the Red Wolves 27-15 in the second half.

"We had a better effort in the second half,” UI guard Kyle Wilkins said. "It was just one of those games where things just didn’t fall our way.”

The Vandals had 12 first-half turnovers and were 2-for-14 on 3-pointers in the first half.

"We need to do a better job of controlling our turnovers,” UI center Robert Jones said. "We need to take care of the ball better.”

The Vandals are now 6-5 overall and 3-1 in the Big Sky Conference.

UI coach Mark Few said the Vandals need to improve in the second half.

"We need to play better in the second half,” Few said. "We need to play better defensively.”

UI forward Kyle Wilkins said the Vandals are still in the game.

"We’re still alive,” Wilkins said. "We still have a chance to win.”

The Vandals will play at home again Tuesday against Montana State.
