Respectful Climate Survey

Survey asks openly on same-sex students and employees.
Response rate: 1,434 students (151 percent), 1,263 employees (86 percent).
Date: February and March 2002.

In support of the University of Idaho’s climate survey, this university will also conduct a similar survey.

The survey is confidential and anonymous, and participation is voluntary.

Leah Mjatovic, chief of the Idaho Human Rights Commission, said that the survey is "an important step in understanding the climate for students and employees at institutions of higher education in Idaho."

We could easily double the amount of laptops on campus by this time next year.

CRUZ LAMIN
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

Requests for installing wireless cards are up. We have seen 150 wireless devices this week, and Associate Director of IT Administration Technologies Chuck Lamhin estimates that there are 600-700 wireless capable laptops on the FSU campus now.

The network is designed to handle between 40 and 65 laptops at one time. With the amount of laptops on campus by this time next year, Lamhin said, "We are going to be ready for that." Lamhin emphasized that wireless is not meant to be a replacement for a wired network. "We are trying to provide a more flexible and mobility for interest users," he said.

There are lots of wireless cards available for students to purchase. Lamhin recommends that students purchase the Cisco Series 350 card. "If someone comes up and asks what we recommend, we will say Cisco," Lamhin said.

The Apple Airport card for Macintosh users and the Lucent Distance Gold cards are the best available alternatives to a Cisco card. "ITS is ready to help students that own any brand of wireless card with technical problems, but we will only help students install Cisco cards," Lamhin said.

Students who install the Cisco Series 350 card in their laptops who may benefit from the longer range and enhanced power offered by their card. Within the next year, additional anti-interferer security features will be made available through the US wireless cooperation. "They have promised us more security for students using the Cisco Series 350 card. If students with problems about buying a wireless card for their laptop or where wireless connections are available on the campus can visit ITS in Room 140 of the Administration Building or check online at www.id.biu.msu.su/wireless for more information.

Scheduling of university-wide meeting suspect

T was the last day of dead week and all through the Argonaut, students were entirely too stressed to attend President Bob Hargis' annual meeting concepting the budget. Stymied with open plans, Hargis wants everyone to be up to speed on university's budgetary affairs. Today's meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Kittle Dome. There will be plenty of time to make your complaint - the meeting is expected to last at least three or four hours. But also be aware that this is only the beginning of the discussion, but also because just days before our break finals begin student attendance no doubt will be minimal. Hargis doesn't have to hold these meetings, these poor forums of wrath should not continue and that at least much appreciated.

However, the timing of these meetings is always suspect. Last year it seemed every large announcement came just before a break or a long weekend. Perhaps, this was coincidental, or even intentional for reasons we just don't know or understand. But the timing is always suspect and students often want to fall into line, keep things calm and cool.

People would have been much more upset about layoffs than they even been a day or two for those who were laid off a month or so ago. It's too bad people once a Friday, Monday is the start of a new week, and all things in the past are things forgotten. But when it comes to announcements of such great importance, the university shouldn't be playing it safe. It's hard to believe in today's meeting, exploring student and faculty reactions and exploring some of the concepts discussed. We would love to help spread the word to students about the mess we're in and what our administration is planning to do about it.

Unfortunately our next issue won't be available until Jan. 7, more than one month following this meeting. Notes from a meeting four weeks ago is hardly considered fresh or timely coverage. The meeting also comes after the last ASUI Senate meeting. Our student representatives also will have to wait another month before they get a chance to publicly voice their opinion of this statement of the administration's latest nano.

These meetings are useful, and we appreciate the effort, but we would appreciate them much more if they were scheduled at a time when a large percentage of students would have time to attend. Without that, who's feedback is allocated and student organizations can prepare comments in response.

Holiday season provides outlet for creative juices

White Christmas beats singing in the rain

Some simply miss the point of Christmas movie classics

SHERAID

I would suggest that one of the core reasons that so many of us make the Christmas classic movies is that they are not really designed to be enjoyed as movies at all. They are designed to be enjoyed as a way of celebrating and sharing the spirit of the holidays. In that sense, these movies are not just about entertainment, but about creating a sense of community and shared experience. The magic of the movies is in the way they bring people together, creating a shared experience that is both personal and universal. And that is the true meaning of Christmas, isn't it? It's about coming together, sharing love and joy, and creating a sense of community that is both personal and universal.

Severed Hand bleeds on Mikeys

By Sean Slink

Now he's had Severed Hand will be playing Mikeys, Giras Saturday at 11am for award funding for the Silverfeast.

Singer/Guitarist Drew called the band’s music "80s pro-modern, quasi-punk.
"The elements include Drums, Guitar, Bass, and obviously me, Drew says. Mikey’s MC’s a base.

Matthew McCoy’s the singer, and the band influences include Kings, Orchid, and Druss.

The band was started by the remnants of former Mikeys band Eyvoney Every Day Show which featured Winter, Druss and McCoy. McCoy then moved on to other bands for awhile. The title came from Druss, who began with the idea of calling it Severed Head Project. "That was the least horrid name they could have a murk," Drus said, instead of calling a link.

Guitar, bass, drums, and vocals, the band assembles to present a set.

After Severed Hand finished its set, Matthew McCoy wound the tape up as he listened to the show, tossing everyone to evacuate. Then was "Our Test show, we almost died," Winter said according to Drew, McCoy and the singer were afraid they’d cause a fight.

"He said people were yelling at him and attackers were afraid for their lives.

In reality, it was McCoy who was swinging from the gas line. "He had to mainly deal with the drum line, Severed Hand had other plans. "Hopefully we can just be downtown Mikeys," Drew joked. Drew and McCoy are hoping to play a good show. "We have a new song and see if any much," Druss said.

Druss and McCoy were excited to see what many new fans the show accumulated around Moscow. He said it gave him confidence to continue making music in the local scene. "We’re just a group and we’re doing what we feel is right,” Druss said. "But you won’t see anything because you want your friends to try it."

Other bands playing in Mikey’s include Elna Ave, Ambulance, Only and Hub for Saturday’s show.

Tonight and Saturday at 7 p.m. only in the SUB.

Scoresse writes violent love letter to New York

by Barbara Sass

DETOUR

Martin Scorsese's new film, "Gangs of New York," is a love letter to one of the world's most beloved cities. New York is a city of dreams, a city of hope, a city of resilience, and a city of violence. "Gangs of New York," directed by Scorsese, is a historical tale set in 1863, during the American Civil War. The film is a vivid portrayal of New York City's immigrant neighborhoods, and it is a testament to the city's resilience and strength.

The story follows two main characters, Younger and Jim. Younger is a young Irish immigrant who is seduced by the promise of a new life in America. Jim is a wealthy New Yorker who is/routered by the chaos and violence that surrounds him. The two characters are drawn together by their desire for a better life, but their paths are注定 to intersect in a violent and tragic way.

The film is rich in detail and is a masterclass in cinematography and storytelling. It is a film that is both beautiful and brutal, a film that is both inspiring and overwhelming. "Gangs of New York" is a film that will stay with you long after the credits have rolled.

The film is a love letter to New York City, a city that has always been controversial and complex. It is a city that has always been a magnet for the hopeful and the ambitious, a city that has always been a place of dreams and reality. "Gangs of New York" is a film that captures the essence of New York City, a city that is always on the edge of something new and exciting.

From Vandals to Angles: Bill Stoneman hasn't experienced many bumps on the road to success

by Nathan Jones

Everything Bill Stoneman does seems to turn into a major story in the media. The media has surrounded the Vandals since Stoneman took over the program in 1983. It's not surprising that the Vandals have experienced a lot of bumps on the road to success.

Stoneman took over the management position for the Vandals' coach and has transformed the program into a football powerhouse. He's the only coach to win a national championship game.

Stoneman left the program in 2000 to become the AD for the University of Idaho. However, he returned in 2003 to take over the AD position and has continued to make the Vandals a success.

Stoneman's football program has won two conference championships and one national championship. He's also won several coaching awards, including the 2005 NCAA Coach of the Year Award.

The Vandals have participated in several bowl games, including the 2004 Sugar Bowl and the 2005 Rose Bowl. They've also made several appearances in the NCAA Tournament, including the 2005 National Championship Game.

Stoneman's success has not been without sacrifice. He's had to balance the demands of being a coach and an AD, and he's had to make difficult decisions in order to keep the program on track.

But Stoneman has remained committed to the Vandals, and the program has continued to grow under his leadership. The Vandals are one of the most successful programs in the NCAA, and Stoneman is a key figure in their success.

Stoneman's leadership has not gone unnoticed. He was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 2008, and he was named the NCAA Coach of the Year for the 2005 season.

Stoneman's success has come at a cost, but he's willing to make sacrifices in order to keep the Vandals competitive. He's a true leader in the world of college football, and his legacy will continue to be felt for years to come.

Boise State will keep Vandals’ hands full

By Mike Jones

The Boise State Broncos are coming off a season looking to extend their winning streak versus the Idaho Vandals to five straight. Coach Perry thinks his team can stop that from happening.

“I’m glad we have another opportunity to get this team,” Perry said. “They’re one of the better teams in the conference. We don’t play them, you only play once. If we have the chance to have the opportunity of playing this team again, so be it.”

The Broncos (5-2 overall) slipped by UI in Boise Nov. 30, winning 75-67 despite a late charge by the Vandals (3-5 overall). The Vandals were down by as much as 13 in the first half but rallied to within three by the end of the half. But a slow return through the second half sealed their defeat.

In that game Bryan Debecca led the Wazz with 17 points, nine rebounds and eight assists. He had 1-4 from range and 5-6 from the free throw line.

They’re only lost two of those games. I don’t want to have any of those games because they’re out of the mix. That’s the problem,” Perry said. “They closed out the season against a team that’s a really good basketball team.”

Perry feels that the Vandals have shown that they can rally to three digits.

Perry thinks this team has a unique opportunity to play against a team that’s a really good basketball team. It’s up to them how they deal with it. They have the opportunity to win the ball game. I don’t care how many games we win or where our program, talks off,” Perry said. “There’s nothing we can do about it. I think they’re good for the league. They’re good for the league.”

The defensive emphasis of the Vandals is finally making sense to the young group of Vandals.

“They’re starting to get it now. It’s beginning to realize that there are no days off because that can’t not do the team’s game. They’re starting not to understand the beginning of this practice and don’t understand it,” Perry said. “They’ve been a lot of love, but they don’t really understand it until they see it pay off.”

The game began at 8:30 at Bluewave Spectrum. Tip-off time was moved from its original time to work with the local TV station. The game will be held in the Idaho Dome earlier.

“I was looking for a 10:30 or 11:30 tip-off,” Perry said laughingly. “I was going to take a power nap, which I’ve been known to do.”

Phillips. He would report that fact three years later in the final game of the 1972-aseson at 2:15 a.m. over the New York Times.

“I don’t think of the mathematics that much. In baseball, they’ve taken it all away from me,” Stoneman said. “They weren’t my best numbers. Next year, they weren’t my best numbers. They don’t get me wrong, they were great dates. I know better games, games I’m prouder of than those.”

Stoneman pitched eight seasons for the Brewers, including seven full seasons and pitched in the 1972 All-Star Game. He made his way into the Hall of Fame only his career had lasted spring training of 1973. He also pitched the beginning of the end of Phillips’ career. Phillips was released over the season and in his first outing of the year he broke both feet, twisting his leg. Though he rehabbed and came back to pitch another fall岌年 and a half, his pitching arm was never the same.

They lost 10 in a row in the last half, all with either Phillips or Phillips leaving the game in the fourth inning, which didn’t do him any good in the games...

Graduates: Two degrees are better than one

by Margie Sherman

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.–(AP)–Andrew L. Lamm, a senior at University of Miami, will receive a double degree in international studies and a bachelor’s in geography. "I believe that many of today’s problems can be solved by U.S. more effectively," said Lamm, 23, who will graduate with a degree in geography and a minor in political science. "As a student of geography, I have learned to appreciate the beauty of nature and the importance of understanding the world around us. By combining these two fields, I can help to ensure that our planet is preserved for future generations.

I talked to a teacher at FSU who said you don’t major in Spanish as well, so I decided I’d do both.

Students at the University of Florida are considering taking a more active role in their education. "I think it’s important for students to be involved in their own learning process," said Jennifer H. Smith, a senior at the university. "By taking an active role, I can better understand the material and make connections that will help me in my future career."

The Computer Science Department would like to congratulate their Fall 2002 graduates.

When next week’s commencement ceremony here may be eager to shed the part of their lives known as college students, I would imagine many will feel an emotional tie to the institution as we say our last goodbyes to President Bob Shepard.

Shepherd is leaving us not just as head of our university, but also as someone who has been an incredible advocate for the University of Idaho. He has been an outstanding president and a true friend of the University of Idaho.

That’s why it’s so important that we take the time to recognize and appreciate all that he has done for us. I want to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to President Shepherd for his leadership and dedication to the University of Idaho.

I hope that his legacy will continue to inspire future generations of students and faculty to pursue excellence and innovation in all that they do. Thank you, President Shepherd, for all that you have done for the University of Idaho.
