Students protest administration's financial decisions

BY JENNY BONNER

In the multimillion-dollar debt facing the university facing the university, protests university administrators, a crowd of student protesters gathered in front of the Administration Building Wednesday. The rally was part of a larger protest against the university's proposed financial decisions being made to the administration and the rally.

Pitcher said he had never seen anything like the student protest during his six years at the university.

The rally was called to draw the media's attention to the university's proposed financial decisions. Pitcher said he had never seen anything like the student protest during his six years at the university.

As the rally began, Pitcher stood in front of the crowd talking about the problems and answering questions. Pitcher then took the microphone and announced that he had been asked to speak. Pitcher then took the microphone and announced that he had been asked to speak.

Afterwards, Pitcher called the protest "an excellent event" and said it was important that students were given a chance to speak out. Pitcher also thanked the students who came to protest.

About 200 students, faculty and staff gathered on the lawn north of the Administration Building to protest recent budget cuts throughout the university.

Additional cuts will affect UI more than other schools

"...I am just as enraged as our students face yet another cut to the quality of our education."

By JENNY BONNER

This is not an issue for the UI. Due to the financial emergency, the university is currently weighing cuts that could affect every department. The cuts could include reducing the number of staff, reducing the number of classes, and reducing the amount of money available for research.

The university is home to many departments and programs, each with its own budget and priorities. The goal is to balance the budget and ensure that all departments are able to continue operating.

The university is committed to finding ways to reduce costs without sacrificing the quality of education. This is a difficult task, but it is one that must be done in order to ensure the long-term financial stability of the university.

As we work through these difficult times, we must continue to support our students and faculty. The university is committed to providing a high-quality education for all students, regardless of their financial circumstances.

We appreciate the support of our alumni, donors, and friends. Your contributions are essential to the success of the university and the future of higher education.

Thank you for your support.

One thousand origami peace cranes folded during the bonding of Rwanda will fly by 9:30 a.m. in front of Administration on Saturday, May 17th.

The peace cranes will be an integral part of the event, which will celebrate Rwanda’s 1994 genocide and a new beginning.

They will be displayed in Friendship Square.

The paper cranes project is based on the story of Sadako Sasaki, who died of leukemia at the age of 12 after the atomic bomb was dropped on her hometown.

She folded 1,000 cranes as a symbol of hope and committed to peace.

Her spirit lives on.

The paper cranes project was started in memory of the victims of the atomic bomb.

Strange resigns from ASUI for personal and professional reasons.

By Julian Brown

Wednesday marked the end of an intense ASUI year for president pro-tem Matthew Strange.

Strange, who joined the ASUI last December 2003, has played a major role in guiding the student organization through the most intense and intense year in its history.

According to the Idaho Statesman, Strange has been a strong leader for the ASUI, helping to guide the organization through a time of intense scrutiny.

Strange has been a vocal advocate for student rights and has spoken out against issues such as the recent Oregon State University sex scandal.

Strange's resignation comes after a series of negative events for the ASUI, including the suspension of two ASUI officers and the resignation of the ASUI president.

The ASUI board of directors announced the resignation of Strange in a statement released Wednesday.

The board cited a "lack of confidence" in Strange's leadership as the reason for his resignation.

Strange has been a vocal advocate for student rights, and his resignation comes as the ASUI continues to face scrutiny.

The ASUI has been embroiled in a number of controversies in recent months, including a sexual assault scandal at Oregon State University and a lawsuit filed by Napster against the ASUI.

Strange's resignation is a blow to the ASUI, which has been working to strengthen its leadership and improve its reputation.

The ASUI board of directors has named a new interim president, and the organization is expected to continue to work through the challenges it has faced.

Despite the challenges, Strange has been a strong and dedicated leader for the ASUI, and his resignation is a loss for the organization.

We extend our thanks and best wishes to Strange as he moves on to new challenges.
the Office of Diversity and Human Rights was not the only program being cut at the university. After a $13 million cut last year, Pitcher said all programs were facing changes.

Pitcher was interrupted several times by cheers and at one point fists grabbed the microphones from the sitting president saying, "This is not his style." The Office of Diversity and Human Rights is a relatively new program, and the university is looking into reorganizing it to make it more efficient, Pitcher said. He also assured students that the program would not be cut entirely.

"We will not be eliminating the entire Office of Diversity and Human Rights," he said. "I'd love to give you a reason in writing," Pitcher said.

Students cheered when Pitcher announced that Raver would serve as the new Acting President of the ASUI Senate. Raver is a junior and will continue to serve as an ASUI senator until the December election. Raver said he would support the student's interests, but he also made it clear that he was not a candidate for the presidency.

"I'm not going to be standing up here in front of this crowd," Raver said. "I'm not going to be standing up here in front of this crowd." He then grabbed the microphone and said, "I'm not going to be standing up here in front of this crowd." He then grabbed the microphone and said, "I'm not going to be standing up here in front of this crowd."

Raver said that he was looking forward to the upcoming ASUI Senate meetings and that he would work closely with the administration to ensure that the interests of the students were represented.

During the debate, Pitcher said that the faculty and the administration were working together to ensure that the university had the resources it needed to continue to provide a quality education. He also said that the university was committed to ensuring that all students had access to the resources they needed to succeed.

"We are committed to providing all students with the resources they need to succeed," Pitcher said. "We are committed to providing all students with the resources they need to succeed." He then turned to the audience and said, "We are committed to providing all students with the resources they need to succeed." He then turned to the audience and said, "We are committed to providing all students with the resources they need to succeed."
Waving in the breeze

UF’s future is blowing in the wind

The year slowly winds down and students begin the mass evacuation to Whatever Island. The cold winds and the gray skies come with the knowledge that summer is just around the corner. It is easy to feel down and depressed because the end of the year seems so distant. However, a little cheer can be found in the knowing that the end is near and the next semester is just around the corner. A little smile can be found in the thought of the sunshine and the warmth that will come with the summer months. A little hope can be found in the knowing that the next semester will bring new opportunities and adventures.

Among the stories to tap the Argonaut headlines were the arrest of UI student Shawn Metz Al-Hussayyen, the inauguration of the new University of Idaho President Michael Kowal and the state budget cuts.

Not happy news.

Not in the least.

And the unrest is on the rise. The long, strange trip appears, for surely the economy must adjust, to offer another run-up on the stock market. Whether this is a mere extension of the same old story, maybe this year more than ever, the situation takes on new shapes, new issues and new problems waiting in the papers on the next class of underpaid students.

No one can price-divaluate through.

And the toll has been high.

But the real toll was the cost of the economy, and the cost of the budget cuts, cutbacks on the campus, and the funding for higher education waiting in the wings.

Some have said that the state budget cuts are a necessary evil, but the reality is that they are not.

This year, the state has budgeted the lowest amount of money for higher education in its history.

The state has cut funding for higher education by 20 percent, and the university has cut funding by 15 percent.

This has been a difficult year for the university, and it has been difficult for students and faculty.

But the university will survive.

And the future looks promising.

The university will continue to provide a quality education, and the state will continue to support it.

The university will continue to grow, and the state will continue to invest.

The hallmark of an opinion article is griping. I need out like the patina of this old, no I complain a lot. I tend to complain a lot. I wish people wouldn’t... you just get the point. But sometimes also like to point out that there are good things that should be looked. It’s a roll both like their coffee. I also like the communal atmosphere, complete with the moping and cortical atmosphere in the middle.

I don’t know... it’s something.
Though it seems plentiful to abide. we know it’s the best food on the planet after one has not been contacted.
I go on as and with this list of places to Moscow I’ll lose contact with people on campus for all of their best food.
Think of how much crap the employee of the Financial Aid and the Cacher’s coffee must have to deal with. Not only the crap that they are managing (they’re underpaid and over-worked), but they have to deal with both the public and money.
When I have time for respect for these places.
I also think few realize just how much work goes into the library at UI. I think of how many hours you’ve checked into moped and copied articles. Academic would be totally impossible with out the help of the three staff. I just want to thank them for all their work.
I could go on and on, thanking everyone who genuinely wants the Women’s Center, administrative assistants, the coffee shop, haripients, but I just don’t have the time. But still, think of how many people your campus life would be without them.
So, thank you to everyone who made my life here in Moscow happen, smoother, more refills-filled, whatever!

Jamb on White Bread jams on John’s Alley

by Chris Konkel

Jam On White Bread, the annual art book sale and auction at the University of Idaho, is Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 13 to 15.

Blind Date Books Sale

Blind Date Books and the Lamplighters will sell books and tapes at the sale. In the UK, books are often given as gifts on Valentine’s Day. The books are sold blind — that is, without the covers or spines being visible. The books are sold “as is” and the buyers are encouraged to open them and read them immediately. The books are sold on a first-come, first-served basis, and each book is sold for a fixed price. The sale is an annual event, and is held in a large room in the basement of a library or bookstore. The sale is open to the public and is usually well attended. The proceeds from the sale are used to support the library or bookstore. The sale typically starts in the evening and continues throughout the night. The books sold at the sale are usually a mix of fiction, non-fiction, and children’s books. The sale is a popular event, and people often look forward to it each year. The sale is a great opportunity to find unique and rare books, as well as to support the library or bookstore. The sale is a fun and social event, and people often meet new people and make new friends at the sale.
Mutant sequel X-ceeds all X-petitions

FINThe story of the war against mutant kind—a revolutionary step in mankind where people special—special

Mr. James Martin and Jacob B.

From Stan Lee's comic books to the silver screen comes another thrilling adventure into the world of the X-Men. The sequel to the popular 2000 film, X-Men, titled X-Men: The Last Stand, is directed by Brett Ratner and stars Halle Berry, Hugh Jackman, Ivana Milicevic, and Patrick Stewart. The film is set in the aftermath of the events depicted in the first film, X-Men: The Last Stand, and follows the X-Men as they face the Apocalypse, the mutant Apocalypse, who seeks revenge for the death of his son, Nightcrawler.

The plot of X-Men: The Last Stand revolves around the X-Men's struggle to prevent Apocalypse from unleashing his destructive power on the world. The film features a cast of familiar faces, including Professor Charles Xavier, Storm, and Wolverine, as well as new characters like Emma Frost and Magneto. The X-Men's mission is complicated by the presence of a group of mutants who are being exploited by a wealthy businessman, Stryker, who seeks to use their powers for his own gain.

The film's pivotal moment comes when the X-Men face off against Apocalypse, who has taken on a new form and is more powerful than ever. The X-Men, led by Professor Xavier, must use all their skills and resources to defeat the Apocalypse and save the world from destruction.

The film was released in 2006 and was met with mixed reviews from critics and audiences alike. Some praised the action sequences and the depiction of the characters, while others felt that the plot was too convoluted and the dialogue was weak. Nevertheless, X-Men: The Last Stand remains a beloved entry in the X-Men franchise and continues to be a popular choice for fans of superhero movies.

A women’s basketball game point guard

Mia Childress bodied out and who he was trying to guard. Unlike most of the other defending 5-8 guards that are on the UC Davis roster, who look to get a quick stop and then get back to their own end or allow someone else to defend Cal State’s Chaya Kittel, Childress really has a tough, last-second, head-for-the-hole disposition to her game and that’s a very good thing for the Aggies.

She finished with 11 points and 10 rebounds in her 18 minutes of work on the floor, which included 14 minutes of defensive stops and a pair of free throw attempts, helping Cal State nail off a win in the 61-56 contest.

Pacing herself

Sophomore trackster has added distances to her repertoire

For years, Coach Eustachy was always the mastermind behind the university track and field program. Now, she’s the one being paced.

The “always on the move” coach is eager to see what her students can do when she’s not around.

Eustachy has been working with the cross-country team and has been a part of the distance running program for years. Now, she’s stepping out of the way to see what her students can do.

Track season comes to a close

The University of Idaho track team is finally wound down for the outdoor season, but not before the final meet of the year. The annual Blue Cross Blue Shield Invitational meet is set for this Saturday, May 8th, at 11:30 AM at El Centro Field.

S Advice

"As coaches, we’re held to a higher standard than normal people. We’re expected to know the answers to any question that teachers and priests are." - LEONARD PERN

Coaching faux pas spawn evaluation of responsibilities

In his role as head coach, Perry has cultivated a team that is not only highly skilled but also highly motivated. Perry’s coaching philosophy focuses on building a strong bond between the players and the coaches, creating an environment where everyone feels valued and appreciated.

This week, the team has been focusing on improving their defensive skills, working on strategies to stop opposing teams from scoring. Perry believes that a strong defense is key to winning games.

The team’s next match will be against State College on Friday, and Perry is confident that with the improvements made this week, the team will be able to secure another win.

NBA fails to impress

The Los Angeles Lakers’ loss to the Utah Jazz has caused a stir in the basketball world. Many fans and analysts are disappointed with the Lakers’ performance, feeling that they have not lived up to their expectations.

The game began well, with the Lakers leading by double digits in the first quarter. However, the Jazz came back strong in the second half, taking control of the game and eventually winning by a score of 120-110.

Many fans are concerned that the Lakers’ lack of defense is a major issue, as they allowed the Jazz to score easily with their fast-paced offensive play. Others feel that the Lakers need to improve their shooting accuracy.

In the end, the Lakers’ inability to close out the game has left many fans feeling disappointed and eager to see how they will perform in future games.

1,500 grads expected to "walk the walk"

As many as 1,500 candidates for degrees and an estimated 2,500 guests are expected to attend the commencement ceremonies at the University of Idaho campus. May 9 in Falls, May 10 in Boise, May 12 in Coeur d'Alene and May 17 in Moscow.

A total of 1,738 students eligible for degrees from spring 2003 semester include 1,733 baccalaureate and 53 graduate. Undergraduate degrees are divided among 13 disciplines and graduate degrees are given in 19 disciplines.

The commencement ceremonies begin at 10 a.m. It will be preceded by an academic procession of degree candidates, faculty members and honored guests led by the Boise High Dragons Band and Procession. After an intermission, the processional will proceed to the Beaumont Alumni Hall and, finally, to the Kiddie-Kisfield Activity Center.

The keynote speaker will be Peggy Ferguson Phillips of St. Cloud, Minn., a microbiology alumna from the 1950s and a leading woman in the biotechnology industry. Her topic is "Change is inevitable, unless it's from a vending machine." The lecture will be held in the Convocation Center. The convocation begins at 8 a.m.

Honorees degrees of Doctor of Administrative Science will be presented to David Dwayne and Deyle Jacklin, Past Fellows; Gary G. Michael, Boise State; and Russell W. Reimer, Lapeer, for their contributions of outstanding and outstanding citizenship, business and community leadership and public service to the state of Idaho. The Jacklin and his company Jacklin Seed, recently acquired by the Pioneer Corp., have supported UI and its rigorous mission of research, education and outreach throughout development of the riverfront commerce Park in Post Falls. They have also given substantial support to UI athletics, science and business initiatives through volunteer leadership and contributions. With their vision and entrepreneurial flair, they have created partnerships with industry and government that support economic development in northern Idaho. Gary Michael, UI's leader of Business Resources, has helped to maintain the success of the UI Alumni Association's efforts to retain the campus in its permanent home, the J. Alberich Building. His distinguished career and contributions to the university have a remarkable impact on all of us.

Alumni of the UI Alumni Association's Class of 1959, the 50-year class of the University of Idaho, have been working hard to develop the Class of 1959 Gift for the UI Foundation.

Congratulations!

for the graduating class of 2003, a diploma can get them to the door, but the rest is up to them.

Music senior hopes work ethic will take him far

Jeremy Bowker doesn’t know where he’s going to be in a year, or five, for that matter. The senior music performance major plans to take a gap year to really get to know what he wants to do with his life.

Bowker was a Garth Band member, which he feels was the reason he was introduced to Finnish music with a rock ‘n roll twist.

“I don’t necessarily know about a career, but I’m really starting to know what I want to do, and after this next year, I’ll have a better idea,” Bowker said.

Bowker grew up in Milwaukie, Oregon, and played the drums, which included his best friend of childhood. Bowker made his way to the Garth Band, which was the official band for the University of Portland.

With Garth Band, Bowker played more gigs with the band, and made it his goal to keep music as a career.

“I think it’s going to give me the confidence to pursue music as a career,” Bowker said.

Bowker graduated from Calvillo High School in 1989. He had been playing drums since 6th grade and decided studying music in college would be a good idea.

“I was in a garage band that was really good and I thought, ‘This is what I want to do, and it’s going to be a dream come true,’” Bowker said. He had hosted good things about UL and the Lower Grand Forks Festival was a huge draw. But Bowker said the Jazz Festival had little to do with his decision.

“I did a Jazz Fest last year,” Bowker said. “But that’s OK.”

Lately, most interesting to Bowker has been the way he’s been able to study under the campus.

“Anything it was harder than I expected, ... I was terrified but kept an open mind,” Bowker said.
