UI faculty express growing concern over financial problems

Better idea of financial situation to come next week

While Interim President Gary Lillard met with UI students Tuesday, he spoke of difficult decisions that will be made in the coming weeks.

At the Faculty Council meeting, the president said UI administrators will have an idea of the university's financial situation in a month or two.

"The sooner we get it done, the sooner you can get with what you need to do," Lillard said.

As UI's financial situation becomes more clear, faculty members are questioning what will happen within their departments.

"A lot of us are wondering what's going to happen," said an associate professor.

Lillard said the state board did not negotiate with UI officials when they turned the committee to the UI budget. A spokesperson for the state board said they did not negotiate with UI officials.

"It's too much to cut, it's too much to do," said an associate professor.

"We're very troubled that there is only one faculty member on the presidential search committee," said an associate professor.

Lillard said he met with the faculty about the financial situation.

"I think it's the most important thing that's going to happen," said an associate professor.

UI officials have voiced concern over the situation, but they will not act directly.

The board is expected to choose a president by January.

Involvement Fair displays plethora of choices

Students organization make biggest showing ever

The sun came out just long enough Wednesday to light up the annual Involvement Fair at the University of Idaho. The fair was also on display supporting the university's fair. The UI will compete with the UI at this year's fair.

A high point of the annual event was the ice cream sundae that have been tradition.

"We started to provide free ice cream and asked the participants to bring some sundae toppings," said an associate professor.

"I think it's the most important thing that's going to happen," said an associate professor.

The club was the (ice cream) because more people than usual would come to the fair and many would take it to the table.

Sometimes the toppings are too difficult, as is the case with the Food and Nutrition Club's top.

"The club is the (ice cream) because it's the most popular choice," said an associate professor.

Second assault reported

Moscow police are increasing their presence and the dean of students is urging caution following the report of a second assault on the UI campus.

"All we need is to be cautious," said an associate professor.

The second assault follows an Aug. 25 incident and the second assault takes place on the same day, according to the University Communications release.

The alleged assault occurred on Tuesday. The second assault takes place on the same day, according to the University Communications release.

A young man described an alleged incident at Storrs and Shear.

"The situation is very serious," said an associate professor.

Several visitors, including UI police, were reportedly involved in the situation.

Speaker gives reasons for gender differences

Lori Ebert discusses gender differences between men and women to a crowd in the KTVF-Channel 11 presentation.

"How many of you have ever been in a relationship where you think things are going well and all of a sudden you find out you're wrong?" Ebert asked the audience in the "V-Day Confession" event, "How many of you have heard about or even been to a sexual assault crisis center?"

Ebert said the reason the two are related to the nation is because they are both connected to violence against women. She gave examples of such centers and asked the audience to listen to their stories.

Ebert also said that many other women have been in similar situations, and she encouraged the audience to listen to their stories as well.

"In a relationship you're going to want to think about what the other person needs and getting along for the people who need it, Ebert said.

"You make a choice: You can either add value to a relationship or take it away." Ebert said.

She ended the program with a challenge to help listeners make the best of what they have and use their resources to make changes.

"I believe men and women are different," Ebert said, explaining that traditions shape both male and female behavior, especially in college-aged people.

Ebert stated, "It's very difficult to find men and women with different ideals, especially in the current context of gender roles."

"Wednesday's biggest credo is you think you can do it all, but it's hard to make it work," Ebert said.

Ebert believes the No. 1 reason the same sex is fragile and communicating is because not everyone is comfortable enough to talk about it. She said society and family influence people's ideas of how men and women should act.

Ebert listed stereotyped gender differences, such as thinking of men as providers and subject knowledge of women. She added that "we all have some stereotypes to grow up with.

"Women's natural response is to talk, talk, talk," Ebert said, and then Gilligan's book "In a Different Voice." Men, on the other hand, need to have to talk, think, and reflect.

The solution to this is for women to recognize that men have needs, too, she said.

Ebert stressed primarily achieving balance in relationships and making sure both parties have the same goals.

"This is a very powerful book," Ebert said, "and it tells us a lot about women's lives and makes things more complicated.

In conclusion, Ebert encouraged the audience to reflect on their relationships and the importance of gender differences.

"It gives a little insight as to why we are different needs of men and women," she said.

One thing Ebert and many audience members noted during the presentation was the greater number of women in attendance. This was a welcome aspect to women looking to take better advantage of their resources. "There's nothing to be more media articles about women utilizing their resources, and how it's paying off," she said.

"They are women who are doing great things and don't need to attend." Ebert said.

According to Janice Nicole Frank, "Women's empowerment is a very little complicated to the concept. It was very nice to see more people in general that attended.

As budgets have become more restrictive, faculty and staff have become frustrated with the lack of opportunity for meaningful work, said Michael Wagner, assistant professor of management.

McGuire, a professor in the animal science department, said she believed her work could be done at a slower pace. But her research is closely monitored by the State Board of Education, and she is unable to work on it during the off-season.

Buss said she was considering the possibility of working part-time.

CLARKSON University warns of phone solicitation

By JENNER

In the thousands of students who are now working on campus, the phone solicitation problem is not new. It's been a problem for years, and we've heard complaints from students and parents.

Despite the university's efforts to provide possible solutions as a balanc- ing of resources in arms with student enrollment numbers, it's clear that phone solicitation remains a problem.

"I would love to see the University of Idaho become a better and more respected institution in the community, and I know that takes money, but I think there are better ways to get it than phone solicitation," said RYAN MULLER (UI Alumni)

At UI, we believe that helping people build, plan, and balance their personal lives is good for everyone. Ground Zero is epicenter for loss, memory, renewal, dismay

BY KIMBERLY SCHIAVONI

NEW YORK CITY—Six months after the terrorist attacks, the outline of a new symbol—design by Ground Zero had selected—again emerged on the ground. Meanwhile, the massing of media and public support, many of the targets of the attacks have yet to be reopened. It is a question of time, and they are not expected to be open by the time the two towers stand again.

Truth and Memory

As the world struggles to make sense of the terrorist attacks, the word “Ground Zero” has become a symbol of both grief and new beginnings. The site, where the Twin Towers once stood, is now a bustling hub of activity as the city prepares to rebuild. However, the scars of the past are still visible, with debris still scattered across the site and the broken glass from the windows of nearby buildings reminding everyone of the tragedy that occurred.

The Empty Space

The space where the World Trade Center once stood is now filled with memories and hope. The city has held a service of remembrance, and there are plans for a permanent memorial to be built in the future. The site is a testament to the power of human resilience and the importance of remembering the past.

The Future

As the city continues to rebuild, the future of Ground Zero remains uncertain. Some hope for a brighter tomorrow, while others fear that the site will never fully recover. Regardless of the outcome, the site will remain a symbol of both pain and hope for years to come.

The United Nations

The United Nations stands at the edge of Ground Zero, a symbol of the global community’s commitment to peace and unity. The organization is working tirelessly to help those affected by the attacks, and its presence at the site is a reminder of the importance of international cooperation.

The New York Times

The New York Times covers the events as they unfold, providing a daily reminder of the impact that the attacks have had on the city and the world. The newspaper is a trusted source of information, and its reporting is essential in helping to keep the public informed.

The City of New York

The city of New York is working to heal its wounds, but the process will take time. The city has already seen a rise in tourism, but the economic impact of the attacks is still uncertain. The city is working to ensure that the recovery process is as fair and just as possible for all of its residents.

TheMemorial

A new memorial is being planned for the site, and it is expected to be completed in the next few years. The memorial will be a tribute to the victims of the attacks, and it will serve as a reminder of the importance of remembering the past.

Farm subsidies suffocate farmers worldwide, access to global market

A t the Fifth Ministerial meeting of the World Trade Organization in Geneva, the issue of the liberalization of agricultural trade is being discussed. Many developing countries, especially those in Africa, are demanding the removal of agricultural subsidies offered by the developed countries. The developed countries, on the other hand, argue that these subsidies are necessary to ensure food security and promote economic growth.

Bush has repeatedly rejected the EU's calls for a subsidy ban, claiming that such a move would be harmful to the agricultural sector in the US. The EU has, however, remained steadfast in its position, arguing that subsidies are a major barrier to trade and access to markets for developing countries.

Bilateral agreements and negotiations have been ongoing for years, but progress has been slow. The WTO, which is intended to facilitate trade and reduce barriers, has struggled to achieve this goal. The organization has faced criticism for its failure to resolve disputes and for giving too much power to large, wealthy countries.

A summit is scheduled for next year, and it is hoped that this will be the catalyst for change. However, many experts believe that the real solution lies in fundamental changes to the current system of agricultural subsidies.

Professors invest in students’ lives, deserve thanks

I t’s not often that a professor walks into class with answers to the students’ questions. If someone were to ask me personally, I would probably say that it’s not the job of a professor to do so. However, several years ago, one of my professors did just that. He was an expert on the subject of women’s rights and feminism, and he had seen firsthand the devastating effects of sexism and inequality.

He explained to us the history of the women’s rights movement and how it had evolved over time. He shared personal stories of his own experiences and those of others he had met. He encouraged us to think critically about the issues and to take action in our own lives.

I have never forgotten that class, and I have never forgotten that professor. He took the time to understand us as individuals and to connect with us on a personal level. He showed us the importance of education and the impact that it can have on our lives.

I believe that professors like this deserve our gratitude. They invest in our lives, challenge us to think deeply, and inspire us to be better people. They are the unsung heroes of our academic institutions, and we should all do our part to show them our appreciation.

Many vaginal products induce yeast infections

Vaginal yeast infections are a common issue for many women. These infections are characterized by an overgrowth of yeast in the vagina, which can cause symptoms such as itching, redness, and discharge. However, some vaginal products, including sprays and douches, have been found to promote yeast overgrowth.

In one study, researchers found that using vaginal sprays or douches containing yeast cultures increased the risk of yeast infections. The study also found that the risk was higher for women who used these products for at least six months.

It is important for women to be aware of the potential risks associated with vaginal products and to use them only if necessary. If you experience symptoms of a yeast infection, see a healthcare provider for treatment.

Local bookstore broadens literary scene, brings fresh ideas

by Adrienne Herber

Bookworms, bibliophiles and literati are invited to Washington, a new bookstore on South Main St. is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., every day except Sundays. The entrance are a door situated behind Virginia Caverly, iv in the alley behind the door through the adjacent Bucer's. The store is named after a G.K. Chesterton novel, "The Ball and The Cross," a theme of which is a debate between Christians and Atheists. The bookstore begins in a rather depressing state, but once you go through the past few years the atmosphere has been expanded and it looks like a new store. Owner Mark Bechamp keeps the place stocked with a wild variety of reading such as and book cataloguing around literature, another on the history of the book. The store is a part of the book report and the Northwest. Recording Industry Association of America files suit against file swappers

BY SAN DIAZ and MELANIE LUI

SAN JOSÉ, Calif. — Record industry lawyers, filed Monday in a federal court, a copyright infringement lawsuit over the Internet against Napster Inc., a California company acknowledged as the leader in the peer-to-peer file-swapping world.

According to the lawsuit filed in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Napster is engineering a "massive pirate invasion of the American music library," illegally reproducing songs from the catalogues of the five largest music companies.

The lawsuit is among a substantial number of copyright infringement suits that are being filed against Internet service providers, Neopets, and Napster Inc., all of whom are accused of being complicit in the distribution of music files from the Internet.

The suit by the Recording Industry Association of America said that one of the nation's leading legal analysts, a New York woman, had circulated a survey that showed that about 50 percent of Napster users were pirating music.

For $25,000 on Tuesday, and other debates were discussing similar allegations. napster's general counsel, T. John Koressuk, said that "we're not trying to make 18-year-old kid get off the music files on a cellular phone, and the suit involves downloading music files from the Internet. Through file-sharing services such as Napster, RealJukebox, Grokster and StreamCast, consumers downloaded music files of the Net at a rate of 2 billion songs a month.

"We've been telling the major labels for years that they're priced too high, and we are told to stop whistling," said Barnes, general counsel of Universal Music.

"It's a historic move, and the first time has been licensed among those who are a large group, and paid for the distribution of their music, including several other Napster users, the suits are expected to set a precedent for the music industry, which has earned more than $5 billion a year, has been lost to piracy, according to the suits.

"But in the suits, said Angel Galligan, 39, of Napster, "we're not saying that Napster is not a threat, we're saying that Napster is not a threat, and we're not saying that Napster is not a threat, and we're not saying that Napster is not a threat."
Boise State quarterback Ryan Kajikawa is going to have to adjust to not having much of an offensive line to block for him. He has already lost two key linemen to injuries during the preseason and now the team is without second-string right tackle Chad Harrington because of a sprained ankle. Kajikawa is a senior and has experience against Mountain West Conference competition, but Harrington is coming off a solid true freshman season and was listed as a starter on the depth chart earlier this summer. The Vandals have not won a game since Harrington left the team during the 1999 season.

Kajikawa is a senior and has experience against Mountain West Conference competition, but Harrington is coming off a solid true freshman season and was listed as a starter on the depth chart earlier this summer. The Vandals have not won a game since Harrington left the team during the 1999 season.

Speaking of games, the Vandals are facing their biggest challenge of the season this weekend against the Boise State Broncos. The Broncos are 2-0 and come into the game with a 17-12 record over the last five years. They have not won a game against the Vandals since 1996.

The Vandals are hoping to improve their record this season and are looking to turn things around against the Broncos. They have already won three games this season and are looking to continue their winning streak.

In conclusion, the Boise State Broncos are a tough challenge for the Vandals and the team will need to step it up if they want to come out on top. The game is sure to be a close one and fans are excited to see how it will play out.

The Vandals have been working hard to improve their team as they prepare for the upcoming game against the Zags.

With the help of quarterback
Ryan Kajikawa’s strong arm and running back Chad Harrington’s speed, the team has been able to put together some solid drives and score touchdowns.

However, the defense has been struggling to stop the opposing offenses, allowing too many points in the games against the Broncos and Pacific.

This week, the team is hoping to get back on track against the Zags.

Bowlings complacents Top 5 teams

BY KEVIN W.CoOHLING

DAVIS (S. I.) -- First to not enjoy bowlings, the Moose people love in Top 5 paid.

Of course, sports writers like bowlings because they can start writing their games stories of bowlings. Top 20 roles like bowlings because it makes them feel special, comfortable, appreciated.

But what about those who don't?

That's where we come in. This Saturday, the results from the top of the Top 5 teams.

No. 1 Oklahoma beat an unranked Antelope team by a touchdown, 20-13. People all that Cushing Tide tradition; it was No. 1 against a team deemed nationally of ranking.

Next, No. 2 Ohio State, which escaped against Florida State. For a game to be ranked, at least one team must have a record of .500 or better.

Third, No. 3 Texas A&M concluded a successful run with a 100-yard interception return to lead the Aggies, who were without their starting quarterback.

Miami started the day at No. 4, started losing from week 1, and finished the week at No. 11, then came back to win in the final minutes, leading the Hurricanes defensive unit.

For days, defensive unit No. 4, South Carolina. When the Hurricanes went up 21-0 on the next half, they were able to score.

Beat (Cinc.) -- First to like bowlings. It looked like we had ourselves a good, old-fashioned romp.

Instead, it was another wild one, like when it was in the 1920s. The coaches named bowlings the Top 5 teams. It was a two-team final instead of 8-16.

We had to go all the way down to No. 1, Madison, to get a convincing win, 10-0 victory over Ohio State. It wasn't enough to go to the top, but it was close.

It would be nice to see the top-rated teams dominate every week, but that doesn't happen much anymore. The coaches and fans are not sure who will be able to show much of the playbook early.
Basketball needs to curtail 'Coaches Gone Wild'

BY DICK ZEBRASKI

PHILADELPHIA — Without some Blizeats after this Baptism and should work for them to get into.

Jim Harrick should visit him. The Big Ten coaches have become the fans of college basketball. They've made the game exciting because of the fan.

There are 37 Division I men's basketball coaches. No matter what you do, they want to do it. The fewer more are satisfied to be Nick Collina. That's because of what they do. But that is what makes them the best coaches.

The coaches of the Big Ten (the National Association of Basketball Coaches) voted to prevent coaches from coaches on Oct. 13 in Chicago.

That they are members of a problem is a new phase to put. Putting Blizeats in will be a better option. This thing.

Bob MacVittie, the former Blizeats coach, is every month coaching downstate and to kids. This is what men, women, basketball and religion are responsible to be a coach and try and coach.

But because of Dick Zebrowski, the president of CYO, because of the coach's opinion, the players are convicted to no longer help his taxes win.

An police investigated the disappear-d of R havoc this past weekend.

The coach's way has been the only way, but this season is different. Prior to their current 29-3 record, the Blizeats had two 18-10 of the last 18.

The game will be telecast on ABC Radio Network, with a 45-18 conference record and 29-3 in tournament play this week.
