City Council fills its dance card

By Lyle Thompson

Four Monroe City Council members who were elected Tuesday night have each expressed interest in keeping close ties with UI students. John Dickinson, Jack Hill and Linda Pull were all four-year seats and Nancy Cheney captured one of the two-year seats.

Each was able to cast three votes and the candidates with the most votes were elected to four-year terms on the council. Dickinson received 21 percent of the vote, Hill earned 15 percent and Linda Pull earned 13 percent.

The fourth seat is a two-year seat, which three candidates competed for. Nancy Cheney beat incumbent Mouse Busby by earning 54.9 percent of the vote.

The students have made it clear that they want more contact with the university. Dickinson, who heads planning and development, and Dick Stimmel, who runs the UI-owned coffeehouse, are already working to make connections with the students.

"The students need to make sure that they have somebody they can talk to or feel comfortable talking to..." said Dick Stimmel, assistant director of the UI-owned coffeehouse.

local business: comments: actions against stores are slanderous

By Lyle Thompson

Gay Greenfield and his business partners, George Kong and Jack Scholtz, have explained their intentions.

Greenfield owns Buer's Coffee House Pub with Kong and Scholtz in downtown Monroe. He is the proprietor of Greenfield Coffee Drive Thru. Saturday the employees of Buer's, Greenfield Coffee and Cafe awoke to find the clientele of their stores plastered with 3-by-4-inch stickers that read, "Burn this vermin out of coffee. We have lost our home."

Greenfield said there were also stickers placed on various horizontal surfaces, such as light posts, newspaper stands and trash cans in the downtown area.

Greenfield said he believes the perpetrators are UI students. And his businesses have been targeted because he is a member of Christ Church in Monroe. That's also where he first met Kong and Scholtz.

"It's a conspiracy. We've had a lot of things happen," Greenfield said.

The coffee shop was open Friday morning.

Greenfield said Wilson does not confer retain and was trying to write an uncollected history of the Civil War that was free from liberal revisionism. Greenfield doesn't understand why he is the target of a public backlash.

"I just have to stop and think, I have been here for 28 years and it's really amazing at what kind of job it is, saying it was a conspiracy on slavery," Greenfield said.

Greenfield said he is against racism in all forms. He referred to the love he had adopted daughter Barbara, who has a mixed-race son, Jose.

"I mean we still have a lot of racism, but I think that we're doing a lot better," Greenfield said.

Solley’s Alliance stays open thanks to local aid

The Associated Students of Moscow (ASUI) held a free pizza fundraiser at the University’s new student center on Saturday, raising $2,750 to help support Sojourner’s Alliance, the campus homeless shelter.

“We’re thrilled,” said Downtown Manager Troy Fagan, who was responsible for organizing the event. “The year is about to end, and we’re still having fundraising, and tonight was very successful.”

The pizza fundraiser was held in the University Symphony’s “Downtown” building, which was recently renovated as a new student center.

“Tonight was our last fundraiser of the year,” Fagan said. “We got a lot of donations, and it’s great to see so many people coming out to support Sojourner’s.”

Sojourner’s Alliance is a local nonprofit organization that provides emergency shelter and support services to individuals and families in need. The fundraiser was held in an effort to raise money for the shelter.

“We’re excited to have such a great turnout,” Fagan said. “We’ve been working hard to raise money for Sojourner’s, and tonight was a big success.”

The NRA posted a petition to vote on an amendment to the Constitution, which popularized Americans in support of the Second Amendment. However, the petition was published on the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)'s website, which opposes any amendment to the Second Amendment.

In response to the petition, the ACLU's president, Jeane Kirkpatrick, said, "We are not opposed to the right to bear arms, but we are opposed to any amendment to the Second Amendment that would restrict the rights of the people to carry arms for self-defense."
The good news is we seemed to have bottomed out in our sustained three-decade decline in language acquisition.

Even with the jump, foreign language study in America's public schools lagged far behind what the U.S. average was in the 1960s, "the peak," says Schoenberg. "Today, more than a quarter of all the language programs that are in place are in decline, which means we're going to have a lot of programs that are going to go away, and the ones that survive will be smaller,"

The study notes that although Spanish, French and German still dominate the language student population, English is "the fastest-rising language," accounting for 40 percent of growth in foreign language programs.

The study was prompted by the passage of the No Child Left Behind Act in 2001, which required schools to prove they were giving their students adequate instruction in reading, writing, mathematics, science, technology, and English as a second language.

Schoenberg said UI faculty, alumni and retirees founded the language study because they "were really frightened by the results."

The study also found that foreign language programs were in trouble because of budget cuts, especially at the high school and middle school level. But in college, language programs were also "at a critical juncture," Schoenberg said. In fact, "over the last few decades, we've seen the number of language and literature majors decline dramatically," Schoenberg said.

Schoenberg said the study of foreign languages is more than just an exercise in verbs and vocabularies. Rather, it's a unique window into another world.

"Through German I get a feeling for a way of life that is different from my own," he said. "I'm learning how they think and live when I'm learning their language."
Admitting flawed tradition

College students should consider merit, by not status

Large college admission is so fast century. Thanks to fast and quick processes by both Democrats and Republicans, college and universities may be more transparent in the future about their practices of accepting or not accepting "legacy" students (those with family heritage). One criticism that enrollment rates should be adjusted to reflect changes in the enrollment rates. For a third of the states, [the] aggregate college attendance statistics for this year are not significant.

Perhaps Biblical view of humanity isn't all clear

Dear Editor,
A fellow believer in the Lord has been very harsh in his attack on the idea of "humanistic science." He has been attacking evolution and science in general. I have not been able to find many other Christians who agree with him. Is there any other religious view that you have found helpful in this discussion?

Mind your own business
Dear Editor,
The Bible says that we should not concern ourselves with the affairs of others. Is this possible in today's society, where people are so interconnected and social media allows us to see what others are doing everywhere? I read a book recently that discussed how social media is changing the way people interact, and it highlighted the importance of looking inward instead of outward. What do you think about this?

U.S. policies shun international students

What's the best way to increase understanding among young people? According to the State Department, the answer is to make it easier for international students to come to the United States. One recent issue is the number of international students returning to the United States. A recent study by the Institute of International Education found that in the last year, 14,406 international students returned to the United States. This is a decrease of 13% from the previous year. On the other hand, the number of international students entering the United States has been stable over the last year, at 1.2 million.

Show heats things up for food bank benefit

by Sean Olsen

The Moscow Food Bank is getting ready to turn up the heat in the form of Melting Pot, a fund-raising event that will be held 4-7 p.m. today at the Moscow Social Club above Q's.

D ance is one of the most common forms of artistic expression, but it is also just as likely to be a source of joy and happiness as it is a cause for distress. In the case of the Moscow Food Bank's Melting Pot event, the dance is meant to be a way to raise money for a good cause.

As part of the Melting Pot event, the Moscow Food Bank will be hosting a dance competition, which will feature both professional and amateur dancers. The competition will be judged by a panel of judges who will be selected from among the local community. The winner will be announced at the end of the event, and the prize will be a cash award.

In addition to the dance competition, the Melting Pot event will also feature a silent auction, live music, and a variety of food and drinks. All proceeds from the event will go directly to support the Moscow Food Bank's mission of providing food assistance to those in need.

The Moscow Food Bank is a non-profit organization that provides food assistance to individuals and families in the North Palouse region. They are always looking for ways to increase their funding and support, and events like Melting Pot are an important part of their fundraising efforts.

If you are interested in attending the Melting Pot event, you can purchase tickets online or at the door. For more information, please visit the Moscow Food Bank's website or call them at 509-525-3825.

Palouse turns dramatic this weekend

by Ashley Herbst

D rama is a way of life in the Palouse. From the vibrant and colorful community events to the intimate and thought-provoking productions at the local theater, there is always something going on that will entertain and engage audiences of all ages.

This weekend is no exception, with several exciting drama events taking place throughout the region. Whether you're looking to enjoy a night out at the movies or want to experience a live theatrical performance, there is something for everyone.

First up is the performance of "Inland Folk" by Vanya and Sonia and Masha and Spike, which will be held at the Moscow High School Auditorium on Friday, November 29. The show is directed by Marie Johnson and features a talented cast of local actors. The story follows the lives of two sisters and their younger brother, who are trying to weather the ups and downs of life in the Russian countryside.

Next weekend, the Moscow High School will host a production of "Our American Girl," which will be held on Saturday, December 2. The play is based on the book by Karen Hesse and is directed by Marie Johnson. The cast is headed by Brian Traylor, Cara Myers, and Anna Daniels. The story follows a young girl who must confront the harsh realities of life on the frontier.

Finally, the Moscow High School will present a production of "The Trojan Women," which will be held on Sunday, December 3. The play is directed by Marie Johnson and features a talented cast of local actors. The story follows the lives of the Trojan women who are forced to surrender to the Greeks after their city is destroyed.

These are just a few of the exciting drama events taking place in the Palouse this weekend. Whether you're a drama fan or just looking for something new to try, there is something for everyone on the list.

Disney's latest is barely bearable

Review

Disney's latest adventure epic "Brother Bear" is the story of Kenai, a young American Indian who kill bears, and his golden bear cub, Baloo. Kenai is in search of a "medal of honor" for his new friend Baloo. However, a tabby "medal of honor" for his new friend Baloo. Baloo then becomes a "medal of honor" for his new friend Baloo. Instead, he follows a tabby "medal of honor" for his new friend Baloo. The story follows "Brother Bear" as he goes on an epic journey from the Scottish Highlands to the American Wild West. Throughout the film, "Brother Bear" confronts his own fear of the unknown, and learns to appreciate the beauty of nature and the importance of friendship.

UI plans for intramural upgrades

By Tylis Bounds

Intramural participants voiced their desire for larger intramural facilities and felt that there would be enough facilities for next fall.

"The students told us they went to a larger season, so this is what we will give them," UI intramural sports assistant Roger Wilcox said. "This complex will be in use next fall for sure."

The complex will be located between Quad Fields to the north and the Kibbe Dome to the south.

The complex will contain four full-size outdoor fields and two indoor fields.

"These lights will allow us to schedule games later in the season," Wilcox said. "This was impossible before due to the time it gets dark later in the season."

The two outdoor fields will be used by the football team for practices from 3:30-6:30 p.m., but other than that the intramural and recreation department will have full control over their use.

"We also have a larger number of students who participate because of the decreased conflict with class time and early evening time that currently exists," Wilcox said. "It just makes sense for us to stay true to the intramural sun, and any student group or organization will have to reserve a field for its own purposes."

The recreation department hopes the softball complex will give students something they can get excited about and increase support for the proposed complex."

"We believe it will give the students a sense of place, and do so much of what they need;

The total cost of the complex will be $15 per student to build and fund. We are asking for $17 to begin from the board of education and realistically looking to get $5."

If passed, the fee increase would be the beginning of either small increase to student fees until the UI was fully repaired or another source of revenue to build the complex, again, Wilcox said.

"If six years from anyone will put this to completion and we continue as scheduled," Wilcox said.

Student feelings toward the proposed project are mixed.

"I don't see why we need another field. We need to improve existing fields. Why do we need another field to do what we can already do?"

John Wotruba, snorkeling coach, said, "I think just improving what we have instead of getting a big field.""I would like to see what the new fields will look like," freshwater biological science major Chad Spencer said. "I think it's a reason to keep active while at school."

Vandals knock off ranked conference foe

By Mark Williams

The University of Idaho women's basketball team has been selected to play in the Women's Basketball Conference (WBC) championship game.

The Vandals won the match, in four games, with a score of 28-23. It was the second straight win for the Vandals, who have now won three straight games.

The Vandals were led by sophomore guard Skye Barham, who scored three points in the game.

"I thought we could have won this game, but it was a great game," Barham said. "We made too many errors. We didn't play well, and we worked with it and we didn't give up."

The Vandals were able to use their depth and ability to pass the ball, including a 10-point lead in the second half, to stay in control of the game.

"The team is coming together," Barham said. "We're ready to go. We can't always carry it over on the road."

When you go out on the road it's tough to play in these environments," she said. "They had a game plan for us, but they were unable to do that."

"I think we played well in the second half. We were able to control the game," Barham said. "We were able to control the game."

"The conditions here is awesome," junior guard coach Sarah Moon said. "It's tough to play in these conditions."

The Vandals are the only team in the conference to have won two games in a row.

The Vandals will next play in the conference championship game on Saturday, March 13, at 7 p.m. at the Taco Bell Coliseum in Idaho Falls.

TALAHASSEE, Fla. (U-WIRE) — If history is any indication, the “Tigers” in the world of college football may soon find themselves wearing white coats instead of the traditional stripes.

The best of the best has been variously considered the No. 1 team in Florida State University Seminoles since Saturday.

And, as the No. 1 team, the Seminoles have had since 1959. Tommy Tallahassee, the hand that thumps Tommy Tallahassee, the hand that thumps the hand at the hands of the top-ran Seminoles days after the game, the hand that won the game, the fourth quarter lead in Tallahassee, Florida.

The hand that won the game, 44-36 in total yards. Willie Simmons accounted for 243 total yards, the most...
