American Indian Studies Program provides link between UI and local tribes

BY BRIAN PADDY

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of stories on the American Indian Studies Program at the University of Idaho. The series will focus on interdisciplinary work that is being done in the American Indian Studies Program.

The American Indian Studies Program at the University of Idaho has been in existence for a little over four years, but the program has a longer history than that. The program's origins can be traced back to the 1960s, when the university began offering courses in Native American studies. The program was officially established in 1969, when the university received a grant from the federal government to support its Native American studies program.

The program's mission is to promote understanding and appreciation of Native American cultures and to foster cross-cultural learning and cooperation. The program offers courses in a variety of fields, including anthropology, history, political science, and education. The program also sponsors a number of events, including a annual Native American arts and culture festival and a annual Native American studies symposium.

Funding format aims to increase efficiency

With a new ASUI funding process in place, the outlook for funding and organization activities is improved. The ASUI has been working with organizations to identify and fund projects that align with ASUI's mission and values.

Ensuring resources are allocated effectively for the placement of funding, which is a wise use of the available funds to many sectors and endeavors, is also necessary. In the current environment, it is crucial to ensure the maximum amount of funding is deployed towards the advancement of the university's objectives.

UI offers sign language course

Course packets, e-reserve next targets

by Ruth Purdy

Copyright, said, will be the issue in one of the most hotly debated topics today. To date, most arguments have dealt primarily with digital music, but another front is appearing on campus campuses, especially those with larger, more diverse populations. Many administrators believe that the market will ultimately favor the students, who often are willing to spend less for materials than their professors. The issue is particularly clear at both types of programs.

Both the UIL Library and professors and said they do not break the copyright with the information they distribute and would not seek to interfere with the way in which people were said.

"All the materials we use do not have copyright permission for," said Paul Voyce, head of the Learning Library service, and the library follows those guidelines, including protecting the works with passwords and removing access for only on-campus use.

"Publishers contribute to the quality of information and we are used to work with publishers to protect their rights while delivering access," Voyce said.

"If there is a way for us to do our own reserve system, we would like to," Voyce said, referring to the change in reserve policy for the library. "For what they distribute, the library's is about 30 percent, but professors' fees vary widely. However, articles don't always nore these titles and course materials can be covered by the copyright law," Voyce said. "Other materials can be used under e-reserve." Eligibility for fair use is determined by four factors. What will be the material be used for? What is the purpose of the content of the material? How much of the material is used in some consideration of the effect on the market value of the materials? The emphasis is placed on educational use and factual documents.

The guidelines for e-reserves mostly that all e-reserves will be covered if the material is not copyrighted, which forms the basis of the remainder of the guidelines. All e-reserve systems should also contain notice against online distribution of works.

"It's a great help to us," said Larry Goff, assistant director of the Learning Library. "It's a great help to us, and we are very grateful for the change in the policy."

"That's why we do it," said Voyce. "We believe in education, and we believe in helping people learn."

"We're very pleased with the change," said Voyce. "We've been working on this for a long time, and we're very happy with the results."

Assaults could be prevented

Dear Editor: I have recently read about the sexual assault on or near the campus. I had wanted to point out that all of us have a role in preventing these incidents and reducing the number of assaults in the United States and in the community. We can do this by being respectful of others and avoiding putting ourselves in situations where we are more likely to be at risk.

I would like to point out that there are also cases of sexual assault that involve individuals who are already in a relationship. The term "consent" is often used to describe these situations, but it is important to remember that consent does not always mean that an individual is comfortable with the situation. It is important to communicate clearly and respectfully with your partner about your feelings and boundaries.

We can all work together to create a safer environment for yourself and others.

Sincerely,

Do you believe Congress should give President Bush $87 billion for continued support in Iraq? Why? Do you have better solutions? How do you feel the United States is faring in the war there?

"No, I think that the president should be held accountable for the war that we now fight.

Josh Ball

government affairs

"No, maybe had been the outcry in the past, and we need to keep that up.

Patrick Simonsen

"I think Congress should give President Bush $87 billion for continued support in Iraq. The support in the United States is vital to our soldiers. We need to keep up support, but I think it should be more evenly distributed.

Octavio Kirman

Anonymous 4 doesn't disappoint campus crowd

BY RILEY GLASSMANN

Mediterranean Anonymous 4 — a chamber music ensemble — took the stage at WSU Auditorium Thursday night to a sold-out crowd.

While some might be the first to bring a tirade of bad news about the weather, this week’s forecast on campus is pretty good. The Palacios is not particularly exciting, nothing exciting this week, but the weather is fine.

On Friday, WSU is bringing in a unique ensemble that’s definitely going to last a while. Matthew’s all group, Stingshark, will perform at the release of their seminal album, Matthew’s Epic Movie. Apparently, they get up with a few for this theater and rock out on the go, because they started making rounds playing for having just released an instrumental group, Definitive. Pansanna is coming to WSU with Definitive and The PAH.

On the bright side, they’re the only ones to have their own theme song.

Join them in the music scene, and they’re going to be the start of a new era. Matthew’s Epic Movie is Opening Night, the fourth album of Matthew’s group, Stingshark.

The release of Stingshark is a Night in the Life of an auditorium, where no one’s idea of the beautiful, but Matthew’s all group, Stingshark, are the last in line to buy their own album. Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!”

As you head to the auditorium, it’s obvious to see what you’ll want to buy them, and you’ll be in for a treat. The show starts at 3 p.m., and tickets are a little short to go, but you have them in advance at the CDU. On the bright side, you’ll be able to see the whole show.

Following the lead of Matthew’s Epics, Boyd, will release an album in the near future. Matthew’s is the second member of the Dave Matthews Band to go solo with his recent "Snow Bow."

Matthew’s Epic Movie was released in 2003, and it was the lead single. In fact, Matthew’s Epic Movie was written with Boyd in mind.

Matthew’s newest move is to lay down a new album of strings, and he has created a new section in his life. He has added a new member to his band, a new singer, and a new drummer for Matthews. After moving to Seattle with his wife and two daughters, Matthews met the singer in his life. He has an amazing voice, and he is able to be better than his first. Matthews’ recent move to Seattle is starting to show, as he was United in his country. Matthews’ most recent album, "Snow Bow," has been described as "a dream come true for Matthew’s fans."

Price slashes will never save the evil emperors of pop

In October the largest distributor of music, Universal, is due to release a five-disc set of Nirvana "Nevermind," which is generally considered a pop classic.

For years the music industry giants have been apathetic to the underdogs, and a new generation of fans has been forced to turn to bootlegging, downloading, and pirate sites to get the music they love. But with this new release, Universal is taking a step towards the future.

The $199.99 set will include the original album, as well as remastered versions and a range of bonus material. The release is expected to make a significant impact on the music industry.

"This is a game-changer," said one industry expert. "It shows that the music industry is finally starting to take the online market seriously."

The move has been met with mixed reactions. Some fans are excited about the new music, while others are concerned about the impact on artists and the overall industry.

"I'm happy to see Universal finally getting with the times," said music lover John Smith. "But I'm worried about the long-term effects on the industry."

Others are more optimistic.

"This is a great opportunity for Universal to show that they understand the online market," said another industry expert. "If they can make this work, it could be a huge win for the music industry as a whole."

Whatever happens, one thing is clear: the music industry is in a state of flux, and the future is uncertain. Only time will tell how this new release will impact the industry and its fans.

Nelson passes excellence, legacy to underclassmen

by Jake Rosen
"It's been a magical season," said Emily Nelson, UI's senior defensive end. "We've never been this good for so long."

The Vandals began the season with a 3-1 record, but the team's success has been consistent since then. Nelson has been a key player in the team's rise, leading the nation in sacks with 16.5. She has also been named to several all-conference teams.

"It's been a great ride," Nelson said. "I've had a lot of fun with the team, and I'm excited to see what we can accomplish in the future."

Triathletes prepare for competition, head to Walla Walla on Saturday

BY BETTY DAHLQUIST

Although the main season for triathloning has ended, the Walla Walla Triathlon Club members are still active in the Whitman For All (W4F) Triathlon series. The triathlon will be held at 7 a.m. on Tuesday, May 28 in Whitman College. There will be 300 participants in the triathlon. The course will include 9 miles of running and 11 miles of biking. After the race, the computers will be available on the race course.

Walla Walla Triathlon Club provides an excellent training ground for athletes interested in triathlon. The club is a competitive entity that trains members to prepare for their seasons. The club is currently available for training sessions and triathlons. It is open to anyone interested.

Contact the club at 338-0458. The club is located at 1000 W. 15th St. in Walla Walla.
