Incoming chief financial officer welcomes new challenges

The University of Idaho will be hiring a chief financial officer this summer to replace departing Vice President Jerry Rubin, who has left the state to become president of the University of Kansas.

According to acting President Gary Showers, a new chief financial officer will be hired by July 1. Showers said Rubin had the job for 11 years and his departure has led to some new responsibilities for the university. Showers said Rubin was chosen for the job because of his experience and leadership skills.

Showers said Rubin's departure is due to work and family concerns.

"We're looking for someone who has the experience and knowledge to lead the university in financial matters," Showers said. "We want someone who can work closely with our administration and with our students to ensure that the university is financially strong and able to provide the best education possible for our students."

Women's Center employee makes visitors feel at home

By WEATHER CONDON

She makes everyone feel wel- come by greeting them at the front desk or a self-selection help.

Emily Gray is the academic coun- selor for the Women's Center, helps students, and if she feels that she can help, she always does.

"I just feel very comfortable," she said. "I just feel very comfortable being in the Women's Center, being with the students."

She helps to make people feel like they are part of a community, not just a group of people.

Working 10 hours a week, she helps many students and is known as a friendly face and a helpful one.

"I just feel very comfortable," she said. "I just feel very comfortable being in the Women's Center, being with the students."
Prison abuse scandal illustrates U.S. incompetence

The blame game has become popular bipartisan political fare, the constant finger pointing and taking responsibility for current events and policy failures. To date, nothing in the post-9/11 quagmire can be attributed to such a scapegoat as the President of the United States. White House Intelligence communities (but has anyone defined for the public what these communities are?) have provided policy makers with hyperbole and information, the Democrats are responsible because they voted to give the President of the United States more power over the military and all of the territories of the world, and the Republicans are at fault for not being able to say no to such powers for the president. Neither, of course, have the "say no" models been accused of incompetence or complicity.

Americans have undertaken in Iraq. This is the war we have to fight, and we have to do it right. Say the "few bad apples" really are responsible for the torture and humiliation of detainees in the Abu Ghraib and other prisons in Iraq. If that is the case, then the power of the President over the military leaders and the threat hed command if we can’t con- trol the entire military is so small, so tenuous, so far away from the detentation center in a war zone.

It is not a matter of what any individual soldier, but the entire military, believes about Abu Ghraib and other American detention facilities in Iraq. The soldier-superior relationship and the attitudes of the commanders paint a picture of what the military leadership and the officers believe about the military in Iraq. Without the cooperation of the military leaders and the chain of command if we can’t con- trol the military, the public is led to believe that the detention center in a war zone is not secure, and the United States is not a democracy even as we declare that it is.

Critics of the administration might believe that this is the case, and it is not. The United States is a democracy, and the military leadership seems to believe this as well. However, the American military is also the cornerstone of American society, and the military leadership is the cornerstone of society. The military leadership is the cornerstone of society, and the military leadership is responsible for the military leadership.

The military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the detainees, and the American military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the military leadership. The military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the prisoners, and the American military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the prisoners. The military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the military leadership, and the American military leadership must be responsible for the abuse of the military leadership.
