MISSIONS.MEN HAVE PLAYED EXCELLENT BALL, AND ARE DETERMINED TO WIN

Both Teams in Good Condition and Will Put Up Game Fights

The silver and gold eleven journeys to Walla Walla next Wednesday to take on Whitman's privileged aggregation in a battle to be staged on the Missionaries home grounds on Thanksgiving day and although Whitman has failed to crash into the "win column" this season Coach Griffith is expecting a real scrap, one that will keep his warriors hurrying from kick-off to the final whistle.

The Missionaries showed good stuff against W. S. C. and although the reports say they were outplayed, the Pullum aggregation only trimmed them by a single point. They will be ready to put up the battle of their lives on Turkey day and they expect to win.

None of "Pink's" warriors were seriously hurt in the bruising struggle put up on G. A. C. last Saturday although the ever-present "cleaning-house" is still troubling some of the men.

The team has been put through some hard scrimmaging practice with the scrub during the past week and it should be in its best shape of the season when it goes against Whitman. The bench should be given a resting sends-off Wednesday just to show that the school believes in their ability to slam Whitman into utter gridiron oblivion.

Freshmen Players Make Their First Appearance

Have you noticed the casts of the Freshman plays on the bulletin board? Aren't you interested? It is characteristic of the spirit that exists on campus that their play should be the first of the "season," and not the least affair.

They have chosen to produce three of the short Irish plays lately made so famous by the Dublin players. Although the Freshmen players may be scarce by upperclassman with dramatic inclinations, still you may trust them not to dishonor the record of their predecessors, for Irishmen and Freshmen have always many things in common, not the least of these perhaps, being "the wearing of the green." So they have chosen wisely and appropriately and with an eye to interesting a large audience. Far better everybody has read with interest of the revival of Irish literature, and of the thrilling efforts of the Dublin players to bring the real spirit of Ireland onto the stage, where the best comically of the non-literate and the sentimental lady singer have been all too rare. In this connection, too, the name of W. S. C. Yeats, who, with a host of others have been familiar and beloved, and it will be with a great deal of delight that the people of the University and Moscow welcome "The Land of Heart's Desire." "The

INSTRUCTIVE TALKS ON SOCIALISM

LAST LECTURE ON SOCIALISM REVEALED WEAKNESSES OF THE THEORY

Prof. Lewis defines his attitude as hostile to the teachings of socialism.

Thursday afternoon Prof. Lewis delivered his third and last lecture on the subject, "Socialism," in which he pointed out the weaknesses of socialism and some of its fallacies.

Last the charge might be raised that he championed the cause of socialism and instead that his position in the matter should be understood. Prof. Lewis stated at the beginning of his lecture that he was definitely opposed to the teachings of socialism and considered them dangerous. Prof. Lewis believes the best means of meeting this danger is to first understand it and then become able to discuss the matter intelligently.

The first lecture set forth the conditions which led to the institution of the philosophy of socialism. It was purely historical in its nature and the facts substantiated the statements of the speaker. In the second lecture which dealt with the characteristics of socialism, Prof. Lewis deemed it advisable to treat the subject from the socialist's point of view in order that a better understanding might be obtained. It being noted that judgement would be reserved for a later talk.

The third lecture was a criticism of the second lecture and a refutation of the socialist's own arguments in favor of the new regime. Thoroughly logically the speaker pointed out that the socialist past had over-emphasized actual conditions and had not taken into consideration the changing conditions of the tribal institutions of the present day. Weaknesses in the economic theory of the socialist were also explained.

The speaker's best work came when he pointed out some practical defects indicating that the socialists are poor constructionists and possess a hazy idea of the government they would substitute for the present one. "How can he be asked to support the movement," said the speaker, "which aims to overturn the present industrial order until we have had some definite beginnings as to how the future is to be handled."

In conclusion Prof. Lewis expressed his belief that the real hope for the future lies in a raising of the level of competition.

O. A. C. MACHINE DEFEATS IDAHO

STAR PLAYING AND WELL-KNIT DEFENSE HELD IDAHO SCORELESS

Bobby Burns Makes Sensational Run of Twenty-Five Yards

The Oregon Aggies showed surprising punch when they faced Coach "Pink" Griffith's warriors at Portland Saturday afternoon and with the brilliant line working in wonderful style, they ran up a score of 26 to 0 against the silver and gold aggregation. Last was only used in the first half, but in that time Stewart's machine rolled up 19 points, more than enough to rectify the contest. The final play of the game was a 57-yard run pulled off by the speedy Aggie back and from that time on, Idaho was never particularly dangerous.

Abraham hung up two touchdowns for the Oregon eleven in the first quarter with sledge-hammer line plunges after "Pink's" men had been twice hammered down the field, and Schuster, O. A. C.'s fast right end, creased the Idaho line a third time when he intercepted a forward pass and tore off a 59-yard run in the second quarter.

The fourth Aggie touchdown came in the third quarter when a triple pass sent Hunter galloping beyond the Idaho goal posts. Both coaches rushed subs into the fray in the last period and the silver and gold second string men prevented any further scoring. Bobby Burns gave Idaho's dying hope a flicker of encouragement when he got away for an end-circling 59-yard sprint in the last quarter but the oval was passed out of bounds three play later and the game ended with the Aggies' possession on Idaho's 21-yard line.

Organize Rifle Club
University Students Join and Will Compete With Other Universities in United States

A rifle club has been organized at the university and at its first meeting last night about 75 of the students joined. It will become a member of the National Rifle Association and meet other universities in the United States in telegraphic matches. Officers were elected last night as follows: Capt. Sam Morrison of Co. C. president; Capt. Sherman Gregory of Co. B. vice-president; Lieut. Bill Bodfold of Co. A. secretary-treasurer.

After all the members of the cadet battalion have tried out for the team, the men having the ten highest scores will be chosen to compete against the teams from the other schools. The scores of the five highest of these men will be the official score of the team.

Gonzaga Writes
In a letter received from the department of debate at Gonzaga University it was urged that the question for debate be submitted before the holiday. Last year a debate contract was drawn up to last three years, the debates to take place the second semester of each year. The teams are three-men teams. Gonzaga is taking a great deal of interest in the debate, with Idaho and Idaho has just as much to learn and should take just as much interest in these debates.

Two weeks of study on the debate, uninterupted by the regular studies ought to be a priceless opportunity to all students interested in making a place on the team. We feel that this debate will be a real issue in our University affairs this year. It is hoped that more Freshmen will enter the try-outs than usual. An excellent opportunity is afforded those who have debated in high schools. Don't lay your achievements on the shelf forever. An early start, and a proper amount of work are great aids to making a place on the team. Watch for the question, which will be posted soon.

SCRUBS SATURDAY
LAST GRIDIRON ATTRACTION
OF THE SEASON TO BE STAGED ON
VARSITY FIELD SATURDAY
First Team Material in Both Machines and Battle Will be a Royal One

The last gridiron battle that local fans will have an opportunity of seeing will be held on Saturday afternoon on the Varsity field at 1 o'clock with the Idaho and W. S. C. second teams at the poles.

W. S. C. is said to have one of the strongest second teams it has boasted for several years with many members of the football team. The backfield the local bunch will have Gershoff, Williams, Betty and others, all hard-hitting, scrappy men who will be strong contenders for first team jobs next season. On the Idaho side the scrub will have Buntington, Hart, Jackson, Pearson, Bowers, Dickson and possibly Hamilton.

If the second team puts up the same kind of a battle against W. S. C. that it has been putting up against the Idaho regulars during the week that it has played, it will be probably a full-fledged contest.

An admission of 50 cents will be charged and student season tickets will be good at the gate. The initial whistle is due to toot at one o'clock.

Everybody be on deck.

THE EGG OF DESTINY

Our concert orchestra, which has been carefully re-organized by Mr. Parmalee, made its first public appearance in assembly. The two numbers played met with so much approval that an encore was necessary.

The work of the orchestra thus far promises much for the future, and we hope this organization will be present often at assembly to assist us in getting the seventy-five cents worth of profit to which President Brunson says we are entitled.

Dean Ayres of the Law School addressed the students on the rather cryptic subject, "The Egg of Destiny." This, he explained, is simply another way of putting the well-worn idea that if we take care of our thoughts, our actions will take care of themselves.

The egg is a symbol of gradual development. We begin our thinking long before we perform any great act. As the chick is conceived in the egg and grows and develops until it finally breaks forth from the shell, so it is conceived in our minds and nothing can keep it from coming out and embodying itself in action. We are the world community in the mental as well as the physical world to indicate the same fundamental process of action and reaction which results in the birth of an idea.

Dean Ayres drew his text from the old "Mother Goose" rhyme: "Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall, Humpty Dumpty had a great fall, And all the kings horses and all the kings men, Couldn't put Humpty together again."

"Since Humpty Dumpty was an egg, this text suits the discussion admirably. For an idea, once it has been conceived, mastered, and allowed to break from its shell, can no more be restored to its original condition than the broken egg. Perhaps in your own life you can remember some little incident, a spoken word perhaps, or the coming of a letter, only a momentary thing, which broke the egg in which you had been living up to that time and changed the whole current of your life, and "not the king's horses, nor all the king's men, could ever put Humpty together again."

"In the spring we plant seed. After a while, affected by the sun and the rain and the earth, the little germ grows, and swells, and breaks open its shell, and 'not all the king's horses, nor all the king's men, can ever put Humpty together again."

A young girl and a young man met. To be sure they have met many another. But somehow a new world is opened. A new life begins for them. They are engaged. Perhaps the engagement is broken. A young life struggles to be admitted into the world, and nothing can prevent its birth. 'Not all the king's horses, nor all the king's men, can ever put Humpty together again.'

"If this fact of conception, development and birth is apparent in nature, it may also be traced in the world of thought. It is for this reason that we must take care to have the right conception of things. If we take care of our thought our actions will take care of themselves."

"All human actions are enveloped by thoughts just as the fire is surrounded by smoke."

"There is a peculiar faculty in the human breast which is sometimes contrary to reason. Of this the foremost form is perhaps the "bunch" of the business man. But the highest form is the "still small voice" of God. Immanuel Kant, the great German philosopher once said: "You cannot prove that there is a God, but your conscience tells you. Everywhere, in every nation, in every, you find that invisible 'Something' that teaches us to think rightly and to act rightly, and the higher our thoughts and the nobler our conception, the greater is the opportunity for this Monitor to speak to us."

"Historically we must admit that with the Christian Era there came a new light. But at the same time there came into the world a spirit which has caused a great many conflicts, the 'Holier than Thou' spirit. Thus two forces were introduced: A passion for freedom, and a spirit of intolerance. Through the Middle Ages the latter held sway, and the conscience of man suffered an eclipse. Individual freedom was a thing unthought of, especially in religious matters. For a time the fortress of the Moors created a degree of religious toleration in Spain, but this was checked by the great Inquisition."

"Hugues and Peter, the man in Greece had an idea that the world was round. The idea was born, and 'not all the king's horses nor all the king's men, could ever put Humpty together again."

"The Pilgrims who followed him to America brought with them along with their desire for freedom the old troublesome 'Holier than Thou' attitude which resulted in much persecution of heretics and burning of witches."

"Gradually the idea of union and freedom was born, and 'not all the king's horses nor all the king's men, could ever put Humpty together again.'

"It is true that the Germans have long sung Deutschland Uber Alles,' but French children were taught the same attitude. It was abhorrant to the Hugues that Thou' attitude in the north which hurried matters to a crisis. Finally the idea was translated to France. The result was so horrible, however, that the nations may forget their hate and the egg broke, and 'all the king's horses and all the king's men, couldn't put Humpty together again.'"

"So in the present war the same spirit of 'Holier than Thou' is responsible for much mischief. It is so.

IIS THIS CRITIQUE A FAIR CRITIQUE?

This discussion does not aim to involve a radical criticism of the subject treated but it deals with a specimen that could easily attract other interests and lead to further arguments that are seemingly authoritative and indeed should be considered as such as can be by others as a helpful aid. Other observers in the northwest may suffer from the same experience as Idaho is not only the soil to be isolated and criticized. There has been a great deal of progress in recent years to develop too many and the best work for a few parts are preponderated. All parts of any machine must work in harmony, not as individual pieces of the mech-
BIG TRIANGULAR IS COMING SOON

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF PROF. LEWIS THE TEAMS ARE WORKING HARD

Debates Promise to be Interesting and Intense Interest Is Manifested in all Camps

Quietly, yet persistently the most careful preparation for the W. B. O.-Idaho and the O. A. Y.-Idaho debates is going on. The debaters are conscious of the task before them, and have set to work with a grim determination to swamp their opponents. Before this can be done, text books, statistics, volumes of long drawn arguments must be gone through and collected condensed and sorted out and arranged in order. The debaters must know both sides of the question, they must know to em- phasisate and what to ignore. In other words there must be an elaborate ready reference on the subject of government. The question includes not much less than an argument on our entire system of government. With the aim of mastering the subject matter the teams under the able direction of Mr. Lewis are putting their best efforts into the work. Such a dis- cussion as will take place on the eleventh of December will be worth the individual attention of the very alert.

* This question is more of a gordian knot than any question yet designed. There will be trouble in untwisting it until Deanman and Huff with one big stroke with the keen edged sword of argument rend in twin the trinacriae and scatter to the winds the vain misconceptions of their opponents. Northby and Chandler will make their opponents' great speeches appear like an orto in the house which was built upon a foundation of sand. They will storm the house with the tempests of reason and rain upon it with the rain of facts until the house of opposition shall fall and great shall be the fall thereof.

Ever and anon these men are striving to build up such a substantial proposition that shall remain unshak- en by any and all opposition. We know these men to be very strong and reliable and we are going to trust to the efforts of them the important task of winning both of these debates, which are even now looming up in the distance. We have never known these men to do anything of a cause or neglect their duty. We, the students, are holding these men and feel a deep interest in the outcome of the debates, and we wish the debaters to present themselves and make good in the trust which we have confided in them.

RUNNING THE GAUNTLET

Professor Hulme's history of the Renaissance and Reformation appears to be running the gauntlet of the critics with dexterity. It is not very often that the Oregonian, deuced by many, to be the ablest paper west of the Rocky Mountains, publishes a book review in its editorial columns instead of in the section usually reserved for such notices. But this honor has been accorded the new history. In an editorial more than a column in length, the Oregonian gives decided praise to the new book. "The entire work," it says, "appears to be as Incarnate as a history can be…Professor Hulme has a native taste for elucidation…He displays a marked dexterity in the social departments of history…It is pleasant to read his appreciative paragraphs about Erasmus…...but he shows his keen understanding of history in nothing more than that his paragraphs on the development of science. He leaves the reader in no doubt that the modern world is the fruit of the intellectual spirit. Inventors as they have come one after another out of the native scientific mind have subjected the world to a continuous evolution ever since the time of Coper- nicus. That revolution is proceeding more swiftly now than ever before."

The Catholic World, in its last issue, the leading publication of that church in America, while it differs from Professor Hulme's fundamental point of view, also gives warm praise to the book. "The author of the book," it says, "is evidently not a Catholic, and his book is not the kind that a Catholic would write—but it is not one that a Catholic can entirely accept to…. We are convinced that the author is neither unorthodox nor prejudiced. The book deserves perusal on the part of mature Catholic students; for in religious history, setting aside those facts that bear directly on the im- mense dogmas of the church, it is only by the preservation of various views, in a spirit of wise and tempered 'individualism,' that the true view can be approximated. For facts cannot speak for themselves. They need an interpreter, and each one who honestly can see the rule, decides. If not our entire agreement, at least our gratitude, and this we heartily express to Professor Hulme. He has written a work that creates within knowledge of a period peculiarly difficult to master. And if at times he reads into it ideas and motives which we do not perceive therein, we cannot but recognize the serious scholarship and breadth of sympathy which keep him from that sort of writing which at one time was associated almost with the very idea of a non-Catholic historian of the Reformation."

The Boston Transcript also published an appreciative review of the book. President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard, wrote a cordial personal letter to the author, and the book has been adopted as the text in the course with which it deals at students. "What degree are you seek- ing?"

Young lady: "I am going to work for my M.S. degree."

PROFESSOR SHAW GIVES TALK

STUDENTS OF COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE HEAR PROFITABLE TALK

Results of Practical Experience for Years Given in Nut Shell

Before an audience that filled every seat in the large room of the university, and to the number of absent listeners standing near the entrance door, Thomas Shaw, agricultural expert for the Great Northern line, and for more than thirty years of the most pedagogical, successful, and practical agricultural scientists on this continent, delivered a lecture which addressed an interest for sheep farmers, specialization, vivid illustration, and, above all, the topic of success. His serious treatment of the subject of over-production and the increased amount of wheat on one acre, and the one with live stock on the 100 acre club, all were prepared. His fair tone was not in the least bit magisterial, and the farmers who heard him were not likely to forget the practical elements.

The farmers were naturally pleased to hear that his singularly rich experiences were...

Montana to Meet the Strongest Team In Western Country

This year the Montana debaters will have a splendid chance to see just how good they are. Arrangements have been made for a contest with the University of Oregon, thus debate to be held at Eugene. Each team will consist of two men. The question has not yet been decided.

That it really means something to debate Oregon is proved by the fact that that school meets Washington, Idaho, and Stanford. The California and Oregon teams claimed the western debaters championship for several years. Montana claims the championship of the Rocky Mountain district. Therefore, this debate between Oregon and Montana should certainly be a hot affair.
