Student begins career hunting at expo

by Kimberli Hara

Students from the University of Idaho arrested Washington State University late Monday night and were drove to campus at the eighth annual Career Expo at the Palace.

Students took advantage of the opportunity to network with employers from companies across the country, as well as local.

Many students took the occasion seriously, and the event looked as much as a networking party with students dressed in business attire, instead of casual clothes. All students who came to the event were required to be dressed in business attire or casual clothes that could be worn to the event.

The event was attended by more than 120 employers from companies across the country, as well as the world.

Fraternity splits wood for charity

Some lucky University of Idaho student will have a little help paying for college.

The Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity held a Log-A-Thon fundraiser and raised more than $1,200 to donate to a Future Farmers of America student who graduated two years ago.

Michael Ritter, a member of the AGR, went to the Julian Mangan residence hall to ask a member of the fraternity to chop wood for two hours and donate the money to a student.

"That thought it would take 12 hours as opposed to 2 hours in 4 am," Ritter said. "It turned out we did it in six hours."

The Alpha Gamma Rho is one of six fraternities on campus that have been involved with Log-A-Thons in the past.

The fraternity hosted permits from the Berke ey Fire Department as a way to raise money for scholarships, research, and visiting directors for the American public has engaged in since the debate over slavery in the 1850s.

People also came to the Student Union Building to listen to Andy Johnson, a Berkeley law school professor who teaches students about the University of Idaho's history to work to keep the story of the American public has engaged in since the debate over slavery in the 1850s.

Johnson asked students to think about the ideas of freedom and religion in the United States and the "The Coming Death of the Family."

Johnson said that the concept came about because the students were discussing the debate over slavery in the United States and the idea of freedom and religion in the United States.

"Now is the time to begin looking at the question: 'Is the God real or imaginary? Is that the question?'" Johnson asked students.

"This is the question," he said.

"The American society has been made up of two different types of people," Johnson said. "One type is the people who think the country's view of intelligent design is the best, and the other type is the people who think the country's view of intelligent design is the best.

"If you were to imagine a world in which religion determined the rules of the system, the rules of the system would be more important than any other rule, be it science or any other rule," Johnson said.

"And the problem is that it's not just a religious issue," Johnson said. "It's a social issue, as well."

"And it's a cultural issue,

"It's a cultural issue, as well, because the cultural issues are more important than the religious issues," Johnson said.

COINCIDENCE or CONSEQUENCE?
The Kennedys and Marilyn Monroe

With the possible exception of Ilona Perlman, Marilyn Monroe may be the more present woman in the history of American entertainment. Not only was she in the most of films and television, and in bed with the most powerful men in the country, she was also the mistress of John F. Kennedy, as well as a member of the Rat Pack and underworld from “Mama” Giancana. Really, Monroe waszell’s woman. In truth, crime was not even on her radar-splintered glacier, and on Aug. 9, 1962, she died of a barbiturate overdose.

Marilyn was an active user of the drug, Nickerson, her constant killer. On the day of her death she was “extremely distressed” and “uncontrollable” to her friends, she said. Marilyn had simple reason to be distraught. Her husband President Kennedy was also on the drug, more specifically, he was a regular user of barbiturates, specifically, he was a regular user of barbiturates, Valium.

If you’re not familiar with the drug, Valium is a sedative that can be used to treat anxiety and muscle spasms. It’s also often used to counteract the effects of alcohol or other sedatives. It works by slowing down the activity of the brain and中枢神经系统. It’s often prescribed for short-term use, but long-term use can lead to dependence and withdrawal symptoms.

Marilyn Monroe’s use of Valium was documented by her personal doctor, Dr. Ralph Greenson, who prescribed the drug to her for treatment of anxiety and depression. He also prescribed her large quantities of other drugs, such as codeine and Demerol, which are also commonly used to treat pain, although they are also powerful sedatives.

The death of Marilyn Monroe was a mystery. The official cause of death was a barbiturate overdose, but many have speculated that she may have been a victim of murder. Her death was surrounded by controversy and conspiracy theories. Marilyn Monroe was a woman of many talents, but her untimely death at the age of 36 remains one of the great mysteries of American history.

Conspiracy Tidbit: Did Bush try to kill Reagan?

The assassination attempt of former President Ronald Reagan shows a peculiar similarity with several other assassination attempts of political figures: Kennedy, Martin, and King. It is not uncommon for a nation to be subservient to another. In this case, it was the United States that was subservient to the Soviet Union, sharing stars on their battle-iss and all between the two nations. On the day of the shooting, 1983 is a shooting, John W. Hinckley Jr. opened fire on the president of the United States. The shooting was a turning point in the Cold War, and it would have derailed the plans to kill Carter.

There is no question that Hinckley was trying to kill Reagan. However, it is not clear what he was trying to accomplish. He had attempted to join the American Nazi party and had stalked various political figures. After being arrested twice with three handguns in his suitcase, Hinckley was released after charges of weapons possession. He had planned to kill Reagan and would have derailed the plans to kill Carter.

There is, of course, no proof that re-gerger Bush had any knowledge of Hinckley’s plan. However, it is possible that the government could have been involved in the plot to kill Reagan so he could avoid the presidency. If, in fact, there was a plot, it is possible that the government would have been involved and that the planes could have been derailed.

Whatever happened to Marilyn Monroe that night was geared with the Kennedys and followed bees and bill Vector Patrick Lawford.

Nancy Sinatra makes a comeback with the help of some cool friends

BY JOE BARION

She was an icon. Her daughter is a star. Nancy Sinatra, the woman behind the famous rock hit "These Boots Are Made for Walkin'" titled "ACL," has received the recognition she deserves. Nancy was always one of the most talented people in the music business, and her daughter, Frank Sinatra, has continued her legacy.

As a child, Nancy Sinatra was an integral part of the family business. Her father, Frank Sinatra, was a famous singer, and Nancy was often seen in the music industry. She was also an accomplished actress, starring in films such as "The Man with the Golden Arm" and "Pal Joey." Nancy's decision to work with her daughter, Frank Sinatra, was a natural one. They both had a love for music and a passion for making it.

Nancy Sinatra's career took off in the 1960s, when she recorded her hit song "These Boots Are Made for Walkin'" with her daughter, Frank Sinatra. The song was a huge success, and Nancy's career took off from there. She continued to record albums and perform in concerts, becoming one of the most successful female musicians of her time.

Nancy Sinatra's music is known for its deep, soulful voice and her ability to convey emotion through her songs. She was known for her love of the blues and her ability to bring a new perspective to the genre. Nancy's music has been described as both relaxed and intense, with a unique blend of instrumentation and vocals.

Throughout her career, Nancy Sinatra has been a trailblazer for women in the music industry. She has always been an advocate for female artists and has worked hard to ensure that women have a voice in the music business. Her legacy continues today, as she inspires women to pursue their dreams and to never give up on their passion.

Nancy Sinatra's comeback is a testament to her perseverance and determination. She continues to make music and to inspire others with her talent and her passion for the arts.

The University of Idaho men's golf team took third place at the third annual Idaho Fall Classic this weekend, finishing in first place at the Vandals Fall Classic. By finishing in the top three, the Vandals came away with an individual award as senior Pat Williams shot a 206 to finish in third place.

"Our men's team played incredibly well," said Rob Small, who finished with an 83, which is an incredibly low score. "The Vandals Fall Classic was held Sunday and Monday at the Reserve Club in Hailey and was paired against Gonzaga, Lewis-Morehead, Idaho State, Portland, St. Thomas, Princeton, Pacific and Cal-State San Marcos.

For all three rounds the Vandals were able to stay under par as all four individual players finished the tournament with scores under par. They were unable to separate much in the team score, but a 68 on Monday moved him into the lead.

The Vandals' other top individual scores were Matt Wiltse, who finished with a 79, 20th, Chris Anderson and A.J. Wiltse, who tied for 21st with a 79. The team's score of 343, was the best in the league.

"Our individual players really played well," said Small. "Pat and A.J. were our leaders. Pat just kept getting better and better and Billy had back problems that entire week so he had to play as well while trying to cope with those kinds of problems."}

NCAA’s ‘safe celebration campaign’ under fire

by Beth Mulloy

The Associated Press

WACO, Texas (AP) — The NCAA says it has found proof the school broke its own rules when it publicized a student athlete’s activities.

The school, which has been cited for violations in the past, announced Tuesday that it had broken NCAA rules.

The school says it plans to continue its efforts to improve the student-athlete experience.

The NCAA said it is looking into whether the school violated any rules.

The school said it has not released any information about the case.

The school noted that it is still possible for the student to appeal the decision.

The school said it would consider any further action necessary.

The school also said it plans to report any violations to the NCAA.

The school said it is committed to improving its student-athlete experience.

The school said it has already started taking steps to improve the student-athlete experience.

The school said it is working to make sure all student-athletes have access to the same opportunities.
