National Depression Screening Day brings awareness to UI students

BY CYNTHIA REYNARD

A special event was provided during lunch hour at the Maba Commons Thursday, but it had nothing to do with food.

Students were invited served to samples of food from local restaurants, replaced upon a buffet of foods they had thought about over the past few days.

"Students have been very receptive," said Ruth Zargas, a graduate student doing her practical training with the UI counseling center. "I think they're especially interested in knowing what it is about and what is available to them.

While many people stopped at the door of the dining hall, few actually went inside. At 11:40 a.m. every single person was gone, according to bybee, an employee at the center. Bybee said 50 people had come in for samples and they had served 150 by the end of the day.

"Getting help isn't a sign of weakness," he said. "It shows a sign that you're strong." During the free 15-minute screening, the counselor takes a confidential survey. A counselor and counselor-student member then evaluated the answers and gave an initial diagnosis, possibly referring them to a follow-up counseling session.

"It's a quick way to see if there's something they have a problem," Greg said.

During the free 15-minute screening, the counseling center and screening stops at the UI college of counseling and screening center who are interested in developing counseling.

"The UI College of Counseling and Screening Center is interested in developing counseling and screening services for students who are interested in counseling, screening, and referral, career guidance and counseling, and screening for disabilities.

Interns prepare to face the future

From Page A1
Nader's dissection of the Republican and Democratic candidates was clear in his plan for the party.
During the mock debate, Nader said America has a "moral and strategic responsibility to remove troops from Iraq. He announced plans to have our troops out of the American soul by Christmas. He pointed out that the two other presidential candidates intend to increase troop numbers in Iraq and that the only way to do that is by instigating a civil war.

"Really the only way you're going against the draft and against the war is to vote for Nader," Woold said.

During the recorded debate, Nader explained the compli-tation of tax breaks made by the party leaders in order to turn them to "the favor of corporations." He said government revenue should go to the problem of mass significance to the American people.
"The talking points in Nader's previous decisions, raising the minimum wage, and ending corporate warse. Nader said there is an absence of discussion about a federal minimum wage.

"What's the point of having a minimum wage if you can't feed on it?" he said of the current minimum wage, which Nader said should be raised.

Nader has said he would raise the federal minimum wage to $29.89 immediately and up to $41.09 in 2006. He said the wage would result economic benefits, particularly to the underserved system. He would eliminat the current "pay or go" design that he says is pushed by other candidates by removing such a system.

Many consider Nader's strong point to be in the "relevating" of the issues between government and corporations. He has promised to shut down the war in Iraq and to reduce spending by $25 billion, which he says is sump ter than corporate's.

"It is imperative we work toward ending corporate welfare. -by eliminating the foolish garbled by government to investments," he said.

Nader also hopes to privatize ation facilities in private organizations, which would ease the burden on taxpayers.

"We just sved fighting for the war in Iraq, but we are saving money in the Treasury," he said.

In another part of the mock debate, Nader criticized the war in Iraq, saying it has failed and that the American people will not forget the drug war and put "new enforcement at the edges of drug cents, not at the center.

Putting Nader's name on the ballot ballot is still under discussion. Woold said political organ-sations plan to push the presidential issue is being argued on technicalities. Nader's campaign filed a lawsuit against the state to get his name on the ballot.
Nader is on the ballot in 33 states with guidelines of geting on the ballot in 11 others.

Nader was not allowed the right in the recent presidential debate due to a requirement of at least 5 percent of the overall vote.

It has never public official has organized many protestor activist grpet.

I really think it is time that people voice their conscience, and if I win, this will be the case," he said.

Woold concluded, "Nader represents the progressive view of the American people. He needs to be voted for by the people."

On the issues — environment
(2-H) 4
A Yales survey found that 91 percent of voters surveyed environmental issues was the most important issue voters and candidates are discussing. The Green party is gaining momentum and running candidates in nearly every state.

President Bush has long been an advocate of environmantal issues, and his administration has focused on telecom deregulation and reducing federal regulations on businesses.

While the environmental movement is growing, many residents of the northeastern United States are concerned about the impact of the Kyoto Protocol on their lives. The protocol is a legal agreement that requires industrialized nations to reduce their emissions of greenhouse gases.

As the protocol enters into effect, many people are concerned about the impact on the economy and the environment. The protocol requires nations to reduce their emissions of greenhouse gases by 2008.

The Kyoto Protocol is designed to help mitigate the effects of climate change by reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

In an editorial published in the Yale Daily News, the editorial board noted that the protocol is important, but that the real challenge is to reduce emissions in the developing world.

"The protocol is an important step in the directional effort to combat climate change,
but it is not enough," the editorial board wrote.

The protocol is expected to lead to some reductions in emissions, but it is unlikely to bring about the dramatic changes needed to combat climate change.

"Super Size Me: Behind the burgers"

"Survival 101" class is introduced at high schools and colleges to teach kids how to develop good eating habits. "It's a decision-making process," said one student. "It's a lesson in how we think and how our bodies react to what we eat." For years, McDonald's has been criticized for its unhealthy menu options. "They're not just selling the food, they're selling the experience," said another student. "It's a whole lifestyle thing." The documentary explores the history of fast food and its impact on society. Since 1955, McDonald's has become a global brand, expanding to more than 100 countries. It has been criticized for its role in the obesity epidemic. The film also examines the role of advertising in influencing consumer behavior. McDonald's has been accused of targeting children with marketing campaigns. The documentary also looks at the role of government regulations in the fast food industry. The film argues that the fast food industry has a responsibility to address public health concerns. McDonald's has faced criticism for its role in the obesity epidemic, but it has also been praised for its role in providing affordable food options. The film ends with a call to action, urging consumers to make healthier choices and hold fast food companies accountable for their role in the obesity epidemic.
As ‘The Bachelor,’ bass fisherman will be quite a catch

By Don Wilson

V听 to Wilson, people have become so enamored with the reality show ‘The Bachelor’ that the ratings for the fishing tournament in South Carolina where 6 women competed in the show were so high that it led to the show’s cancellation.

Sure, the show’s ratings were high, but Wilson says they pale in comparison to the ratings for the actual fishing tournament. “I’ve never seen ratings that high for a fishing tournament,” Wilson said.

Wilson, who has been fishing for over 40 years, says he has never seen such a large audience for a fishing tournament. “It’s been a great experience,” Wilson said.

Wilson says he hopes to continue to participate in the show’s fishing tournaments in the future. “I’ll be back,” Wilson said.

Stephen baldwin employs ‘Scare Tactics’

By Kate O’Malley

Stephen Baldwin’s latest move in his attempt to revitalize his career is a departure from his usual acting roles. Baldwin has announced his new project, called “Scare Tactics,” which will involve him using his fear of spiders to create a new type of reality show.

Baldwin, who has been known for his fear of spiders, says he has been working on the show for several months and has been using his phobia to create new and unique scare tactics.

“I’ve always been fascinated by fear,” Baldwin said. “I’ve been trying to find a way to use my fear to create something new and exciting.”

Baldwin’s new show will involve him getting into some very interesting situations, such as being locked in a room with a spider, or being dropped into a dark room with no light. The idea is to create a situation that will make even the most confident person nervous. “I’m hoping to use my fear to create a situation that even the most fearless person will find frightening,” Baldwin said.

The show will be filmed in front of a live audience, and the audience will be able to vote on which situation Baldwin should be in. “I’m hoping to create a situation that will make the audience gasp,” Baldwin said.

Baldwin’s previous shows have been more traditional, and have involved him playing roles in movies and on television. “I’ve always been a fan of horror movies, and I think this is a great way to use my fear to create a new type of show,” Baldwin said.

The show is set to air later this year, and Baldwin is hoping to make it a regular feature on television. “I’m hoping to make this a regular feature on television, and I’m really excited about it,” Baldwin said.

By Pamela Bott

The show features contestants from around the world, each with their own personal story of how they came to be overweight. The contestants will compete against one another in a variety of challenges, including physical fitness tests, cooking competitions, and team-building exercises. The winner will receive a cash prize of $1,000,000, as well as a chance to become a spokesperson for the show and potentially win even more money in future seasons.

Each week, the show will feature a new contestant and their personal story of weight loss. The contestants will be paired with coaches who will help them achieve their goals, and the contestants will be weighed in each week to track their progress. The contestants will also have access to nutritionists and personal trainers who will help them make healthy choices and develop healthy habits.

The show will also feature a panel of experts who will discuss the latest news and trends in the world of weight loss and fitness. The panelists will include doctors, dietitians, and fitness trainers who will share their insights and offer advice to the contestants and viewers. The panelists will also provide tips and strategies for achieving success in the show and in weight loss journeys in general.

The show will be hosted by a well-known personality who will guide the contestants through their weight loss journeys and provide motivation and encouragement. The host will also introduce the panelists and provide commentary on the events of the show.

The show will be a mix of personal stories, physical challenges, and expert advice, providing a comprehensive look at the world of weight loss and fitness. Viewers will be inspired by the contestants' journeys and motivated by the panelists' insights. Whether you're looking to lose weight or simply want to learn more about health and fitness, the show will offer something for everyone.
Idaho vs. UL Monroe

Vanders, receivers look to continue success
BY RUSSELL SUNDERLAND SPECIAL TO THE IDAHO STATESMAN

A 45-41 win over Eastern Michigan may not have been the biggest victory of the Idaho football team, but it did give the team a boost of confidence and a much-needed win for the season. The Vandals now sit at 1-2 and look to improve as they prepare for their next game.

The game saw the Vandals dominate the Eastern Michigan defense, as they scored 21 unanswered points in the third quarter to pull away from the Eagles. Idaho outgained Eastern Michigan 470-373 in total yards, with 210 rushing yards and 260 passing yards.

"The best part about having him as a teammate is his intensity and love of the game," said Mike Anderson, Idaho's head coach. "His passion for the sport and his dedication to improving are inspiring to our team.

But the 22-year-old linebacker doesn't lose track of his personal numbers, he's concerned with his fellow teammates. "I definitely sacrifice the field for the team," says Snyder. "I'm not perfect, I'll make mistakes, but when I do, my teammates pick me up. I'm always learning and working on my game to become better."

Snyder began his college football career as a walk-on at Eastern Washington University before transferring to Idaho and playing in the 2004 season. He has returned to the Idaho football scholarship program. "Serving the scholarship was one of the greatest things that happened to me in football," Snyder says.

"I think he's got talent all over the field. His intensity and work ethic are what stand out," says Snyder. "He's a natural leader and his performance is impressive."

This year Idaho has started four games, played in five more and made eight tackles this season. Snyder has recorded a total of 41 tackles, including seven tackles for loss. Current team games high includes two sacks against Utah State and 18 tackles against Oregon.

A Kentish native, Snyder was playing on a running back/Paq-Wal-League coach by his dad in the fifth grade. Snyder grew up watching Idaho football on TV and makes sure to support the Vandals in any way he can.

"I'm always a hard worker and a hard worker that's hard," says Snyder. "I'm not your typical football player."

The Vandals will take on the San Diego State Aztecs next week in their final home game of the season.

"We've got a lot of respect for them," says Snyder. "They're a tough team and we need to be ready for the challenge.

But the Vandals know they have the talent to compete and are looking to extend their winning streak to two games. "We're having fun and we're playing great football," says Snyder. "We're excited to see how far we can go this season."

By Kevin Washburn

Rental-Wood and one of the reasons for the rise of the Vandals' improvement is new receivers coach Chad Brown.

"Last week we had the best line play in the field, and hopefully that can be the same for us, for the rest of the guys, including myself, and the whole offense,"防护线据The Idaho State Statesman said.

"They're getting better daily. They really are doing things correctly... They were just so far away as far as being coached and things like that." Nick Holt, Idaho's football coach, said.

Vandals, back in saddle, sweep Mustangs

by Nathan Zerbe

The University of Idaho volleyball team did not do what coach ordered Thursday with a three-game sweep over the WSU Cougars for the West Conference for Cal Poly in Poly Tech. The 3-0 sweep allowed the Idaho Vandals to stay in the saddle for the next weekend.

The Vandals returned to action Thursday after a pair of matches last week in the first conference road trip of the season, losing to UC Irvine and Santa Clara in the West Conference. Coach Becky Buchanan said the Vandals finished the weekend with a 2-7 overall record and 1-3 in conference play.

"We know our conference is tough and when we’re at home we’re able to get the job done," Buchanan said.

Buchanan said Thursday’s results were not a shock to her or her team as she saw the potential all season.

"We’ve been trying to get this type of a road win all season," Buchanan said.

Buchanan is the only coach Idaho has had in the last 20 years who has been with the Idaho program since its inception in 1984.

The Vandals’ next home game is Friday against Portland State.

2) Geeks

Vandals sweep the Mustangs' offensive output, taking a 16-10 lead. The Vandals extended their lead to double digits, 18-10, and never looked back.

"We faced some tough competition with the Mustangs,” said Brooke Young, Idaho senior. "This is our first victory in the road and we’re looking forward to the next one.

The win was a hard-fought one as the Vandals’ defense was stellar, allowing only 10 points in the game.

3) Idaho's offense was led by senior Brooke Young, who scored seven points to go along with four aces.

The lyrics of a teardrop

Finding the times when the sports-oriented made an odd at a tear

BY BRENNAN GAUSE

Perhaps makes in general have become more in touch with those weeks that I am a sensitive type of person. For the active sportsman, "markings" and "sensitivity" are just words one sees on covers in the checkered list of the local grocery stores. By "sportsman" I mean the guy playing pickup basketball which more than 90 pounds overweight and believes he can definitive his favorite team's success as your team, not the few who live in the restaurant for the century. The closest we get to sympathy with our fellow men when a teammate on the slow-pitch softball teams scores against of the "you hit a foul ball with two strikes on you, you're out" rule. We gather in the room after annoying words such as "tough luck" or "it's okay to make a mistake. Maybe when you're buying the next series of Cosmpolitan toms you can pick up the same magazine that you read now." I'm not saying we don't have problems, that something is in us and a couple of tears breaks down our cheeks.

of this.
Snyders game will be his first true home game. The Portland High south-meets-Martin Stadium was counted as a home game in 1940. Playing in the Kibbie Dome could be considered his second game in a row.

"The Dome, it's our house and fact of the matter is every guy has broken down at some time, no what the protocol for when a drive starts fac is always the same under pressure: "Feel right?" Well, it's really quite simple, you can cry when."

"George Steinbrenner sends most of the best players on his favorite team to strengthen his几乎 $200 million roster."

After years of trying, he will re- turn.

"Miami's defensive line can be heard looking for the Yankees in the twelfth inning of a playoff game."

The local pro basketball team owner's number one pick in the draft.

"He finds himself in a car full of people at night, that's when people don't like coming here because it's old, it's got the target on it, it hurts, but it's okay."

Harrington said, "We love it."

"We're going to come out and hopefully come away with a victory on Saturday in front of the home crowd so they can have something to talk about when they go home." Junior defensive and Mike Anderson was chosen as Ron has just recommended she has the album with her.

Breitbart News

"In the seventh hitter in the lineup is a short fly ball with runners on first and second."

"The person who jumps up every time there's a fly ball by the home team and yells at the ball to get out hurt."

"This is the person who can be heard doing every catch and turnover in the game."

"There, of course, aren't the only times when all the sportsmen can cry."

For years movies have made me jump up. Whether watching Kevin Costner playing catch with his dad in "A Field in Dreams" or "Field of Dreams" or Kevin Reeves singing "BigToy" in "The Freshman," I had to TRIANPS and my eyes become a number of times. Although the Reeves scene causes the tears to come because it's just so swishy watching Reeves sing a BigToy Smalls song while trying to be serious and inspirational."

"So, whether needing for your family doctor or to give me or chasing after some little one's dream of going out and just kickin' ya on the shin, don't be afraid to cry every once in a while. Just don't let it become a common occur-stance because then you'll just tire those REE fellows. And you watch to happen.

"You're a sportsman" says Snyder contributes to the team on and off the field.

"If you're in a bad mood, he always puts you in a good mood," Anderson says.

Snyder is currently a graduate studies major and says he's best when it comes to his out

"The best part about having him as a teammate in his intensity and love of the game," Anderson says. "He always stays up to play a game even on his best."

"You get him out," Snyder says. "When the outcome isn't an option, he's like a hang on and play video games - college football being one of them."

"The last couple weekends were the greatest defense in recent memory," Snyder contributed to the team on and off the field.

"Free wrap with every gift."

"Loves the gift of professionalism through exe games. You can earn to make it for the games."

"We're going to come out and hopefully come away with a victory on Saturday in front of the home crowd, so they can have something to talk about when they go home."

"You're a sportsman," says Snyder. "In the meantime, just doing your best makes it worth it."
Controversy over steroids heats up in Sheffield's corner

by Jim Salisbury

(ERT) — The air was tinged with the Sinatra vote of controversy as the New York Yankees opened the postseason against the Seattle Mariners.

Gary Sheffield, one of the few who carried the Yankees to their World Series, is the center of much attention. And so the pressure on him has been intense.

Meanwhile, Seattle Mariners pitcher Randy Johnson has been hurt by his late season struggles.

The Seattle Mariners, however, were not the only ones struggling. The Yankees had to win an extra-inning game to advance to the American League Championship Series against the Minnesota Twins.

The series was never in doubt. The Yankees won the three-game sweep, 4-1, 6-3 and 6-2.

The Yankees' victory was their 10th in 16 career playoff games, according to the Associated Press.

The Associated Press reported that the Yankees have won 10 of the last 16 career playoff games, according to the Associated Press.

But Sheffield is free from any restrictions on his use since he was ordered more than a year ago. The Yanks, who began their development with Johnson last season, decided to go with the veteran lefty instead.

Sheffield is still in the starting rotation, but he has not pitched since July 1 when he allowed four hits in four innings.

"He's a lot better than he was last year," Yankees manager Joe Torre said after his team's 6-3 victory over the Twins. "He's pitched really well for us since then."

Before Monday's game, the Associated Press reported that Sheffield had limited his use to 168 pitches in his last three starts.

"I'm glad to have him back," Torre said. "He's been our best pitcher in the playoffs so far."
