Lack of coaching tells heavily on Home team—Tilson tories eloquent.

Freshmen do well considering that this year we are handicapped by lack of training.

The defeat of 5 to 0 in debate which Gonzaga inflicted upon Idaho last Friday at Moscow spoke more eloquently than any amount of praise which may be heaped upon Idaho to vitiate this defeat. We must look further than the personnel which represented Idaho, to discover why, after years of, almost continuous success, we should suffer two defeats in a single season.

The victory was not as easily won as the decision indicates, and if Idaho had shown the finished preparation and the matching preparation which the result might have been different. The Gonzaga speakers were clear, forceful, and justified their perfect presentation. But, still showed less experience but had the factor of rank. The Idaho debates, however, have opened the debate. He showed great improvement over his first appearance last semester, and with careful coaching should become an excellent debater. Northby did excellently well considering that it was his first intercollegiate debate, both in presentation of his subject and in refutation. Bowers also made his first appearance and while a forceful speaker and logical debater, yet he too showed some lack which may be eradicated by careful coaching.

The judges of this debate were: Judge Daniel Needham, of Lewiston, Idaho, Professor Carl Chaillet, University of Idaho, A.J. Burrows, Professor, Oregon State normal, and Attorney Robert Burdewof of Colfax, Wash., David Ayers of the law school of Gonzaga University. We believe, considering the importance of public speaking to every college student, and with this defeat standing us in the face, that Idaho should have a special coach for debate and public speaking. These duties are now thrust upon other overburdened instructors, who possibly are not equipped to handle such work.

Physicians Stated Today That With Complete Rest and Care He Will Recover.

Suffering from acute dilatation of the heart with some leakage of the valves, Francis Jenkins, barsaw at the university, in confined at his home today under the care of physicians who are hopeful of his complete recovery.

Mr. Jenkins, who had never before suffered a serious illness, was taken ill Monday morning at his office and immediately went home. A physician was called and diagnosed the case and advised complete rest. This morning it was learned that Mr. Jenkins was suffered severely and his friends in Moscow, who are, legum, became alarmed, however, physicians in attendance assert that with proper care and rest he will recover. He rested a little last night but cannot yet lie down.

PROF. W. H. OLIN TO LEAVE IDAHO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION WORKER WILL LEAVE GENI OF THE MOUNTAINS TO WORK FOR R. R.

W. H. Olin, director of the Agricultural Sub-station in Idaho, was in Moscow last Monday closing up business matters preparatory to taking up new duties in Colorado. Prof. Olin has resigned his work in Idaho to accept a position as Agricultural Commissioner for the Denver and Rio Grande railroad of the Western Pacific, his territory to cover from Denver, Colo., to the coast. This is the first time that the R. R. has employed a man for this kind of work and Prof. Olin goes as a pioneer. His headquarters will be at Denver beginning April 1.

Prof. Olin has had wide experience in agricultural development work. He has been agriculturalist for the Denver, Laramie, and North Western for three years; agriculturalist for the Colorado Experiment Station, where he exercised a wide influence on crop farming in Colorado; and has, as agricultural director of extension in the state, made a wide circle of friends here and given most valuable publicity to the University of Idaho. And furthermore, he has built up an extension department and working force, with headquarters in Boise, probably the most efficient and thorough of any similar department and personnel operating in any western state. At one time Prof. Olin declined an offer to become chief agriculturalist for the Rock Island system.

MRS. HUGHES PROVES RIGHT TO BE CALLED SKILLED INSTRUCTOR BY PRESENTING STUDENTS.

Pupils From Town and College Students Perform Before Happy Audience.

The violin students of Mrs. M. V. F. Hughes were heard in recital Saturday afternoon at the university auditorium. Each number was enthusiastically received by the appreciative audience.

The first number of the program was the slow movement from Bach's Double Violin Concerto in D Minor, played by Miss Helen Carlyle and Mrs. Hughes. The piece was well played and showed the clear, rhythmic style of Bach.

The next was a solo by Miss Freda Boulen, a Spanish Dance, Romana Afula, by Sarasate. The Spanish dance is very difficult and Miss Boulen played it remarkably well.

Mr. Merland Schults played two numbers, Dvorak's Humoresque and a Serenade by Moscovski. The next was a violin solo by Raymond Pitterlenger. He played—Schuman's Abendlied with a great deal of feeling.

Miss Annie Morse played Borowkoff's Adoration.

The last number on the program was composed of four duets by Benj. Godard, played by Miss Edwina Yearman and Mr. Howard Yearman. Mrs. Hughes is to be congratulated on the marked improvement of her students.

At the close of the program delicious ice cream and cake was served in Mrs. Hughes' studio.

LAW STUDENTS ADMITTED TO BAR

Six Men Now in School Have Right to Practice Law in Idaho.

Five members of the senior class and one member of the junior class of the college of law went to Lewiston and appeared before the supreme court of the state to take the examination relative to their qualifications to practice law in the courts of the state of Idaho.

The examination was probably the longest and most difficult one that has been given by supreme court, it consisting of some one hundred seventy seven questions and taking the boys most of the time allotted to them to answer the questions. The examination papers, according to the Lewiston Tribune, showed that the boys had secured a most thorough preparation for the practice of the law.

Attorney Frank Moore, who went with the boys to Lewiston, expressed himself as well pleased with the answers that the class had made before the supreme court and that the practical work which the class would take between now and the end of the present school year would well equip the members for actual practice as soon as they take up their profession.

The members of the senior class who were admitted on March 15, 1914, in the practice of law are: Russell G. Adams, of Boise; Verne Lee Taylor, of Gooding; Harry McAdams, of Corral; Frank E. Dotson, of Butler; A. V. button, of Boise, and of the junior class. (7) Gromme, of Caldwell.

IDAHOMEN LOST ALSO

DEBATE AT SPOKANE

Before the largest audience that an Idaho man had faced since the debate with the same Institution last year, the debate team sent to Spokane last Friday lost the contest. The contest was held in the Gymnasium of the Gonzaga University. Great care seems to have been taken in decorating. To give Idaho her fair share of the honors, our side of the stage was decorated in our own silver and gold. The audience was made up largely of the faculty people, ladies, and members of the local unions. There were, however, a great many students in the crowd. No complaint could possibly be made about the audience.

The main reason that Idaho lost the debate was that the Idaho speakers did not put up a good debate as the chairmen. It seems that our men were not so well informed about the question as were their opponents. The question was the same one that was debated here on the same night. The debate was opened by Vailsworth. He was the first member of the Gonzaga team, and in his argument the speakers of Idaho were given a good thing for the American people he had little to doubt. Clearly and certainly he showed that unionism is responsible for the great improvement in laboring conditions in the United States. They have shortened hours and increased wages.

He was followed by Lyon for Idaho. Lyon rebutted the argument of higher wages by showing that the government was now doing the work that the union men once did. He then proceeded to prove that the unions were bad in actual practice, since they place their rights above those of all other classes of society. His presentation was good and forceful, his mannerisms easy, but the brief of his argument was essentially weak in rebuttal. It was evident that the Gonzaga treated the subject.

The next speaker for the affirmative was very weak in rebuttal, but he ex- hausted both his colleagues in that he knew his speech better than they. He argued that the closed shop was essential to the welfare of the labor union in that it made the trade agreement effective and that it kept the contract in tact.

Warren for Idaho followed and his entire argument was a direct rebuttal to that of the former speaker. He attempted to show that the closed shop was not essential for the very same reasons that his opponent had used to show that it is. Although his rebuttal was convincing, his main argument lacked definiteness of outline and his references to authority lacked evidence.

Dr. Lorimer was the next speaker for the Gonzaga people. He is a Frenchman, impressive, violent, refreshing. His rebuttal was spasmatic, but witty and popular. In his argument he showed that the closed shop is a deterrent to the employer and to the people at large.

Idaho's next speaker closed the debate for the negative by attempting to show the real question at issue was the movement of organized labor for the closed shop. He accused the affirmative of having overlooked this point. Vallatsch wrote the debate for the affirmative, and the chairman said that two votes were for the affirmative. They won on the merits of the pre- parations and presentation; in this they excelled. We lost. But the previous faults in the manner and method definitely charged. Based on the final verdict by Vailsworth can be used in support of the question.

JUDGE AILSHIE HERE

Idaho Supreme Court Official Gave Timely Advice to the Undergraduates.

Chief Justice Ailshie, of the Idaho supreme bench addressed the Bench and Bar association of the law school last Friday.

The judge was most emphatic in his advice to the butler for the preliminary advertisement of any student before he begins the study of law. The most fundamental requisites for any lawyer is a clear, simple and broad view of the English language. "The more simple the English the more successful the lawyer," said the judge. Not only should he be a master of English, but he should also be proficient in the mechanical use of English.

In speaking of the moral side of the profession, the judge said that the ideals of the profession are the most high; that the lawyer is in a position to do the most good yet, "if he is unscrupulous, the most harm. The judge asked the students to keep the moral tenets of the profession high and un- stained. He said that anyone who had any other notion of the profession should abandon the law.

GERLOUGH EXPLAINS EXAM. SYSTEM

EXAMINATIONS AT OXFORD, NOT GIVEN BY ANTOX CONDUCTED.

ED WITH THE TEACHING.

Some of the Best Teachers are Men Without a B. L. or an M. A. Degree.—Not Many Doctors.

To the Editor of the Argonaut.

Dear Sir:—When drawing a distinction between an Oxford college and the university in my last letter, I neglected to say that an Oxford college does not signify a division in the University administration. Such is sometimes implied in America, where in speaking of the college of liberal arts or the college of law, or college of science, an individual student may pursue almost any line of study.

But now in this letter I will try to point out the significance of the term "University" when it is used at Oxford. "University" is a very ancient name used at "University" here but when one considers that "University" be does not think of that college any more, than he does of Jesus college or Lincoln college. Again the university is something more than an aggregation of twenty odd colleges and halls although it has not the strong administrative central government that is a characteristic of American, German, and French universities. The relation between the colleges and the university are based on sentiment in some such manner as the relations of the great colonies of the British Empire such as Canada, South Africa, and Australia. However, the analogy is not quite correct for there are ever present in Oxford the program, the university museums and laboratories. But above every other thing must be reckoned All Souls college and the examination board. These are the two institutions that render an English university's unique and if I will spend a paragraph or two.

The guiding principle in English university education is that a student should not be examined by the person who teaches him. That principle is recognized in the college of Ohio of a University system of Indiana but I do not believe it extends beyond the eighth grade. In England it is in all universities, colleges, the university museums and laboratories. But above every other thing must be reckoned All Souls college and the examination board. These are the two institutions that render an English university's unique and if I will spend a paragraph or two.

Before a student is ready to come before the final examination he must have passed three or four preliminary examinations which are superior to the university. These have no connection with the examinations that are forced on you by your college or given you by your tutor. Of course the examination system is one that has in a great measure been discarded in America and held up to ridicule so that I hardly know how to criticize it properly for Americans. In America, in general, we believe that a man should be given much credit for his class attendance and there has been a large amount toward a bureaucratic tabulation of credit. Whether such a system excludes the largeness of conception that is possible for a student to express in the examination system here I am unable to say for I have not yet been through the mill. However, I will venture to say that this much above Oxford boards of examining. They are very fair and the examinations are conducted in such a way as to give the student a large choice in answering questions. Once when a student says that he has not been treated fairly, but the complaint is very rare and can easily be compared to a complaint that is made against the judgment of the English supreme court on a point of law. There is no written examination for every one but after carefully students' papers have been most carefully corrected he must undergo an oral examination before the examiners to fill out any loopholes he may have left in answering on paper.

I do not know whether it is proper to say that All Souls' college is connected with the university. Strictly speaking, it is not. It is an institution like a great many other institutions that have just grown up in this country whose status is hard to discover. When an English institution has been held for ages you cannot explain its mechanism as you can American institutions that have been set up almost in our own lifetime. But when a person comes to Oxford and begins to inquire where the libraries, fellows, and scholarships, and authorship of this university are located I think he wants an immediate answer the best and easiest thing is to tell him All Souls college. Balliol college is supposed to be the college which takes the most palms to prepare undergraduates but All Souls college is a college for Dons and so far as Oxford possesses a graduate school it is All Souls college. It is a great honor to be a fellow of any of the colleges of Oxford but the honor most prized for here is fellowship in All Souls. In an English university too, you must not observe a man's degree so much as in America or France or Germany, but if you wish to know his standing in the world of 5-y., you must observe his color and manner. The most learned men are professors in English universities and a fellow seems to be a man above all others. All Souls college then is the pride of Oxford's intellectual world. The dons in it live long periods of time in close association with other men when they have long known at Oxford. They have their meals in common I think and the undergraduates, must eat at the same dinners "in half" each term to return their fellowship money. You do not go to the vice chancellor for a leader in scholarship. I believe, so much as you do to the Warden of All Souls. Perhaps it would give an insight into the tone of Oxford life if I should mention the names of the present wards of All Souls—Sir William Anson. He and Sir Derek are perhaps two of the greatest and prominent people in England and in the countries where English law is studied and I do not think that some students' of law at the U. B. know of his writings. I remember see Sir William's writings years ago at a meeting of the Woman's Anti-Suffrage Committee. Sir William provided the principal speaking, Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Since I came to a state where public orator is seldom in public called upon to open I was interested to hear the argument against it. So I commented down to the City hall where the meeting was being held and I got there just as Sir William was arising and he did deliver his opening address. I was instantly forced to recall some of the stories of lawyers I have heard of in England and its English fellow were a little man with an extremely high pitched voice and a massive brain and eloquent flow of language. He seemed the very embodiment of a legal fiction and capable of producing any interpretation of a legal point at a moment's notice. Mr. Derek in very old nick and when he lectured must do the greater part of it with his own private sitting room. He is still a great favorite, however among students who are reading law.

DE K. O. SISSON SPEAKS.

At First Year Service—Subject: "Religious Faith."

The first of the monthly vesper services that have been planned by the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. received quite a cordial reception at the hands of the students, and the faculty especially last Sunday afternoon. Although the program was not all that might have been wished with respect to the music—there being neither anyone to direct the singing, nor any special musical number, yet those whose musical capacities were keenly probably given more seat for the recital of the university art gallery quarter followed.

In his address, Dr. Sisson raised several very important questions—to a student's regard. He spoke of the period of readjustment that came with the new theories of science, including the new environment and the difficulties they brought to the student in his conception of faith. He then asked the question, "What is faith?" and proceeded to help his hearers to a more definite understanding of the subject, bringing out ideas not dogmatically but forceful phrases and apt example, leading each individual to think out his own solution to the problem suggested.

The past and the future are each peculiar, in that we know very much about the past but we can only know about the future by our ideas with respect to it. We have faith concerning the past; that is, we believe certain things are as we have happened, but our belief cannot change the facts. Again, the chemist believes that certain substances, when brought together, will act in a certain way—he has faith that what has taken place in the past under certain conditions will take place in the future under the same conditions. Then there is still another sort of faith. For instance, a young man says "I am going to the university," a second says "I am not." The following year, the first young man enrolls at the university, while the other remains at home. The first young man's faith was a faith that changed things. This power of changing things, of influencing events, Dr. Sisson described as an essential characteristic of religious faith.

OLD GRAD IN GOOD FLAY.

His Blue Due Largely to Excellent Work in College.

Mr. Loren L. Brown, B.S. (C.E.) 1913, has been given a position of testing timber in the New Forest products laboratory recently established at the Canadian government's at Montreal. The work of this laboratory will be very close to the work carried on in talk at Madison, Wisconsin. In addition, there will be a very complete and practical paper mill for the study of the manufacture of wood pulp and paper. Dr. Sisson feels that the largest non-communist machine ever built, costing nearly twenty thousand dollars.

Mr. Brown was an honor student in his classes and won an engineering scholarship at the end of his junior year. The present position largely upon the work he did for his senior thesis, which was entitled "Soil and Physical Properties of Idaho Western Larch (Tamarack) and Red Fir." The greater part of the time since graduation Mr. Brown has been working on concrete building construction in Victoria, British Columbia.

SHRAG AGS GRADUATES.

Large Class Leave School—Many Will Return to Long Course Work.

The second graduating class of the School of Practical Agriculture received their official send-off on the evening of May 12 at the university auditorium. Twelve diplomas were presented by Acting President Carlson. A very interesting program was opened by an address on the progress of the agricultural colleges of this country by Dr. L. Carlyle.

The following numbers were also given: Class history, Richard Wenzlau; "The Shamul," H. R. Abel; Address, Dr. E. O. Sisson; Violin solo, Miss Helen Carlyle; Valedictory, Joseph Kron; Selections by the university string quartet.

The members of the graduating class were: Miss Agnes Hanan, J. F. Kron, Nori Sutter, E. P. Burkhardt, R. D. Martin, C. R. E. Marinier, P. H. Meyer, L. R. Homer, J. L. Thummes, R. C. Wypgardten, B. L. Woolman, Wesley Scriver.

P. S. By mistake this was kept from last week's Argonaut.

BARN-DANCE AT DORM.

Girls in Glamazon Gymnas Dance With Farmers. German Guest a Celebrations in Herself.

A unique barn party was given Saturday night by the girls of Risiblebing Hall. The atmosphere of the country characterized it from beginning to end. The country maidens in glampion gin, and calico met the country boys dressed in their best for the occasion, whatever that might be. A lightly honed guest from Germany attracted much attention and we are told that he left of her partner kept her from giving a truel German dance. After games dancing started with a spirited Virginia reel. An entertainment was called at ten-thirty for a regular supper which included and cold roast and a vino. After this dancing was resumed, pictures were taken and the whole of the Loose broke with hearty goodbyes to the hospitable hostesses.

DELTA GAMMA CELEBRATES.

Annual of Omega Chapter Present and Help to Make Merry.

Delta Gamma held her annual Reunion banquet Monday evening at eight o'clock in the new home on 1153 Knox. The table decorations were suggestive of the season. The centerpiece of tall yellow dahlias was an arrangement of graceful, long handled basket. From this long, yellow asthmatics were drawn to the ends of the table. Covers were laid for twenty-five, with hand-painted menus placed in the center holding the story of the Sisson family. Lillian Slackhouse as characteistic hostess, arrived as Jeutel Loecher, Ruth Taylor, Alice B. McComb and Annemarie Terrill. A splendid array of fruits, vegetables and several hearty grades. These would also be a saving of about $5,000,000 in twenty years by using the new line instead of the old line. The work will likely be finished about July 1917.

WHAT YOU PLAN TO PLANT?

Trees Might Be Planted by Students Who Would See Campus Beautified.

It is a common practice at many of our colleges and universities to plant a class tree on some part of the campus, and it seems to me that it would be a good example for us to follow. At present our campus has very few shade or ornamental trees, and I'm sure that the 14 class could plant a tree which would add a great deal to the beauty of the campus in later years. It would also be a pleasure for us to re- turn to the university when we become old and our foot-steps have grown slow, to sit beneath the shadows of a great tree and think of our past college days.

We can plant this tree during the extra week which the faculty are going to grant us at the end of this semester.

What do you think of the idea?

We think the idea is a good one. Last year, the seniors lounged about in the shade of the buildings while waiting for Miss French's "graduating breakfast," long enough to plant a tree. She was breakfast late. The seniors almost came early. Captain Jen Smith would have made them chop wood.

We challenge the seniors to show enough initiative even to follow tradition: "if you must sit in the shade you ought at least to furnish the shade.

band music

prof. e. j. carey and his players from the university and the town play well.

many young artists perform with band for first time before college audience.

there was undoubtedly the largest attendance at last week's assembly of any assembly this year. practically all the students were present and it was this enthusiastic audience that inspired the band to such excellent rendition of the program. in all there were about twenty-five instruments giving immense volume and variation to parts. no doubt many wonder why there are twenty-five members in the university band while there are only some fifteen or sixteen in the cadet band. the difference in membership lies in the fact that many of the best musicians in college do not play in the cadet band. the cadet concert was prepared in a comparatively short length of time but showed what might be accomplished if could the college band and the cadet band practice as one for full length periods on drill days.

the first number on the program was a rousing little march called "inversada" which caught the attention of the audience and held its interest for the stronger numbers that followed.

the second number was a prize overture, "crown prince." this selection was one which was played in the contest at the spokane pow wow last summer by the moscow band which was fortunate enough to receive the decision of the judges.

a concert solo in the introduction was played capably by daniel mangy.

the "tale of two hearts," a little romance was the next number and was one of the highlights of the program. in this number the work of the baritones and the clarinets, which carried the theme, is worthy of particular mention.

"living pictures," while one of the lightest numbers was well received. the ensemble parts were handled by the band in professional style and ease.

the third number was dvořák's "humoreske." it was naturally a number with which everyone was familiar and in the category of good music stands near the top. it might be interesting to mention that this composition was written on the campus of "swanee river." the band received the best applause on this number.

"lohn's dream," a mexican serenade, followed "humoreske" and the peculiar beat of the bass noticeable in all mexican music was brought out to good advantage. although the band did well in rendering it the lack of the expressions of typical spanish music, due to the absence of the castanets and tambourine, were quite noticeable.

"king cart," a heavy march, was a very fitting climax to the program, the bass and trumpets taking a prominent part in its execution.

practically all the pieces on the program were heard here for the first time. professor carey having bought them on his recent trip to england.

annual enrollment 8000

hayden lake again chosen as best place for army life.

according to the latest report from the commandant, engagement will occur during the week april 13-18. the plans are about completed for the yearly camp which will again be held at hayden lake. this resort is well equipped for such work and the camp last year was such a success that it has been decided to have the work's outing again at the same place. liest. pools had several propositions under consideration but the one offered by the advocates of hayden lake seemed the best when viewed from all sides. this brings the spring vacation a trifle earlier than usual but if we have the same kind of spring weather we have had for the last month the soldiers will not be called upon to ensure excessive hardships.

the assessment will be $1.50 and each member of the battalion is requested to place this in bands of the commandant on the first drill day in april. it is hoped that the students will be prompt in the fulfillment of this obligation as promptness in this matter will considerably alleviate the duties of the commandant.

they say i've got the mumps

my cheeks, they say,

are puffed and out of shape

in every way!

it hardly seems—and yet

i feel a pain

somewhere about the jaw—

tis there again!

if i can eat this pickle,

( i will)

was that a pain i felt there?

catch me bill!

is that me in the mirror?

surely not,

my face does seem much larger than it ought.

i suppose it is the mumps
