UI departments make request for student fee increases

by Sam Taylor

University of Idaho officials from various campus departments, including ASUI, requested an increase in student fees of more than $70 per student during the first fee proposal meeting of the fall semester Tuesday. The meeting was held in the Student Union Building.

UI officials were joined by the athletic department, Outreach and Technology, and Idaho Counties and Student Union, all of whom presented their fee requests to the committee. The fee increases were presented to help maintain their operating budgets.

The student fee committee was created this past spring, based on a directive from President Tim White, that all student fee proposals will be studied and approved by this committee.

At the meeting, ASUI president James Myhrum presented a proposal to increase fees for the cafeteria, volleyball facility, and committee members, requesting an increase of $24.75 in student fees to help cover the costs of new facilities and IT improvements.

Students rock to raise breast cancer awareness

BY CYNTHIA REYNARD

The University of Idaho College Republicans, in partnership with University of Idaho at Moscow’s College Republicans, will host a rock-a-thon fundraiser on campus Tuesday, Nov. 27, from 4 to 8 p.m. in the Multidisciplinary Science and Engineering Building.

The proceeds of the fundraiser will go to the Susan G. Komen Foundation.

The event will feature food and live music.

The people make a clear decision: Voters believe the Republican administration in America has failed. The last four years of the Republican party has been a complete failure, the government has failed to make any progress on the issues facing the nation.

In a federal government completely in the hands of the Republicans, the right has no answer for every event that occurs during its reign. There can be no more painful blunders, no more glaring missteps; but people are getting better and better prepared to respond to the challenges the nation faces. After years of inaction, the Republicans have brought order to the chaos, and the future looks brighter.

The Argonaut also challenges the right to negotiate with those who have won the presidency and gained a majority in Congress. The newcomers are not completely wrong in their concerns, but the issues are too important to be left in the hands of the Republicans.

If the left can make the philosophy of the right a challenge and the right the standard, then the result will be a government that is not only focused on foreign policy, but also on domestic issues.

The choice is clear, the right must choose. We cannot afford to be divided or to fail.
LETTERS From the Editor

Funds

I was interested to see the article about the UMW, Associated Students, and their efforts to get more funding for the student government. It's a bit of a shame that the students are having to work so hard for their freedom. I think that the university should be providing more funding for student organizations. It's a bit unfair that the students have to pay for everything themselves.

Letters

High school

I was very impressed by the article about the new high school in my town. It's great to see that the community is coming together to build something that will benefit the students for years to come. I hope that the school will be a success and that it will make a positive impact on the lives of the students.

Unemployment

I was interested to read about the high unemployment rate in the city. It's a bit concerning to see that so many people are struggling to find work. I think that the government should be doing more to help these individuals. There are a lot of resources available, but it seems like people don't know how to access them.

Business

I was pleased to see the article about the new business that will be opening soon in town. It's great to see that there will be more opportunities for people to work in the area. I hope that the business will be successful and that it will bring more people to the community.

Banking

I was interested to read about the new banking options that are available in the area. It's great to see that there are more opportunities for people to save and invest their money. I think that it's important to have a strong local banking system.

Technology

I was excited to see the article about the new advancements in technology. It's amazing to see how quickly technology is changing and how it can be used to benefit people. I hope that these advancements will continue to be made and that they will be accessible to everyone.

Healthcare

I was pleased to see the article about the new healthcare initiatives that are being developed. It's great to see that there are more options for people to receive healthcare. I think that it's important to have a strong healthcare system.

Crime

I was saddened to hear about the recent crime in the city. It's a bit concerning to see that there are still problems with safety and security. I hope that the authorities will be able to address these issues soon.

Education

I was interested to read about the new educational initiatives that are being developed. It's great to see that there are more opportunities for people to learn and grow. I think that it's important to have a strong educational system.

Environment

I was pleased to see the article about the new environmental initiatives that are being developed. It's great to see that there are more opportunities for people to protect the environment. I think that it's important to have a strong environmental system.

A Hollywood Legend shows what it’s made of

BY ROB WEST

The Moscow music scene will soon be enjoying a notable member in the Hollywood Rock spectrum. The Moscow-based band Atlanta and the American indie band Pullman have decided to join forces to feature Moscow's scene to show everyone what the musicians in Moscow can do. Atlanta, a band formed in 2002, has been gaining recognition in the indie rock scene and has recently released their second album. Pullman, on the other hand, has been active in the underground music scene for a few years now and has released a couple of albums. The collaboration between the two bands is set to happen in Moscow, and it's expected to create a lot of buzz in the music scene.

Wipe-out the pain of everyday life with common school supplies

Editor's note: In improving this story, Bernstein overloaded small amounts of Wipe-Off to the plasma for research. The new plasma, referred to as Wipe-Off 2, was created by adding a proprietary blend of ingredients to the original formula. The new plasma is said to be more effective against a wider range of bacteria and viruses.

There's a crisis in America about politics, and not just talking about politics. I'm talking about a ring problem, a crisis that seems to have no solution. The truth is, there are all sorts of additives in the USA right now. This is a fact that we need to address. It's a problem that needs to be solved, and I think we need to think about it. Wipe-Off 2 can help us in this regard. Wipe-Off 2 is a new plasma that can be used to wipe away the ring problem. It's a powerful tool that can help us in our efforts to improve the quality of life.

"Bard's Tale" underdog to industry's sequels

BY TAMARA CUCOV
FOR MARION COUNTY ARGUS

"Bard's Tale," the popular role-playing game created and programmed by David Onek, has been given a highly notoriety is due to its

For funding, Parcsoft provided money for an initial game prototype to be released in 1984. The result was a graphic adventure with a variety of characters and choices for the player to make. The game was well received, and following its release, a sequel was created.

The sequel, "Bard's Tale II: Wages of Sin," was released in 1985 and gained a similar level of success as the original. The game featured improved graphics and a more detailed storyline.

In 1986, a third game in the series, "Bard's Tale III: Gods of War," was released. This game was developed by a different team and was considerably different from the previous two. It received mixed reviews from critics and players alike.

In 1990, a fourth game, "Bard's Tale IV: Barrows Deep," was released. This game was developed by a different team again and was considered a disappointment compared to the previous games.

In summary, "Bard's Tale" is a long-running series of role-playing games that has been enjoyed by many players over the years.
Defensive end proofs hard work does pay off

Florida is a prime target for senior Brandon Kania.

"That's all with the 10 minutes of regular practice he spent after a big closeout and the 15 minutes of overtime he performed once regular practice was over."

His coaches don't require the sprinting, but Kania requires it for himself. "It's not just for you, but for the rest of the team." He's the No. 1 defensive end and is used to being the best.

The traditions of the hard work, he's done that as a student-athlete in years every year.

For Kania, a 22-pounds loss, he's lost weight and become a better athlete.

"I've learned that you have to always keep your head up, no matter how many times you get knocked down," Kania says. "Always get up and go back on the horse because that's what builds character."

Everyone's got good times, but it's what they do in their bad times that shows what kind of character they have."}

Idaho seniors ready for final home game of season

by Benjamin Grace

Over the past four years University of Idaho football has faced multiple changes, numerous losses and has been working hard as we end.

But through the coaching change and losing season, a group of players have given their best all year and day out, and on Saturday against Seattle will play their final game in front of Vandals fans.

"Really want to do as well in front of our home crowd last time," senior offensive coordinator Tom Cable said. "It's a great opportunity for us to show what we've worked all season."

"The seniors spent their final years of college in this last game," senior center Ray Bateman said. "We have a lot of reps out there on the field this game, which has been a great opportunity for us to show what we've learned."

"I get my little 100.00 (Terry O.)" impression coming up," Bateman added. "Just because we're not in the playoffs doesn't mean we're not going to have a good game."

"I wish they all could come back and be a part of our program for longer than one year," Nick Holt said.

"It's never too easy to go through a coaching change," Holt said. "The seniors have to adapt and learn how coaches operate and how they bring their programs."
SPORSTBRIEFS

Women's basketball team picked to finish second

UCF's women's basketball team was picked to finish second in the Big West Conference by the Pac-10 media poll. The Vandals received two first-place votes and finished fourth overall with one first-place vote in the media poll.

The team finished the 2004-05 season with a 15-14 record, which was four games behind UC Irvine, the conference champion.

Pacific, Utah State picked to win men's basketball title

Pac-10 coaches and media predicted the 2004-05 season on Tuesday and favored the conference regular-season champion Pacific and the tournament champion Utah State to win their respective titles.

The figures and records endured despite the spread of the 'Angels' logo in reference to one vote in the media poll. Both received 199 points in the media vote. The figures for the regular season, voting Pacific and Utah State for first and second, respectively, and the tournament, voting Pacific and Utah State as well.

Men's basketball to play 'Wolverines'

UCF's men's basketball team is expected to play in an exhibition game against Wolverines at 7 p.m. at UC Irvine's Verizon Wireless Arena on Wednesday.

"We're not going to be on the field the quickest way and running back right now in the best way to get us going, out of the backfield," Sherrard said. "It's going to be some big games in the games they've been to.

"The defense is much the same; they're much better than we are, I think. Their starting lineup is pretty consistent with what they've done the past two years," he said.

In fact, the Vandals have entered this season ranked fifth in the Pacific's overall defensive scoring in 2004, 22-7, against the UA team.

Andrews, Kansas brings more to the team than just a light defensive touch. He's a hard worker and a great team player who thoroughly enjoys doing things that help his teammates out.

"He's there and getting people off the court, and if you're not having a real bad day he'll help you out to give you a good day," he said. "He's got a bad habit of knowing the game, so he knows the game before you even get here."

"That's why he's going to be the starting quarterback for us this season," he said. "He's had a great summer and he's been with us the whole time."

"I want to have him there for the whole year, too," he said. "We need him and we need him to be our starting quarterback."

"Anderson says Kania, who is one of the team's five captains, has shown that he is a leader and a player who knows he can be the leader on the team.

"(Kania) is the kind of leader that you need on a team," Anderson said.

"Kania's ability to focus on the game through injuries has helped him develop as a role model as well.

Freshman year, Kania par- doned this rookie mistake and played through it. After a bigger-than-expected year in his big and played through it in his first year, Kania was able to develop his own game plan and his own style of play."

"I'm happy and I've learned a lot from him," he said. "I'm happy and I've learned a lot from him."
Swim team ready for Big West Shootout

By James Lewis

Going into its first meet against Big West opponents, the University of Idaho swim team is out to prove itself.

On Thursday, the Vandals left for Irvine, Calif., to compete in the Big West Shootout. The two-day meet begins at 10 a.m. tomorrow, finishing Saturday, and will kickoff Idaho's first meet (outside of) conference and nonconference meets.

"I'm excited about this meet," said senior Louise Lobel. "I think we'll have a lot of fun, we've been training hard for a while and it's about to pay off.

"We have had a good season so far," said senior Mike Bowes. "The first meet is the most important because it shows the month's training.

"I think we'll do well," said senior Tracy Smith. "I think we'll have a good chance at winning."
UI Blood drive draws students for charity

By Nate Peterson

The homecoming tradition. That is how much Homecoming Chair Troy Walgamott described ASU's first Blood Drive held Tuesday and Wednesday in the Calister and Washington rooms of the Idaho Center.

Walgamott, a senior business major and student of the psychology major, said the drive was a way for students to give back to the community and support a good cause.

Homecoming tradition, for at least 10 years, the Idaho Center has hosted the student leadership and various living groups, both Greek and non-Greek, to help drive and serve volunteers to help run the drive.

"I’ve done blood drives before, like every year since blood became a required class in high school, but this was our first drive," Walgamott said.

Walgamott said living groups pushed each other to donate. "It’s not a competition of who gets the most," Walgamott said. "It’s more a drive to show we have blood on campus." Walgamott also said Microbiology major Kelly Black volunteered to help at the recovery area of the blood drive. Sitting at a table next to fruit and cookies, Black said he first heard about the drive from his sorority, Gamma Phi Beta. "I heard that they needed some people to help," Black said. "I know the need for blood." Black said.

Megan Pilcher volunteered twice for her house, Pi Beta Phi. The sophomore finance student donated blood on Tuesday and helped clean up on Wednesday. For Pilcher, blood drives are a regular thing for her. "I donated blood last year," Pilcher said. "I’ve something I can do to help.

The blood drive was part of the philanthropic effort for the community. "I think it’s important for students to give back and to think of those in need," Pilcher said.

Walgamott, who is also the Red Cross blood drive coordinator, said "I wish every campus had a group like this on campus and community. It’s a great way to be involved."

Walgamott, who has also been involved in various student organizations on campus, said the next blood drive would be December 1 and 2. "I’m hoping for at least 100 donors," Walgamott said at a set up appointment.

New Homecoming events give back to the community

By Lisa Wakeman

New additions and changes to this year’s homecoming have allowed the inclusion of city streets, donate blood, money and time.

"The whole idea behind Homecoming this year is to fill the campus and families, Walgamott said.

We wanted to put more emphasis on giving back to the community," said Walgamott. Homecoming chair Troy Walgamott, a senior, and his committee were involved in several events around campus and Homecoming, but the blood drive was the only thing that Walgamott would be called for, during blood drives.

"We appreciate the donors," Walgamott said. "It’s a great thing to give back to the community."

The other interpretation is about the university, Walgamott said. "This has been there forever and still goes on.

"It’s to provide recognition... for the things that you’ve done in the blood drive," Walgamott said.

A fundraising campaign and year to buy Forbes by needy families, Walgamott said. Each Laurel award is worth at least $100 in a change jar for the Knights of Columbus team raising money for the blood drive. The blood drive was a part of this year’s homecoming, Walgamott said.

The new trick-or-treat food drive brought in donations for food to the Moscow Food Bank. Walgamott said. Located just down the street from the University of Idaho, the food drive was a great project for the students and the community.
