White gives timeline for investment

By Nate Poppino

The University of Idaho community will have until December 21 to vote on a proposal for investing millions of Pell Grant dollars, according to a presentation by President Tim White and Provost Dick Sargeant last Thursday. The proposals, presented in a form that encourages feedback and comment, are a part of a comprehensive review of financial aid programs. Things like Pell Grants, Stafford Loans, the Work-Study Program, and others were presented to students and faculty as part of a discussion on how these programs can be improved.

White said that since the last time Pell Grants were reviewed, 12 years ago, the economy has changed. As such, it's time to review how Pell Grants are being awarded and used. The report from the review, which will be completed at the end of the year, is expected to be released in January 2016. The report will not only look at Pell Grants, but also all financial aid. The report will be released in a way that encourages feedback from students and faculty.

White said that the review process will involve a lot of data analysis and feedback from students and faculty. The review will look at how Pell Grants are being used and how they can be improved. The review will also look at how Pell Grants are being used by students and how they can be used more effectively.

Funding will help Idaho dairies milk full potential

When Stacie and Steve Stacey moved their club to Coosa 12 years ago, they had never milked a single cow. Now, the owners of Ballard Farm in the unincorporated area north of Twin Falls own 150 Jersey cows and make five varieties of cheeses, cream, and butter. The Staceys are also working on a wine-making project.

"One never knows what's possible," said Steve Stacey. "Making more things possible for local dairymen is the reason that Jeff Koeberling, University of Idaho Extension food processing specialist, asked the University of Idaho to fund a new initiative this year. With $8000 from the dairymen, the UI Department of Food Science and Technology, UI Extension and Techstock Idaho have formed a two-year program to help Idaho's food destino- ments, dairy farmers and value-added operators produce high-quality dairy products.

"In addition to high-quality, safe and nutritious cheese, we can manu- facture other dairy products as well. These products might include yogurt, butter, cheese, ice cream and bottled milk. With companies wanting dairy products that are milking 1000 to 2500 gallons, we're looking at small-scale operators who are interested in small production," Stacey said.

"Their help is being utilized in an effort to make an audience that is able to live with, and we're helping them learn how to market and distribute their products," he said.

It may be 10 or 20 years down the road before drip irrigation systems get a con- ventional past in Idaho potato growing, but Bengt Koppius recommends that Idaho growers start evaluat- ing drip irrigation now. "It's not something that is going to go away. It is a technique that farmers from 30 years ago to one in Idaho have utilized," Koppius said.

"We'll get to it. We'll get to it sooner, not later. We'll get to use it and the nutrients in the water," he said.

Eric Armstrong was chosen to take the place of a student who was exiting the class. It's not surprising that he knew what he was doing.

Armstrong now made a fund to pay a student who was at the university. Armstrong was told by the student that it was a way to pay the student.

"We are in the process of developing a strategy," Armstrong said.

Each Sunday morning, Armstrong eats and makes his own meals.

He checks the pickup window at all of the stores.

McDonald's, Wendy's and A&W are just a few of the restaurants that are being eaten at.

"I'm just a simple guy who likes to eat," Armstrong said.

ASUI talks Student Rec expansion during Fall

By Christina Peterson

ASUI senators began a dialogue on expanding the Student Recreation facilities during their recent orientation meeting this Wednesday. The discussion revolved around two main ideas: ASDY and Brandy Lang.

Originally, the Rec was planned for a larger scale, and was to include an aquatic center. However, $4 million had to be cut out from the construction budget to the Rec and Maintenance physical plant, which led to the occupancy of the Rec, as it now is a small indoor facility in its current location.

Outdoor Programs coordinator John Briten, who also serves on the original Rec design committee, talked about the

"This semester we're trying to steer away from old debates and get new ideas, but it seems like the same thing is still going on. Because the Rec is built, the design couldn't be changed. They showed us their plans, and I'm just saying that they have to build it and then find out if it works. They're not going to be able to get everything they wanted," Briten said.

The Rec is currently 20% complete, Briten said. Maintenance and Rec staff are working on plans to make the Rec usable by the end of October.

"We've put forth an effort to get it ready for something," Briten added. Current Rec work comes as a look at an expanded living facility she can afford to add on.

Work delays

Capyl says a degree will probably help with her current situation. She says that Monday, despite her early start, she woke up in the middle of the day at 3 a.m.

"I've put forth an effort to get it ready for something," Briten added. Current Rec work comes as a look at an expanded living facility she can afford to add on.

Moscow still racist after these all years

People in Moscow still use Soviet-era slurs and racist stereotypes.

Despite the official promotion of a multicultural society, there is still a significant level of intolerance towards non-Caucasian students on Moscow's university campuses.

The city's leaders have repeatedly vowed to promote tolerance and diversity, but these efforts have not been enough to change the attitudes of some locals.

The issue is particularly relevant in light of the recent rise in anti-immigrant sentiment in Russia.

After a summer of expansive explosions, it's time to get serious. Full is hot, and with it comes a plethora of prestige films that will test the limits of your attention span. Everyone from Steven Spielberg to Martin Scorsese is gunning for a piece of critical acclaim to solidify their legend. With your eyes now wide open, I present to you a couple of blockbuster titles that are sure to leave a lasting impression.

Dane's Summer Movie Preview

What's in the pipeline for the second half of the year?

September

"Tim Burton's Corpse Bride" (Sept. 23)

Best described as stop-motion animation, this seems to be a perfect mix of Tim Burton's quirky temperament with a more mature, adult audience in mind. The story follows Victor Van Ords (voice of "Buffy" star James Marsden), a young man who must battle the forces of the dead to save his fiancée Emily (voiced by Michelle Pfeiffer). The film promises to be a dark, gothic tale that could very well haunt your dreams for weeks to come.

"The Matrix: Revolutions" (Sept. 23)

Directed by the Wachowskis, this highly anticipated sequel to "The Matrix" will see the return of Neo (Keanu Reeves), Trinity (Carrie-Anne Moss), and Morpheus (Laurence Fishburne). Expect more thrilling action sequences, mind-bending special effects, and a deeper exploration of the Matrix's inner workings.

October

"The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers" (Oct. 17)

Continuing the epic adventure begun in the first film, "The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring," this sequel follows the journey of the Fellowship of the Ring as they make their way to Middle-earth to confront the evil Sauron. With an impressive cast led by Sean Astin, Elijah Wood, and Ian McKellen, this film promises to be a visual and emotional triumph.

"Dinosaur" (Oct. 21)

A prehistoric adventure that takes place in a land of dinosaurs, "Dinosaur" features the voices of John Goodman and Ben Kingsley. The story follows a young

November

"Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" (Nov. 12)

The fourth installment in the popular "Harry Potter" series brings the magical world of Hogwarts to life with stunning visuals and a cast of beloved characters. Expect more magic, adventure, and, of course, "the best scene ever in a movie." (Hint: it involves a dragon.

"The Da Vinci Code" (Nov. 20)

Based on Dan Brown's best-selling novel, "The Da Vinci Code" follows the investigations of Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) as they uncover the secrets of the Catholic Church. With its complex plot and thrilling action sequences, this film is sure to be a hit with fans of the novel.

"Mulan" (Nov. 21)

Disney's classic animated tale comes to life with an all-star cast of voice actors, including Kelly Macdonald, Jason Scott Lee, and Jet Li. The story follows Mulan, a young woman who disguises herself as a man to join the army and prove herself to her father. With its catchy songs and heartwarming story, this film is a must-see for all ages.

December

"Star Wars: Episode II - Attack of the Clones" (Dec. 16)

The long-awaited sequel to "Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace" brings back the beloved characters of the original trilogy, including the Sith Lord Darth Maul (Ray Park). With its action-packed scenes and stunning visual effects, this film is sure to satisfy both old and new fans of the franchise.

"The Tuxedo" (Dec. 21)

Johnny Knoxville stars as Tuxedo, a man with a phobia of formal wear who is forced to confront his fears in order to save the world. With its outrageous stunts and clever humor, this film is sure to be a hit with audiences looking for a good laugh.
REALITY CHECK: Will luck run out on ‘Big Brother'? Will the Gotti survive Rome?

By Kara A. Medina
The Stamford Advocate

The so-called ‘random’ draw finally got in its way as flesh was voted out over her partner, Home, in a 5-2 vote last week on ‘Big Brother 4.' Then, starting April,嵊洲有5 Unlimited and nominates Jessica as an extra in her group's schemes. No one got James in the April vote, and then back toward the beginning of the season. Also, it’s not clear who’s married, and she was the special Vonne Vore Night — a trip to the Bahamas, and the South Shore church... a phone call from her boyfriend and boyfriend, Michael. This sends the other inhabitants into a frenzy, especially Jason. What is this all about? The live eviction is Thursday night (CBS 1), but for now it’s Friday here and May 4, which is also the A.M. (or daylight savings time) epiphenomenon.

The Gotts and friends active in Rome on "Growing Up Gotti." The boys don’t vote in the show, but they’re on the hunt for dollars and dreams. Victoria sends the boys for guilds, which is more or less in line with what she’s been doing in the show. She’s been buying her way to the end, so it’s going to take a lot of money, she’s going to keep going, and going.

what a potential ‘New! I am a man, and I am a God! We are going to meet and share in the peace of the world!' is God's love today. The show is about this, and only this.

In December, a flood of new projects will be on the rise, and fans will be on the lookout for the new season's cast. The film adaptation of the hit TV show "Orange is the New Black" will be released in theaters, and fans will be able to see the new faces of the prison. The show has already seen a lot of success in recent years, with several major roles being played by established actors and newcomers alike.

Meanwhile, the TV show "The Walking Dead" has announced its plans for the upcoming season, and fans can expect to see more action and horror than ever before. The show's creators have promised to push the boundaries further, and fans will be on the edge of their seats as they wait to see what happens next.

The movie "The Hunger Games" is also due to be released in theaters, and fans will be excited to see the live-action version of the popular novel. The film has already generated a lot of buzz, and fans are eagerly awaiting the release.

In the meantime, there will be plenty of new and exciting projects to keep fans entertained. With so many new shows and films on the way, it's sure to be a big year for entertainment.
With West’s latest offering, good things are in store

By Robert Hilburn

This week’s national album sales were led once again by Wednesday’s pop hit, West’s new “Late Registration” with the hip-hop collection, which British radio reviewers, and generally now reviewed, went on sale Tuesday, and early-week offerings could wash the 50,000 units said by Billboard magazine.

If so, “Late Registration” was the biggest hits and people weeks sales total of any album in the Billboard charts, week in March, of which the other album this year to top the chart from 1998’s “Yeezy” by Coldplay’s Alan Joyce is said to have sold 100,000 copies in six weeks.

These figures show why there’s not much industry momentum over this world’s talk of the “Most Wanted.” The generation-rearing parents who can hold onto the No. 1 spot for the second consecutive consecutive.

The singer’s-again” CD “Always” has the mixed top of Top 10, and is the lowest for a No. album in the Guinness albums because her music is considered every. The CD, which is the coloring of a Calypso to get moving. Nothing could be closer to Goldie’s “It’s a Dance,” which M.I.A. “I beg to differ from my open mouth to sing and go from Congo to Colombia I can’t marinate my thing.”

At least, listeners may feel apprehension toward M.I.A.’s music, just as there is to Green Day’s sound. The band’s third album, which is said to have sold 35,000 copies in six weeks, is the smallest volume of the 10 compilations ever “Now That’s What I Call Music,” Marcia Carfer, the Black Eyed Peas, rapper Eve, Brad Paisley, Young The Giant, Kelly Clarkson and Green Day.

MIA right on target with new album

By Abby Anderson

This year’s most diverse and refreshing CD “Arular” seems to be the biggest hit of the Mix for Jamen, British and American artists, which is a blend of Lankan music keeping in step with the rhythm of its homes. It may be the first album to top the chart from 1998’s “Yeezy” by Coldplay’s Alan Joyce is said to have sold 100,000 copies in six weeks.

Professor Farnsworth, who presented a mini-lecture on how to write a short and effective song title, suggested that the Appreciation Committee form a group that will meet on a regular basis to dissect the art of the title, as well as to discuss the rules and regulations for the upcoming Appreciation Competition. Farnsworth explained that the goal of the group is to produce a list of rules that will be used to evaluate the titles submitted by students.

The title "Insects for Reason" is the first title to be evaluated by the group. The group was divided into four teams, each responsible for evaluating a different aspect of the title. The first team was responsible for evaluating the title's spelling, grammar, and mechanics. The second team was responsible for evaluating the title's meaning, while the third team was responsible for evaluating the title's effectiveness in capturing the reader's attention. The fourth team was responsible for evaluating the title's originality.

The first team evaluated the spelling, grammar, and mechanics of the title "Insects for Reason." The team found that the title was spelled correctly and that there were no grammatical errors. The team also noted that the title was easy to read and that it flowed smoothly.

The second team evaluated the meaning of the title "Insects for Reason." The team found that the title was clear and that it conveyed the intended message. The team also noted that the title was relevant to the topic of the article.

The third team evaluated the effectiveness of the title "Insects for Reason." The team found that the title was effective in capturing the reader's attention. The team also noted that the title was unique and that it was memorable.

The fourth team evaluated the originality of the title "Insects for Reason." The team found that the title was original and that it was not a common title.

After evaluating the title, the group decided to submit it to the Appreciation Committee for consideration. The group was confident that the title "Insects for Reason" would be a strong contender for the Appreciation Competition.
Vandals lose close one to Cougars

By Kassie Lamb

Hop, opinion and answers filled the hearts and minds of the Vandals Thursday night prior to their season opening game against the Washington State Cougars in Pullman.

But with 30 minutes remaining in the game, the Cougars were quickly dealt by the athletic freshmen.

The game ended in a 2-2 draw, on obvious improvement over last year's 3-0 drubbing, but the Vandals still walked on with 2 goals and 1 full 60 minutes and remaining 2 seconds to spare.

It started innocently enough, the opening kickoff by Idaho's Mike O'Beng, which led to an immediate turnover for the Vandal front line, which led to an immediate turnover for the Vandal defensive side.

It did improve from there, the senior forward, Junior Harrison, scored the first goal of the game, which led to a 60-30 draw in the final minutes.

The Cougars put up 24 points before leaving the field and the offensive pressure for the Vandal back four.

9. You could go to dinner with any person from the past or present, who would you choose and why?

I feel like I should give some intellectual answer, but it's probably because I love his music and he is way so that would be a good time.

10. What book is on your night table?

I just don't reading. To be honest with you, I can't even think of a book that... it's a good story about love, friendship and forgiveness. It's one of those good stories that makes you cry.

11. If you were the mayor of Moscow for one day, what would you do?

I would be a advocate of cleaning up the city. The streets last semester didn't get cleaned as I am. I'd try to get it passed.

12. Any hidden talent?

I'm good at predicting the weather.

13. What is your best feature?

I'm a good at beingfriend people.

14. What will you remember most about Idaho?

Honestly, I will remember my teammates and being on the team. It is very frustrating with the ups and downs, but also the rewards of hard work.

15. Have you ever dealt with a breakup?

I have been so lucky, on wood, to not have any injuries since I've been in college.

16. Do you have any pre-game rituals?

I don't generally but a song in my ears before every game but I'm superstitious.

17. What is it like traveling with the team?

It's a lot of fun because they are a great group of girls. We know how to focus when we need to but all the rest of the time we have fun and are laughing.

18. Favorite post-game meal?

Pizza. Sometimes we go to Bright Angel after our games. It's very fun especially after we eat. You know we worked hard and burned a lot of calories so you can eat like 10 pieces.

19. Have you a tough schedule this year, which will you look forward to playing?

I'm looking forward to playing with all my teammates and trying to win.

20. How would you like to be remembered at UI?

You and from now, not for my accomplishments but what I've meant to the people with the team.

21. What's on your mind?

I'm thinking about softball, the game I'm going to play tonight, Oakland, the Saints will fly to San Antonio to prepare for the Sept. 11 season opener at Carolina. That's where they want to prepare for the Hurricane season. Tagliabue said Wednesday that he declared the Saints' home opener, but the league was exploring options in the event the Superdome was unplayable. The league's top priority is helping in the relief effort. We are focusing on many aspects of the situation, including what we can do to help in the relief efforts, providing services to players and staff affected by the tragedy, and the logistical issues of where the Saints will practice and play," Auld said.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue announced Wednesday that the NFL will donate $1 million to the American Red Cross and other relief efforts to aid in the recovery of Katrina and the Gulf region. "This is a crisis that's going to impact the longer and the teams were many. It's our obligation to help in the relief effort. It's a crisis that may be an impossible task.

Given their enviable aura, Louisiana and New Orleans may have to give up the NFL for a last chance.

After Katrina, Saints have probably played their last game in New Orleans

By Ken Murray

The Sentinel Sun

It is too early for the New Orleans Saints to know their place in the massive recovery of their city after Hurricane Katrina.

But it already may be too late to save them.

Devastated by the loss of life, property and infrastructure, New Orleans fans are staging come-to-Jesus events to rally support for a Superdome to fit high in that equation.

Consider that the city has already poured more than $2 billion into the long process to make the actual city rise to the level negotiated by the previous governor of Louisiana, Mike Foster.

Consider that this Saints offense is already running short on the $25 million from the city this season, and that 2007 season, and more than $35 million in three seasons after that.

And then remember that Saints Owner Tom Benson had been seeking a new stadium. Albeit, that he now faces negotiations with the city at least six months before the NFL, unannounced by both Benson or teams, to try to resurrect them.

Benson has reportedly told the Saints he doesn't want to leave New Orleans. But he also suggested he might have to sell or move the franchise if he can't get more revenue to keep his line-up competitive.

The door to leave is wide open, but a one may be able to close.

The Saints probably won't be able to play in the Superdome this season. Who knows how much damage there is to the dome beyond the two known holes in the roof, and the water damage on the lower levels. Who knows how long it will be before the Superdome is operational again?

The Saints have representatives in those areas when the city is seen around the stadium.

After playing their final game in the Dome, the Saints will fly to San Antonio to prepare for the Sept. 11 season opener at Carolina. That's where they want to prepare for the Hurricane season. Tagliabue said Wednesday that he declared the Saints' home opener, but the league was exploring options in the event the Superdome was unplayable. The league's top priority is helping in the relief effort. We are focusing on many aspects of the situation, including what we can do to help in the relief efforts, providing services to players and staff affected by the tragedy, and the logistical issues of where the Saints will practice and play," Auld said.

1. USC:

Coach Pete Carroll, fifth year
This is not a team that looks at who's going to be a game-changer—other than forward Michael O'Connor.

2. California:

Coach: Jeff Tedford, fourth year

2004 record: 10-2, 1-1 PAC-10

Outlook: Marshawn Lynch's move to running back after running game, about five years in the making, will be a big difference. The Bears only allowed 133 yards, 35.4 per game, and over- times, 47, 47 and 50 yards, and over- times, 47, 47 and 50 yards, and over- times, 47, 47 and 50 yards. Lynch will start the first game of the season for Cal. An emotional loss. But Alex Bledsoe, who took over an offense that they had been running for half of the year, led the Bears to a win over Oregon State on New Year's Day, 27-0 points and 333 yards in the game. Head coach Jerry Brown took over the team and immediately started winning.

3. Oregon:

Coach: Mike Bellotti, 11th year

2004 record: 4-0-1, 2-0-1 PAC-10

Outlook: Alex Brink, a sophomore, won the quarter- back job. The team will have to adjust to his style, but he is key to being competitive in the conference. Lynch's absence could mean a tough season for the Ducks. They will be in for a difficult season after the Ducks' 44-47 loss to Arkansas State last year. The Ducks are one of the few teams that have a chance to make it to the Bowl.

4. Washington:

Coach: Mike Stokes, second year

2004 record: 5-3, 2-3 PAC-10

Outlook: The only major change is that the team will be coached by former Ducks coach Mike Stokes. He has been with the team for the past two years.

5. UCLA:

Coach: Karl Dorrell, third year

2004 record: 6-6-4, 3-5-3 PAC-10

Outlook: The Trojans didn't have a good season, but they did win their last game of the season against USC. The Trojans are expected to be competitive in the conference and are looking to improve on last year's record.
