Eight Greeks elected to nine open positions

JENNIFER KAHNEN

A five minutes to 11 on Wednesday night election results were tallied with two hand-held calculators. Huddled in an anonymous Administration Building classroom, election officials had been comparing signatures, names and numbers for five hours over an emplded 26-inch pizza box.

One person read the names of voters while another perused through a 4-inch-deep master list with a highlighter. They didn't find anyone who voted twice.

Harry Jerry Jrello was one of the write-ins for senators. There were votes for Elvis, Kurt Cobain and an assortment of cartoon characters. Two people wrote in "sorority director." The most common write-ins for all candidates were Mickey Mouse, Anybody Else, and Anybody But. A few wrote in more than three voters.

This was the first year students were e-mailed a ballot. Matt Wimer, ASUI Web Administrator, designed the program. Computer Services allowed him to send the mail on their servers.

It was hoped voter turnout would skyrocket if students were e-mailed a ballot. About 8,000 ballots were sent out to two groups. At 2 a.m. Wednesday morning. Less than 500 were returned before the polls closed at 6 p.m.

Ray Anderson, an operator at Computer Services, said the mass mailing did not tax the system. He also said he was surprised he didn't.

From South Africa with love

Lisa Lanzian

SOMETIMES, says Gina Richardson, you just have to sign for it. When Richardson, recreation supervisor for Moscow Parks and Recreation, received a letter in the mail inviting her to travel to South Africa with a citizen ambassador program, her first impression was to throw it away.

"I looked at it and thought I can't do this," Richardson said in her presentation at the University of Idaho Women's Center Tuesday.

But after a friend fished the letter out of the wastebasket, she decided to go Africa a try. Richardson participated in the People to People program, a pre-Peace Corps ambassador program started in the 1950s by President Dwight Eisenhower. Her group, made up mostly of women and predominately black, traveled to South Africa in August to encourage sports and recreation in young people.

Their message? Believe in yourself. "These are women - black women - women of color - who had accomplished something in the U.S."

"The concept is to work one to one - people to people - not government to government."

The first school the group visited was a "white" school, which Richardson says was immaculate even by U.S. standards. The second school, however, was for students of "mixed race" - with half the funding of the white school. There was one coach for three soccer teams, and they all played with one ball.

"Systematic segregation has ended - but it's evident the legacy will continue on a long time."

By the time the group reached the third school, Richardson says they were all depressed. It was a chair for students sitting on their own hearts back. "They didn't have a whole lot, but they had spirit," Richardson said through tears. "It was just incredible to be in that environment - everything else is secondary to that experience."

For her, the emphasis of the trip was the kids. "If we inspire even one kid... especially the girls... I think we did make a difference."

Coghlan suit against Alpha Phi dropped

JUSTIN OLIVER RUIZ

The suit on behalf of Rejena Coghlan against the University of Idaho chapter of Alpha Phi has been dropped, four years after the alcohol-related accident that left the freshman pleged paralyzed below the waist.

The accident occurred on Aug. 19, 1993, when Coghlan returned to the Alpha Phi house following a evening of heavy drinking. Evidently confused by the surroundings of the house to which the 18-year-old freshman had pledged, she was helped to bed by friends who later found her lying below the fire escape. Coghlan had hile a wooden rail in her fall, fracturing three vertebrae, and paralyzing her below the waist.

This suit originated named Alpha Phi, fraternities Beta Theta Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Pi Kappa Alpha, UI and the Idaho Board of Education, along with a number of individuals. The claims against the university, the fraternities and state Board of Education were dismissed, leaving the plaintiffs' claims against Alpha Phi.

Although the original complaint against Alpha Phi was dismissed on Sept. 9, the plaintiffs amended their complaint to assert a premises liability claim. This complaint was dropped Oct. 7, after plaintiffs could find no evidence of dangerous conditions at the Alpha Phi house on which to hold the university liable.

"Plaintiffs were unable to show that Mr. Coghlan's injury was the result of some dangerous condition on the house premises," said Alpha Phi attorney Chris Kelley in a letter to Alpha Phi chapter advisor Jane Fallon.

The accident sparked a campus-wide convolution in alcohol policy. Such discussions led to the banning of alcohol from public spaces in the fraternities, confined to individual rooms of those 21 years of age or older. This policy limits the university's alcohol policy for "Cedence Halls. Alcohol is banned completely from sororities."

Alpha Phi International's, national policy has not been changed. We have always tried to get women to obey state and local alcohol laws, and we do not allow any alcohol in the house," Fallon said.

"What happened to Rejena was tragic and we have considered an adult, responsible for"

Need for parking, buildings may rise with enrollment

DEVIN HAMMES

ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

IT all goes well, the University of Idaho is expected to see an increase in enrollment throughout the next 10 years.

Members of the administration have set a goal to accommodate 14,000 students within a 10-year horizon, said UI president, vice president for student affairs.

The university has launched a $250,000 public relations campaign to solidify hopes for an increase in enrollment. Television, newspaper and magazine advertisements are in the process of being aired and printed.

An increase enrollment brings about questions on the need for additional housing, parking and classrooms. If the administration is able to reach its goals, an influx of students of that size will lead to additional housing, but that will be after enrollment has met the 12,000 mark, Godwin said.

"We would anticipate building future projects, but we probably will not see the 12,000 mark without having to worry about additional housing," he explained.

Godwin said discussions in the Residence Halls are being used as a site for breaking them down, making more students would have a place to stay.

"As far as residences go, it is safe to say we will be building and adding on eventually," he said.

Dan Schenberger, acting director of Auxiliary Services, agreed. He said the university has some time to plan for additional residences.
UI provides holiday bus ride home

It's 5:30 on a dark, foggy Friday evening and you just finished taking your last test before a much-needed holiday vacation; the last thing you want to worry about is driving the long, monotonous, icy road home to southern Idaho. Not to worry.

The University of Idaho will be providing a low-cost, safe and convenient bus service to southern Idaho during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

The chartered bus service will cost $50 round-trip to Boise, with stops along the way in New Meadows, Payette, and Weiser. The cost to locations beyond Boise, including Twin Falls, Pocatello, and Idaho Falls will be $90.

Bruce M. Pitman, dean of students, said the prices are comparable and less than other bus services available in the area, but the convenience to the students outweighs the monetary factor. The university actually loses money on this service, but they continue offering it because the turnout of interested students is so great.

Pitman says the bus service is a safe, inexpensive way to get home. "A lot of parents are comforted knowing their kids won't be driving home in bad weather and roads.

It also gives the students a break; they just want to get out of here. This way they can sleep and relax on the way home and not have to worry about driving.

her own actions... you cannot baby-sit them," Pitman said.

Students come to UI typically well-versed in the dangers of alcohol, said Hal Godwin, vice president for student affairs. The university and Greeks have long worked together to educate members about the dangers of alcohol, but the houses are independent of the university. "We don't have the official oversight responsibility in the (Greek) houses that we do in the Residence Halls," Godwin said. "I think the public assumes that and the Greeks are much like the Residence Halls systems and that we have complete authority, but they are much like private dwellings near the university. The state doesn't have the right to govern them since they are independently owned and operated."

Coming Events

The Plant and Soil Science club will be holding their annual Pea field sale in the College of Agriculture fryer. Pre-4:30 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Pre-orders are accepted. For more information e-mail laegb@uidaho.edu.

The UI's third annual Mediall Feast will be Dec. 5 at 6 p.m. in the Moscow Social Club, above UI's at 122 N. Main Street. Tickets are $25 for public, $15 for UI students and children under 12, available at the UI Main Desk and all G&B Select-A-Seat outlets.

The UI Campus Recreation will sponsor the annual Pea field sale Dec. 6. This indoor climbing competition is for beginner, intermediate and advanced climbers. The entry fee is $6 without a T-shirt and $16 with a T-shirt. Entry forms are available at the UI climbing wall or the Campus Recreation office, 204 Memorial Gym. Eye on the ASUI Senate

From Nov. 19, 1997 meeting, held at Hays Hall

Open Forum
Andrew White, Media Board Chair
— Submitted a survey of safety improvements students want — Student Media Board is evaluating budget proposal
Kevin Jones, Academic Board Chair
— Members will be attending Faculty Council
— Meets Dec. 3, 6 p.m. in the
Appaloosa Room
Katie Hill, member of Hays Hall — Proposed to Senate an ASUI Pet of the Month. “We have a really cool frog.”
The frog’s name is Freddy.
Presidential Communications
Jim Dalton, ASUI President
— Asked Senate to inform themselves on bills in committee concerning the financial separation of the Graduate Student Association from the ASUI — Noted students have no official voice at student for hearings. The new Student Fee Committee will evaluate fees. He added the formal committee will make it difficult for administration to raise fees without an explanation.
— Gave Aldrich a candy cane for researching and writing a resolution for Faculty Council to make UI an honor code university. This will give students the power to punish cheaters.
— Going to state Board of Education meeting in Boise. Issues to be discussed include tuition waivers for women athletes and WICHE/WUE programs.
— Thanked Student Issues Board and Cue Wall for working hard on elections.
— Has 300 signatures on his districting petition, expects to have 1,000 by January.
Then it will be up to the new president or the Senate could call for a referendum by a two-thirds vote.
Old Business
The Senate voted to go into committee to consider Dalton’s appointment as student lobbyist.
Massi Johnson asked what issues he’d face next semester in Boise.
Dalton explained several issues including mandatory student health insurance and out-of-state tuition. He said the issues he brings up will depend on the president and Senate.
After a few other questions the Senate voted unanimously to appoint Dalton to the position.
Voted Bill
Dalton vetoed a bill making the ad manager and another student a voting member of the Student Media Board. It conflicted with another bill to create space for graduate students on the board. DeCelle withdrew the bill for rewriting.
Communications
Almost all the senators thanked a dozen Hays hall members and their friends for attending the meeting. It was the biggest turnout at a Senate meeting this year. No one showed up for a meeting held at Delta Delta Delta. One came to the meeting at Alpha Tau Omega.
Shelk
— The quarter drive earned $633 for the Bill Chipman Trail Saturday
— A 1972 alum senator stopped by the Senate office. The alum had worked under then ASUI president Dirk Kemphorne — Congratulated Mirah Laker, new Farmhouse president — Reminded Senate committees and board advisors were there to advise, not create policy
Aldrich
— Working on resolution for an honor code university
— Activities Board rejected his request for money to buy banners to hang downtowns
— Everyone is welcome to join his Campus Community Involvement Club
Adams:
— The one percent initiative is crippling UI. Concerned about financial state of colleges, which fear losing accreditation due to money crunches.
— Gave power point presentation to Media Board
— Convenes committee
Thatcher:
— Some summer school classes are being dropped because not enough students enroll to cover the cost. When not enough students enroll the department should help pay for the class but don’t have the money to do so.
DeCelle:
— Wrote a resolution for a Veterans Day service at the UI — Concern about School of Communications class availability. Several classes had long waiting lists by the second day of registration.
Hill:
— Empathized with the problem at the School of Communications.
— Talked again with Charlie Powell about informing the public, getting students to come to meetings and spokesperson training to talk to the media, like the Argonaut.
— Told the Senate we’re going to beat
BSU in the football game.
Onley:
— Said she decided to become a professional fundraiser after raising $633 in four hours for the Bill Chipman Trail; disappointed there weren’t more senators at the fundraiser.
— New senator training Dec. 5
Browning:
— Said one of the reasons Dalton wanted to be the lobbyist is because there weren’t enough qualified applicants; we’re lucky to have him.
— Wished everyone a good
Thanksgiving.
Averitt:
— Wrote a bill that would make an electronic ballot an absentee ballot and allow students to vote over a week. This would hopefully raise voter turnout.
Hofffingler:
— Pleaded with Senate pre-session.
— Wrote a bill that will eliminate senators’ salaries except for those who hold standing committee offices. She said this would hopefully, “encourage people to earn those titles.” She needs a sponsor.
Johnson:
— Pleaded with pre-session because they recognized as a Senate there needs to be a change individually and structurally.
— Explore whether your college has an Advisory Board.
— Reminded senators to get in resolutions honoring the senators leaving.
Averitt:
— Thanked Curt Wall, SIB chair and Ben Rush who ran against her for president.
— Submitting a proposal to the administration for laptop computers.
— Working on getting a cultural diversity core class taught from a historical perspective.
Before convening the Senate unanimously voted Fredly the Frog the official ASUI Pet of the Month.

The Women's Center asks...

What do you know about Roofties?

CANDICE LONG
STAFF

Valerie Russo, women's resource specialist for Sexual Assault Prevention and Education Services, is targeting University of Idaho marijuana and Residence Halls in order to educate and make students aware of the popular date rape drugs.

Drugs such as gamma hydroxybutyric acid (GHB) and Rohypnol, often called "roofies," can be slipped into drinks in order to create an intoxicating effect. The victim is usually knocked out and can come in and out of consciousness, making it easier for a person to commit sexual assault on the unwitting and unconscious victim.

Russo said that these drugs are ingested, effects such as dizziness, confusion, temporary paralysis, blackout and amnesia begin to take place. It takes only a few minutes to take effect, and may last up to 10 hours.

"To my knowledge, no one has been arrested and these specific drugs haven't been confiscated on this campus," Russo said. "But I think we, as a country, have a big problem and if it's somewhere, it's eventually going to make its way here if it hasn't already."

GHB is a chemical that has been promoted as a steroid alternative for body building and has recently gained favor as a recreational drug. It has never been approved for safe as a medical product in the United States and is illegal for the average person to produce or sell. GHB comes in a powder form, but can be made into a liquid and reported symptoms have included vomiting, tremors and seizures.

Rohypnol, a sedative 10 times stronger than valium and used as a sleeping aid in other countries, is also illegal in the United States. It is similar in size, shape and color to aspirin and dissolves easily in juice and coffee as well as in carbonated and alcoholic beverages. It is odorless, colorless and tasteless when dissolved. Although these drugs can be enhanced when mixed with alcohol, Russo believes "the No. 1 date rape drug is alcohol."

"Almost all the cases I've been involved in were alcohol related," Russo said. "Incidents that involve these drugs can be prevented if we just watch out for our friends and watch out for our drinks. The very scary thing about rohypnol is its paralyzing amnesia effect. A victim wakes up off and on but doesn't have the ability to move any limbs or do anything about it."

If these drugs are used in a sexual assault crime, a victim will be very ill for a couple of days and it's much worse than a hangover, Russo said. Victims are urged to contact law enforcement or counselors and get a physical. They should not wash themselves or their clothes or anything that can be collected in the rape exam and can request to be tested for rohypnol or GHB.

"It basically all comes down to the fact that we all need to rethink on what alarms us when we're looking out for our friends," Russo said.

For more information on rohypnol and GHB, contact the Women's Center at 885-6616.

Simple things you can do to protect yourself:

- Do not accept open drinks at parties, particularly from strangers.
- If you're drinking from a bottle, open it yourself or watch the bartender pour it.
- Do not let someone talk you into a new drink. Goldschlagcr and Long island iced tea are often used to mask the taste of GHB.
- Never leave your drink unattended.
- Watch your friends' drinks if they are not alert.
- Leave your drink with someone you trust or take it with you when you are using the restroom.

"Eventually we're going to need to look into it, especially if we want to keep the percentage of residents on campus. We've got some time to grow into that," he said.

Schorken also assured that the sewer systems and the university was able to handle more housing units. He explained that what happened to Borah Hall residents had nothing to do with an overuse of the system.

"That's a whole other story," he said. "Under normal circumstances, the sewer system could handle more housing units."

He added that in addition to the Student Recreation Center and the University Commons, more additions would need to be made.

"As we move ahead with the Student Rec Center and Commons to meet the needs of its future, we don't want to build a Student Rec Center that meets the students' needs today; they need to meet the needs of future students — that goes for everything on campus."

Godwin said that classroom capacity and teacher-student ratio should be able to continue to easily accommodate the university for the next five to seven years.

Phillip Waite, assistant director of capital planning, said if enrollment were to increase to 14,000 students, more parking lots would have to be made available. He said there are already plans for the development of additional parking on Sweet Avenue.

"If we really did go to that many students in that time frame, we might consider the possibility of developing a parking lot and the university could easily accommodate that," Waite said.

Administrators would also look at options for shuttle buses, mass transit and other things that could be done more cost effectively.

Waite explained there are still enough parking spaces available.

"I've worked here for 11 years and have had Blue, Red, and Gold permits. I drive in every day and there are a lot of parking spaces around," he said.

Laurie Metfas wants her customers to leave her feeling like a relaxed cloud. Be it between classes or between stress periods, Metfas is helping people who eventually want to take a break for relief.

Metfas, a certified massage therapist and owner of Massage For Health, is urging students, faculty and staff to come and get a non-painful back, neck and shoulder massage as well as to try out the "thumper" on the first floor of the Student Union Building.

"I've heard people say they massaged hurt like mad when they were getting it, but they felt great afterwards," said Metfas. "My massages have enough pressure to feel, but not enough pressure for pain."

Metfas said massages help to relax tension, improve circulation, promote healing, and renew energy for the demands on personal and business life.

"My job is to help people relax their mind and their body," Metfas said. "You can't relax and tighten at the same time and if I do something to tighten their muscles, they're not relaxing and it's quite a challenge for me. The individual has to focus on mind, body and the final outcome, while I have to focus on therapy, touch and results."

Relaxing means letting go of the muscles and the only equivalence to a massage is when a person is sleeping, allowing the body to relax and restore. There are some people that cannot relax because they feel uneasy, Metfas said.

"I want them to have a scene of familiarity and produce a comfortable feeling."

Although Metfas is only offering chair massages for a $1 a minute in the SUB, appointments for a 10 minute back massage ($10), a 30 minute body massage ($25), and a 60 minute full body massage ($35) can be made by calling the Moscow Fitness Club at 882-7804.

Gift certificates can also be purchased at the Fitness Club, Pilgrims Nutrition Center in the Palouse Mall and the SUB.

Student media: Making dollars and sense

By WES RIVET

OPINION EDITOR

Since our last issue I have received a reply from President Hoover about my e-mail regarding the poor financial standing of Student Media. He didn't have much to say, other than giving the current history (from July 1) of our financial woes.

Hoover also wrote in the e-mail that "Financial responsibility, especially with the Student Media Board, the ASUI Senate and ultimately, the ASUI Board of Directors". This is the same message that I forwarded to my message to ASUI President Jim Dancufl, the Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Dudkin, who ultimately controls the decisions.

Also, since my last column we turned in our proposal to the Student Media Board. It passed at last night's meeting. The total damage: the positions were eliminated, with those remaining suffering salary cuts. In addition, almost $3,000 was cut from Photographic Services and Office Supplies.

Nevertheless, they actually think we are making way too much money. This could not be further from the truth. Take my pay, for example. Currently, I make $125 every two weeks, which is $62.50 a week. That would raise some eyebrows and prompt the question: "Is this earth do I do to deserve that much pay?" Well, first of all I have to write a column at least once a week, if not twice. It takes me three hours to write a decent column. Next I have to edit my columnist's columns. That normally doesn't take too long, but when I am pressed I might take a little longer. I have to read letters to the editor and return them to you. Since some of them are extremely well written and some are very long, this can be quite time consuming. I'd estimate at least an additional hour or two a week. Then I have to make sure that the editors prepare their pages for publication. That takes anywhere from 30 minutes to an hour or two. Multiplying all that times two because we have two issues per week. Also, add in the two hours of meetings I attend weekly.

That works out to 14 hours a week, which is a very conservative estimate. So that would mean I work 28 hours per week and make $64.40 an hour.

My co-workers here at the Argonaut have worked at minimum wage. That makes one thing clear — we are not in it for the money. It also prompts a question — why would anyone cut pay of workers that make less than the minimum wage? Is it fair? Is it even legal?

Of course some people continue to bring their dogs with them to campus if they are going to be in class or the library. It is rude not only to the dog tied to the tree with two feet of leash, which increasingly gets smaller as he walks around the tree, but also to the people that have to listen to them bark during class time or when you are trying to study.

I walk past the library every day and without fail, there are always people sitting in the benches and begging people to play ball with him while he impatiently waits for his inconsistent owner. I think people think it's cute or cool to bring them everywhere they go, but it's not.

I am a huge dog lover and I can't think of anything more selfish. Sure, they love the walk, but once they get there, they seem a bit confused. It is not only around campus but all over town and I just don't get it, especially this time of year when it's neither cold or raining, or both. How thoughtless could one be?

Do you think they enjoy having one foot of space and getting snuggling well? I wouldn't venture to say they don't enjoy it. So why don't you just leave your dog at home where I am sure they are more content than they look to be here on campus?

Plus, there is a law in Moscow that applies to both campus and the city that a dog cannot be tethered (tied up) in a public place and must either be on leashes or just kept in your car. To keep that in mind, when you tie up "Roger" he may not be as happy with you when you get back, as may be the case, when you have to pay to get his back.

Letter to the editor

Leave your dog at home

Could someone please explain why students need to bring their dogs with them to campus if they are going to be in class or the library?

It is rude not only to the dog tied to the tree with two feet of leash, which increasingly gets smaller as he walks around the tree, but also to the people that have to listen to them bark during class time or when you are trying to study.

As I was the only one horse at the time, I turned my stoop up as loud as I can go and yelled out the words to the song that was playing, singing in unison and joy. That’s what I think of as the song “Mom’s Than a Feeling.”

In forming memories, our minds often associate actions, feelings, and happenings with sounds. This is especially true of music. Thus, hearing a certain song can remind us of a certain experience or evoke a certain emotion. Careful studies of this process suggest that music videos may be more detrimental than they might think. Music videos have been nothing people’s memories for years.

For example, an incident which occurred earlier a few years ago, I had helped my science team win the state championship, and we were relishing our victory. The competition had been held in Atlanta, Ala., and the Auburn High School team had vowed to win since the contest would be in their hometown. But we won instead, and did it ever feel good! To celebrate, we went to one of the premium local pizza places.

We entered the restaurant and took some seats. Everyone was quick to grab seats that would let them watch the big-screen TV while they ate. I got stuffed, so I had to turn around in my seat in order to catch a glimpse of the screen. I remember seeing some guy’s hand turning a valve. And that’s all I can remember of that moment. I can remember a good bit of my experience, but in that moment when I needed to look at TV, my mind recorded the image from the screen and nothing else.

These are songs for which I have seen the entire video, like “Even Better Than the Real Thing” by U2. I can remember seeing the video at my grandparent’s house, but I don’t remember how I felt at the time, or what I was thinking about, or anything that I was experiencing in that moment; the things that make life vivid, palpable, and real. The things that my mind normally records had been completely crowded out and replaced entirely by a solitary set of images provided via MTV. Though it was for a moment, I had been cheated of living the experience of life, and I didn’t even know it.

It’s only been within the last couple of years that I have begun to realize what has been happening to me. Most people don’t realize it, but it is happening, silently and largely unnoticed, to everyone who expresses themselves to a constant barrage of music videos and this in true regardions of the visual gene selected.

I don’t watch music videos much anymore. I want to keep my memories of the things that make life worthwhile. I remember the scene that I felt as I heard Creedence Clearwater Revival’s “Queen Mary” while I rode on the riverboat Queen Mary during one of its last trips ever. I want to remember the distant I felt at the sight of the open sewer ditches as I crossed a bridge on the west side of Belize City in Central America while hearing from one of the nearby shacks Bob Marley’s “Satisfy My Soul.”

I want to think of the friends that I drove home with for Thanksgiving last year while we listened to “Show Don’t Tell” by Rush. I want to remember Ivan Wolfe and his refusal to let me borrow a CD when I hear “Rosal" and the Kings of Spain” by Tears For Fears. I want to remember shivering with cold as I walked through an apartment parking lot while the Cranberries’ “Talk to Decide” echoed out a nearby window.

I want to remember these things because these things give substance and meaning to the life that only I have lived. Having these things erased from my mind and replaced by a common flux of images makes me no better than part of some collective in which individuality is more that just lacking.

If this isn’t happening to you, then you see the exception to the rule, because careful scientific studies done of this phenomenon show that music videos can replace your life experiences with images that someone else wants you to have stored in your brain.

We all have the prerogative to do what we want. As for me, I’ll keep my mind free to record the real side of life. That way I can relish the total of my life experiences again and again.

I remember how excited I was that spring day. I had arrived home with my new CD purchase and put the CD into my stereo. I had just purchased Boston’s first album, a classic selection to add to my collection.

Naturally, while the CD played, I took out the jacket and began to read what was inside. Suddenly my eyes grew big and wide; I couldn’t believe what I had just read. Tom Scholz, the mastermind behind Boston, was a mechanical engineer! The music that I had enjoyed for years had been produced by a fellow engineer.

Jerusalem: mosaic of religions

KIKE CALVO

With a population of almost 600,000 people, Jerusalem (Yerushalayim, or "city of peace" in Hebrew) is probably one of the most absorbing and fascinating places a traveler could visit.

Over 3,000 years of history are hidden under its walls, golden buildings and narrow streets. With its ancient lanes, street markets and its modern areas, Jerusalem is an exhilarating mixture of sights, sounds and cultures.

The city that stands 855 meters above sea level offers a variety of options to the visitor. Planning ahead is strongly recommended. Doing some research on history, religion, and geography will be extremely helpful in understanding the city and its essence. The more you know about this special place, the more your soul will crave a return to the land where a colorful population of Muslims, Jews, and Christians tread the same paths that King David, Jesus, and the Crusaders once walked.

Jerusalem consists of two parts — the Old City, within its 400-year-old Turkish walls — and the newer city to the north and west of the walls. The Old City itself is divided into four religious quarters: the Jewish, Christian, Armenian, and Muslim.)

The main attraction to the foreigner rests on the historical city, which covers an area of only one square kilometer (less than one sq. mi.)

Seven city gates, of which only three have retained their Turkish architectural style, lead into the Old City. Remember to bring good walking shoes. Visitors must approach the heavenly celestial street on foot.

A map is a good idea. One covering the entire city will work, but it is better to buy one that clearly shows the city quarters. It will be easy to see a pre-established route through the winding paths, but reaching the places you want to see, photograph them or admire the sacred buildings is, by yourself, part of the city charm. Talking to its people, asking if you can use the right alley or just walking and discovering are worthwhile experiences.

Entering the Old City through the Damascene Gate, the most photogenic of all the gates, and one of the most impressive structures of Islamic architecture in Jerusalem, is the middle of Khan es-Zeit street, movement and color fills your pupils. A strange but delisious smell safety enters your nose. It is time to make decisions, such as which direction to walk.

The old Roman gate is to your right. The Roman Square excavations are located in the gorgeous rooms excavated on the old Roman gatehouse. They exhibit a collection illustrating the development of the area, and it's the visit.

In the immediate vicinity rests the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the principal Christian shrine in the city. It stands above the site where the crucifixion, burial and resurrection of Jesus are believed to have taken place. Every morning, a friendly Palestinian Muslim opens the heavy wooden doors of the church and closes them again at night. If you are seeking tranquility, this is not the place. Today there is a labyrinth of religious houses, with the Catholics, the Armenians, the Greek Orthodox, the Syrian Orthodox, the Copts and the Ethiopians inside its walls. Long pangs are necessary since bare legs aren't allowed in.

Do not miss the walk down the Via Dolorosa, a street wandering through the Muslim quarter and into the Christian quarter. Traditionally, this is believed to be the route Christ followed on his way to Calvary. The Via Dolorosa passes through the confines of the church of the Holy Sepulchre, with various sights of historical interest on the way. Today, the Via Dolorosa is a commercial area, but every Friday afternoon you can see a procession of Franciscan monks following Christ's route of suffering.

The Jaffa Gate, beside the Citadel or David's Towers, opens a new world, taking us directly to the Armenian Quarter. Here you will encounter one of the most impressive churches in the Old City, just following the Armenian Patriarchate street, which begins at the Citadel. A modest doorway will lead you to the Armenian St. James Cathedral. Also, a visit to the Museum of Municipal History is worthwhile.

Once at the Jewish Quarter, roughly defined as the area north of Tahr as-Silhieh Street and east of Habab Street, names of some places will reach our ears a long time before we arrive at it in our minds. Has not heard about the Western Wall? Known as the Wailing Wall, it is the most sacred site for the followers of Jewish faith. It borders the southeast side of the Temple Mount. The best time to experience it is on Friday evening. After sunset, elegantly dressed young men approach in groups to greet the Sabbath in song.

It is also interesting to take a closer look to the wall. Jewish worshippers leave small scraps of paper with writing on them in the wall's gaps. They contain wishes, requests, or thanksgiving directly addressed to the Lord.

There is a permanent exhibition at one of the Cardo galleries. It goes under the title of 'One Last Day', and it is a set of photographs showing the day the Jewish Quarter fell to the Jordanians in 1948.

Followed the way to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and the Armenian Cathedral (Cardo Maximus). By following the streets, you will observe the many places, the building of the surrounding buildings, you will arrive at the Muslim Quarter.

This quarter has a unique feature: the lovely morning bazaar. El Wad street runs along the boundary between the Muslim and the Christian quarters, finally intersected by the previous mentioned streets. Look carefully and you will be able to discover Aladdin's (Abdul)PPP.

On a sunny day, it is a real privilege to stare at the sparkles reflected on the Dome of the Rock, the city's most famous landmark. The octagonal mosque, built in 691 on the Temple Mount, is one of the most sacred mosques of Islam. According to tradition, it was from this mosque that the Prophet Mohammed rode into heaven on his enlightenment.

Extremely close, El Aqsa Mosque stands with its seven aisles which characterize its final form. On this temple stands the Dome of the Chain, similar to the Dome of the Rock, but smaller in size.

Spire stalls, ceramic art crafts, and holyparfumes will make you visit a song to the scenes, and a prayer to the soul.

After walking through all the pasages of the city you to offer, you might reach a place where you can get a global view of all the multiple locations inside the walls. Probably the most impressive view of Jerusalem is that from the edge leading from Hebron Road to the British Government House (today the UN Headquarter) and to the new suburb of East Tel-Aviv. Another good observation point is Mount Scopus, it looks toward the Temple Mount and the Old City, as well as the 2000-year-old forests of Jericho.

Of course, the Mount of Olives is a must. There you can enjoy an spectacular view of the Temple Mount, Kidron Valley, and beyond.

Midnight makes good on novel

Eastwood directs, Cusack stars in film version of Berendt’s best seller

HEATHER FRYE

Novel lovers rejoice!

Today marks the national release date for Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil, the movie version of John Berendt’s best selling novel of the same name. Midnight is the tale of a New York reporter who goes to Savannah, Ga., and falls under the spell of the magical and mysterious city. The reporter inadvertently meets up with a slew of odd and unusual Savannahites and gets involved in a politically charged murder trial.

The movie does justice to the novel by the quality of the cast and production crew alone. John Lee Hancock, who wrote A Perfect World, adapted the novel for the silver screen. Berendt did not wish to undertake this task himself, as he feared the result would be excessively long. A number of changes have been made in the story to make it suitable for film but Hancock did try to remain as true as possible to the original tale.

Hancock asked Clint Eastwood to look the screenplay over as a favor. Eastwood enjoyed it so much he decided to direct the project himself. Though Eastwood has an extensive directorial repertoire, Midnight will make only the third film he has not starred in as well as directed. Instead, he has brought together a fine international cast to portray Berendt’s novel.

John Cusack (Grosse Point Blank, The Grifters) has been slated to play the author/narrator of the story, John Kelso. The snobbish antiquary and murderer Jim Williams will be portrayed by Kevin Spacey. In 1995, Spacey earned an Academy Award for best supporting actor for his work in The Usual Suspects and has since starred in A Time to Kill and Seven.

Eastwood has cast his daughter Alison as Kelso’s femme fatale love interest Mandy Nichols. The father and daughter team worked together on Tightrope in 1984 and more recently on Absolute Power. The scheming schemer Jon Odson will be portrayed by Paul Hipp who recently appeared in Face/Off with John Travolta and Nicholas Cage.

Eastwood has cast a number of actors from abroad such as the young English thespian Jude Law and Australian actor Jack Thompson, Law, who plays William’s magash rival Danny Hanson, is a long time veteran of the stage and has won critical acclaim for his role opposite Kathleen Turner in the controversial Broadway play Indecentions. Thompson, an Australian film icon, will play Sunny Seiler, William’s football loving lawyer and proprietor of the University of Georgia’s mascot, UGA IV.

To the delight of all, The Lady Chablis, the vampy Savannah transvestite drag queen, will play herself in the movie. Eastwood met her on the set of Absolute Power and decided that she was best for the part. Since the novel’s release in 1994, The Lady Chablis has enjoyed ever broadening fame. She has been selected Miss Gay World and has even pened an autobiography entitled Hiding My Caucy.

As of the date this article was written, no theaters in the Savannah/LaSalle/Lawton area had plans to show Midnight by its release date. However, those traveling to larger cities for the Fall break may be able catch this fine flick.

Late gloves, bottles and intense colors are some of the sights at the current exhibit at the Student Union Art Gallery featuring the works of winners of the undergraduate and graduate student juried exhibit.

Kory Routree, a second year MFA and Deva Eveland, an undergraduate art student in the art program, took home the awards at the exhibit last year. Although both artists work with different mediums, styles and subject, both of their works reflect abstract visions that grab and hold our emotional and visual attention.

Routree's visual narrative, entitled “Escape Attempt,” is one such piece. The scene depicts pencil markings scribbled on the wall of the museum as if someone were Jinny jars filled with water and rusting metal tools and the shape of three dimensional human figures curled up on the floor and covered by latex gloves. The human figure is disturbingly realistic and there is something disturbing about the tools and gloves resembling surgical equipment. The work looks like a bizarre serial murder.

Many of Routree's pieces in this exhibit are connected with re-securing objects like latex gloves and the various rusty bottles filled with scribbled messages. In four different pieces messages are seeked from the bottles in plastic tubing, drawn through a wall or down a drain in a laboratorio style sink.

Routree creates an intriguing puzzle with all the pieces. This puzzleing story is furthered by "The Conspiracy,” a work that documents the crimes of a supposed pervert. A large briefcase filled with files, photographs and a phony newspaper article and hard hitting Vienna Gallery featuring the works of winners of the undergraduates and graduate student juried exhibit.

Eveland's pieces reflect a strong sense of style, color, and texture and are powerful because of the visual and emotional affects they have on the viewer. They are best appreciated if the viewer can keep from searching for meaning and simply be moved by them on a sensual level.

The Eveland and Routree exhibit is being held in the Student Union Art Gallery and runs from Nov. 17 to Dec. 7.

UI falls to LCSC in opener

Things looked a little rough around the edges and a bit unpolished in the final non-exhibition game for the University of Idaho's women's basketball team Tuesday night.

Coming off a close victory over Simon Fraser, a team they had yet to beat until last Thursday's game, snapped the seven-game losing drought, the Vandals went on to head to Lewiston with a 2-0 record.

Things didn't quite go as the Vandals had hoped as a last-ditch effort off a free throw failed to lift Idaho over LCSC, 71-70.

"They wanted this game for 40 minutes. We wanted it for five."

Julie Holt, Idaho Head Coach

"We should have won that game," said sophomore Ali Nieman. "We should have won that game with no problem."

Amanda Campbell got the game going for LCSC. The shortest player for the Warriors at 5' 5", she came up with the board off a long two-pointer and put the Vandals back. The Vandals inside game was slow to get rolling with several attempts that wouldn't fall.

Enter Kelli Johnson and some absolutely beautiful three-pointers — two back-to-back to be exact — which sparked the UI offense. Johnson went 2-3 from the arc on the night.

Both teams were aggressive on defense, with the Vandals sporting a 2-3 zone but the physical attack saw both teams in foul trouble from the beginning. With seven minutes left in the half, the Vandals were already shooting 39 percent from the floor. Fortunately for Idaho, fouling was kept to a minimum and LCSC was noticeably absent from the charity stripe, shooting only three in the first half of play.

"They were very physical," said Nieman. "They were a lot smaller than we were so I think they wanted to make up for it."

The Vandals stayed right with the Warriors with a 36-32 lead at the half. Slowly, LCSC began to pull away, thanks in part to Campbell, who forcing the LCSC sloppy to commit and turn it over."

Lakers cruise to undefeated record

BARRY GRAHAM STAFF

The Los Angeles Lakers appear to be the real deal in the NBA this season. With an impressive 9-0 record (the time of this story), the Lakers have already surpassed the unbelievable start of the 1986-87 Los Angeles team that won the NBA title.

Forget about the number of talented but young players that entered the Western Conference Semifinals to the Utah Jazz. Those players have become the leaders of this season’s team.

Remember Kobe Bryant airballing three consecutive jumpers in game five of the Jazz series enabling Utah to nail down a spot in the conference finals? That’s a faded memory compared to the new and improved 1997-98 Bryant, who has grown in leaps and bounds. How about Shaquille O’Neal? Well, the Lakers have already proved that they can win without the big man in the middle. They did last season and won this season’s first two contests without the basketball player/movie star/rapper.

Are there still trade rumors in the foggy air of Los Angeles? Trade rumors involving a one-for-one deal sending Lamar Odom to Sacramento for all-star point guard Mitch Richmond. Well, let’s dispel those polluting rumors. Jones has done everything humanity possible to keep himself in the Lakers’ starting lineup and has stated that he really does not want to leave Los Angeles. One thing he might want is a starting position in the underscoring Kings.

Now, who will you trade Jones? The player from Temple University is one of the best transition players in the league and for the rest of the Los Angeles lineup, only gets better with playing time.

What about the apparent weakness that occurred last season involving guard Nick Van Exel and center Del Harris? Well, the two seem to have reconciled and the result has been nothing short of perfect harmony. Exel is shooting the lights out and Harris can do what he does best, coach, without any sideshows blocking the way.

All in all, it has been a total team effort from O’Neal at the top to key additions like Rick Fox pulling down rebounds, playing good defense and laying a solid foundation for the rest of the team.

The Lakers earned probably their most impressive victory of the season when they, on Tuesday, traveled to Salt Lake City and handed the Jazz their first home loss of the season. The Jazz were almost unbeatable at home last season and Los Angeles’ win adds credibility to their quick start. Along with that win, the Lakers have road wins at Houston and San Antonio.

If Los Angeles can continue to force turnovers and spread the ball around on offense, they will be in position to defeat the Bulls later in the spring.

What will they think of next?

Are the Seattle Mariners really serious? I mean, do they actually think that they will be competitive without Randy Johnson taking the hill next season? The Mariners, in an apparent attempt to bring in quantity over quality to the organization, are in a position to pack Johnson’s luggage and send him out of Seattle. In doing this, the Mariners would also be sending their hopes of a championship out of Seattle as well.

Yet, the Mariners need help. And Johnson has a big contract. But he is arguably the best pitcher in the American League and will consistently win 20 games every season.

The Mariners need help in their bullpen and would like to add some more speed to the lineup. Trading Johnson for a few prospects, a mediocre player or two or a decent starting pitcher is not the right answer.

The most recent rumor involved Johnson moving to New York for ace reliever Mariano Rivera, who saved 43 games last season. Mariner management questioned Rivera’s shoulder and if true was a no go.

Now, it has become apparent that the Mets are seriously interested and have tossed Bobby Jones’ name around along with an outfielder or two. That should be a no deal as well simply because Jones is an adequate starter and nothing more.

Look, the Mariners management already made a huge blunder by trading away Jose Cruz, Jr. Don’t make it even worse by sending the second best player on your team to another organization for a few more average competitions.

managed to sneak around the Idaho posts and snap uncontested rebounds. Missed shots and steals took the advantage away from the Vandals and with 1:14 left on the clock, they called for time down to LCSC 26:32.

Guzetti forced the ball inside and dished it off to Woolf to add two more points before halftime, pulling U of W four at 26-32.

Idaho finished the half shooting 38.7 percent from the field, 33 percent from 3-point land, yet put up fewer shots than LCSC. The Warriors struggled from the three-point line, shooting only 3-13 for 23 percent.

Lewis-Clark’s Rosie Albert was quick to change the outside game for the Warriors and came out of the locker room with two quick treys and Jordan Bannister chipped in another to extend their slim lead at the half to a 30-21 domination.

A slower paced and much less organized offense by Idaho looked as if it could extinguish any hopes of pulling off a victory, but Guzetti and Jennifer Stone slowly chipped away inside the paint while the foul-happy Warriors got deeper and deeper into trouble. By 11:41, the Vandals were already shooting the game’s lone bonus with LCSC’s Brooke Cushman already on the bench with five fouls.

The Warriors picked up the pressure with a back court press as UI closed the gap within one at 47-46 off a put-back by Alli Nieman. Idaho had opportunities to tie the game at the line, but UI had fouling problems of their own and the Warriors were incredibly consistent in the final minutes from the line and pulled into a decisive 63-71 with 36.6 seconds remaining.

Nieman missed three point shots and had the Vandals within three, but it was Susan Woolf that gave Idaho the shot of a come-from-behind win. Woolf took the ball down the middle, the foul and got the shot to fall with only 2.8 seconds on the clock and Idaho only down by two.

After an LCSC time-out, Woolf went to the foul line to shoot her one shot and strategically hit the rim, giving Idaho a shot at the rebound and a shot to tie the game. But Idaho couldn’t control the ball and despite a one-minute attempt to force a jump ball, Idaho failed to retain possession, failing to Lewis-Clark 71-73.

The Vandals will be back in action tonight against the Oregon Ducks of the Pac 10 Conference at 8 p.m. in Memorial Gym following the men’s game.
Ul men's basketball improves in loss to NBC

TODD MORDAURST

The Idaho men's basketball team looked strong out of the gate Monday, but eventually stumbled to its second exhibition loss in NBC-5. The Vandals were much improved from their first outing and took on Montana Tech to open the season tonight in Memorial Gym.

The Vandals were sharp early in the first half led by junior point guard Avery Curry. The Florida State transfer slammed to the bucket for lay-ins, led the fast break and ran the offense smoothly. Idaho built a 33-12 lead in the first quarter and eventually built a 33-15 advantage with 6:37 left in the first half.

Curry said the Vandals wanted to make a statement in the beginning. "We came out and wanted to play well because we didn't play last game. We wanted to come out and execute some things and try some new things we worked on in practice.'"

Late in the first half the Vandals offense ran into a road block, while NBC-5 caught fire. Within five minutes, the Thunder made an 18-3 run, making it 33-36. The Vandals held off the charge and went into halftime with a 40-33 lead.

NBC-5 continued its surge to start the second half, making an 8-0 run and grabbing the lead. Idaho battled the entire second half, but were unable to overcome the Thunder's deadly outside shooting and suffocating defense.

NIC'S Tyrenc McDaniels was a constant threat for Idaho's side. The 6-2 point guard scored a game-high 35 points and played divorcing pressure defense the entire second half. Curry lasted with McDaniels and ended up with 20 points on the night.

The Vandals cut the Thunder's lead to one at the 7:20 mark, but couldn't take the lead as NBC held on for the 74-64 victory.

Throughout the second half Idaho struggled to find an offensive rhythm and the Thunder defense focused on shutting down Curry. "Our offense is designed for me to push the ball a little bit and in the second half we were getting back (on defense) better, so we didn't know which offense to run," Curry explained.

The Vandals' low post offense was hindered by the fact that Clifford Gray saw limited playing time. Gray has a leg injury and will be used sparingly until the condition improves.

Idaho did the majority of its damage from the outside with Kirk Baumann hitting on three three-pointers and Joe Harris adding two and more of a total of 10 points. Although Curry led the team in scoring, he said the team probably won't rely on him to carry the load every game.

"I think last night was a game where I probably had to score some points. However the game comes, that is how 1 am going to take it. Some nights it is not going to be meant for me to score 20 points, I'll have to pass it inside and set some things up." The Vandals will look to be more consistent and play forty minutes of good basketball in the season opener Friday.

"We've got to get better at running this team. A lot of the things we do on offense go through me and I have to be the coach on the floor," Curry said of his leadership role.

Tonight's game against Montana Tech will provide the Vandals with more opportunities to familiarize themselves with the offense in a regular season atmosphere. Tip off is at 6:05 p.m. and the game will be followed by the women's game at 8:05 p.m.

Vandal Volleyball
Idaho kicks off post-season play tonight in Long Beach, Calif. as the Vandals face Cal Poly SLO. Idaho leads the series 3-2 with the Mustangs, who finished the season 17-10 overall, 9-7 in the Big West. Boise State captured both the Eastern Division championship with a 20-11, 10-6 record while Long Beach nabbed the Western Division at 21-5, 16-6.

Basketball double-header
Both the men's and women's basketball teams are in action tonight in Memorial Gym. The men take on Montana Tech starting at 6 p.m. followed by the women's match-up against the Oregon Ducks at 8 p.m.
