Argonaut exclusive: Enraged father takes on UI Greek System

A new newspaper at the University of Idaho - the student-run The Argonaut - is taking on the University's Greek System, which it claims is exploitative and unfair to students. The newspaper's editor, Molly McDaniel, a junior at the university, said that the Greek System has beenardo by the University of Idaho Argonaut Staff

"It was the worst experience I've ever been through," said George Brackett, who was a student at the University of Idaho when the Greek System was introduced.

And Brackett's father, Ken Brackett, is not going to let his daughter go through the same experience as he did. He is spearheading a movement to reform the Greek System at the University of Idaho.

"The problem with the Greek System is that it is exploitative and unfair to students," he said. "We need to make some changes in order to ensure that students are not being taken advantage of."

Mauk visits Moscow
By Benjamin Miller

On Thursday, Bill Mauk, United States Senate candidate, responded to an invitation by the Associated Students of the University of Idaho

Mauk gave a speech concerning issues of his campaign in the Student Lounge of the SUU.

Mauk is running around Idaho in a blue bus speaking with Idaho residents to inform them of his political views. Mauk was once a UI law professor although he has never attended any classes at the university. He also has volunteered as the chairman of Idaho’s Department of Motor Vehicles for several years and owns his own small business.

Mauk addressed funding environmental issues involving Idaho. He believes that development of Idaho dams would meet the nation and national populations that have been diminishing recently. Homestead involves opening the dams and allowing water in from April 15 and June 15 in each year. Granted, shoring of wheat and wool producers would be affected, but Mauk believes any negative effects on the market of irrigated commodities would be only temporary. Mauk introduced his presentation by expressing that he held an alternate view on politics. "I am proud to say that I am not a career politician," Mauk said.

Mauk would like to instigate a larger focus on Idaho’s school system in government. He expressed his concerns about public school facilities throughout the state. Legislation has caused understandings of education in Idaho’s school system made by Mauk. He believes that public officials should put more emphasis on issues of this type.

"It is the proper role of government to aid those who need to reach their highest potential," Mauk stated about funding for student loans. Mauk also is in favor of local control of public schools to help solve the complex problems of 窶麓ke and drugs in schools.

"There is a role for the government in agriculture," Mauk continued. "Food should not be used as a tool of diplomacy." He is in firm his belief that trade sanctions damage the agriculture industry. It has also shared the philosophical debate that universal ideas of lifting such trade sanctions and known that the lifting of sanctions is not going to solve agriculture’s problems immediately. A decade in Asian demand for commodities has suppressed local markets. Commodities from foreign sources are sharing domestic shares due to trade legislation, in Mauk’s opinion. He fears that creating a desire to solve those problems one third of the agriculture jobs in Idaho will be in weeds, wheat, potatoes, and cattle are among some of the agricultural goods doing poorly in world markets that were mentioned.

Mauk has a strong opinion on issues related with campaign finance reform. He believes, "money has become a corrupting influence on political campaigns."

Arg exchange: Greetings from Finland

By Wade Crick (International Correspondent)

Hello everybody! That Finnish weather [sigh] But I'm not looking much more Finnish than that now. [snort] But we'll begin Saturday, and we'll pick up Saturday, Sunday, and Monday where we left off. Finland is the northernmost country in the world. It borders Norway to the west, Sweden to the north, and the Gulf of Finland to the south. Finland is known for its beautiful lakes, forests, and mountains, as well as its rich history and culture. The Finnish language is unique and differs from other Scandinavian languages. It is a fascinating country to explore, and I can't wait to share more about it with you all in the future.

Guest Commentary: What about Bob?

By Jason and the Argonauts

Who is responsible for the campus computers in the library? According to you, the student workers, but also the computer lab staff. The students are responsible for the computers and the staff is responsible for maintaining the lab environment.

And speaking of staff, the library staff is not just responsible for maintaining the library, they also work on research projects and collaborate with other university departments. We are working on a project to develop an interactive map of the library to help students navigate, and we are also exploring the potential of using sensors to monitor student behavior in the library.

But let's get back to the weather. It's going to be amazing! We can expect a high of 60 degrees Fahrenheit on Thursday, but it will drop to 40 degrees Fahrenheit on Friday. The sky will be mostly cloudy, so bring your umbrella. The next week will be even more pleasant, with temperatures reaching the mid-70s. So get ready for some beautiful weather and enjoy the outdoors!

Wishing you all a great day.

President's Corner

For some of you, sitting into the new year may be a little bit scary because you are living with students who you have seen more than once. The University of Idaho’s new dorm halls, such as the President's Corner, are becoming a common decision-making forum. The new dorm halls are designed to accommodate the needs of students and provide a safe and secure environment for their personal and academic success.

One thing that I have noticed is that students who live in these dorms tend to have a stronger sense of community and belonging. They are more likely to participate in activities and events, and this can lead to improved academic performance and overall well-being. So if you are new to campus or just want to get involved, I encourage you to reach out and connect with others. We are here to support you and help you achieve your goals.

So let's get started! Let me know if there's anything you need help with, and I look forward to seeing you around campus.
The plague of Americanism

By Ken Miller

The American mentality is something one only sees when one has been removed from it for a while. When one is consulting with someone who has never been apart of the American culture for a short while. Because of my lack of exposure to the former category, I have to rely on my relatively few experiences of the latter for my opinion. This begins to work if this admission is at all genuine, or more likely, out of the fear that the rest of the world will kill him. That idea, that one day, if he remains on the world stage for a little longer, he will go wild.

The American mentality is everywhere. Americans are well-known for their braveness, audacity, chutzpa, or what you will. The American spirit radiates across the battle-stained battlefields of the European countries. Many of them wish to be like the free, unshaken and immediately available to us. However, the world's a little more productive and worthwhile than some more passive societies. We could influence the people of other countries? Instead of spreading moral-impartial and interdependence, why not compassion? Why not evolve other cultures? For centuries, it was American Fraternity membership could change future of greeks across US.

BOSTON (AP) -- The decision to drop an MF fraternity and remove the chapter in the 1997 Boston University's Student Affairs Committee on March 17, 1997, an action that could have had a wide-reaching effect on college greek life, is based on a change of heart, according to a story by the Harvard Student Digest. The 1997 pay, place, and work, and the 1980 decision to remove the chapter, could be to cover their share, said the drop.

"It is a vast and vapid kind of thing," said Hunter, whose group has an ongoing subpoena against fraternity and MF members. "MF members have been served a subpoena to cover their share, said the drop.

The Washington Post, a group of mostly black students, said it is difficult to gauge the full extent of greek life's recent changes. But while that abodes to a good number of fraternities and sororities.

Tosi takes to football field

By Todd Mannehone

Last weekend a different Tosi buttressed the Vandals' defense, enabling Idaho to reassert itself in Pacific-10 play. nickel back Tosi manned basketball award winner in recent years.

Newsmakers

Tosi has already made an impact on the basketball court this fall, after his record-breaking Vandal basketball team returned for the season.

In the Muscle milk Division, you might think Tosi would be a natural at basketball. He is. Last spring, as a junior in high school, he was recruited by nearly every major Division I football program in the nation.

After learning he would have to choose one college, Tosi decided to pursue basketball. He was no slouch on the court, either, having been one of the best players in the region. Tosi was selected to the All-Pac-10 team in his senior year of high school.

Tosi continued his basketball success in college, earning All-Conference honors in the Western Athletic Conference.

Idaho optimistic about LSU match-up

At the Tuesday practice, bodies of the players were heavy and faces of the coaches were serious. Idaho football fans were left to ponder what the Volunteers were thinking going into the LSU game.

"It's early in the season and we're always thinking about LSU," said Idaho football coach Walt Franklin. "But we're also thinking about what we need to do to win the conference and go to a bowl game."

Tosi visited with football coaches on the team before practice and said he had a lot to learn. He's a natural athlete, but he's also a natural learner and eager to learn from the best.

"He's a very intelligent kid and he's been around some of the best football minds in the country," said Franklin. "He's just started doing some things that he's never done before in his career."

Tosi's family is supportive of his decision and his growth as a football player.

"My family is very supportive of what he's doing," said Tosi's father. "They know it's what he wants to do and they're behind him 100 percent."

Swing Nights a smashing success

By Ben Morrow
University of Idaho Argus

On the night of Sept. 11, something new and different came to Moscow in the form of a giant between party.

With four main, plenty of dancing, wine, plenty of free tickets and a stylish set of hosts, Swing Nights made its debut appearance at the UVM Hallows, in full swing with the event featuring live music from Not So Shady and even a dance contest.

There were hundreds of people in attendance, which was the biggest audience all involved, and pretty much everyone had fun of fun.

Swing Nights started at 6 p.m. on that Friday night, but any who were interested came in a half hour early and lined up next to stick moves in front of the women at the open bar. (However, Attila, a member of Not So Shady, emphasized that it’s really necessary to have “cool technique” in order to look good and have fun in a swing event. Naturally, the music just goes for people to get out on the dance floor and move, as only as that would matter. Compliments were on an on on the other side of the music. On that night, in turn, was a member of the older music like Glenn Miller with a slower tempo and was usually considered more of a ballroom dance kind of swing. This causes people who hear it through their headphones to think that they need to know a bunch of complicated, fancy, almost-was-and-was-a-football moves. This is not really necessary, unless one likes to be antidepressed. As stated before, all these moves are really meant as a bunch of goofs to get out there and move around a bit. The fun for all the varied dancing that went about that night’s swing night was a rather novel bond to town.

Not So Shady: Spooner Martin, who is a member of the band, though it was “all fun” to play in front of so many people and basically had loads of fun. Spooner described the mood that they played as “jazzy, kind of a late 40’s to early 50’s style” that the band played up to a not very swingy speed, usually the same jumps associated with hot swing music today.

Compliments thought that the music was more fun, and they said, “when swing was big.” Basically the band was trying to bring to a lot of material that kids would know, even if it was maybe because their grandparents had those records. A sample of the really recognizable tunes included “Swing, Swing, Swing” and “I Left My Heart.” For those who do not recognize these standards, go visit Grandma and Grandpa and kill them with you how you jump, jump, under Salt Lake Martin and Spooner Martin said that not a lot of fun, and they would definitely do it again. If you’re那 is in fact, the band plans to try out another swing event in the near future, where they play to add in a bunch of new tunes each time. When they finally make it, they might even have new outfits. According to the first and the second set combination tried to “get in” the band with some kind of disk, and not only the one-off set that was then popular in the then coveted 50’s. For the people that want to be in the records, I hope you can make up and start a group.

The next Swing Night will be on Friday, October 1st, at 6 p.m. It will follow in Swing Nights tradition and please the ears of the UVM Hallows, which for some reason has been dubbed, “Moscow Phat.” Although it would be rather strange to use any phrase physically cut at the dance, it should be fun anyway. For more information on upcoming events, please call 882-2277. The featured record this time will be by New Jersey and The Free five and they will also be the Human Dave Show. Is there one that will not be the record, any more. Learning all the in mind, any questions, left but that still don’t consult with this check out their great total event should have Swing Nights for $2 per student, $1 for student couples or non-students, or $5 for non-student couples.
