Bacharach finds career, not dates

By Gaye Stephens
Sports Editor

The typical writer at the University of Idaho would usually write a piece of journalistic content in their prose about their ability to inform the student. But Bacharach, the architecture major, wasn’t looking for a campus-wide niche when he jumped aboard in 1969.

In truth, he was looking for a job.

"I actually joined the Argonaut to keep myself from trying to kill a woman on the staff," said Bacharach. "I had never been the types editor at the time.

But while the relationship between the staff members and the object of his affection never developed, the Argonaut staff was far from bored. In fact, after rejoicing the sports writer a month later, Bacharach became a同事or for the next 10 years.

Upon entering the world of the Argonaut, Bacharach had his eyes opened to the world of sports writing. But soon discovered that this was not what he loved.

"I began to realize that everything I thought was great deal of visions was not the case. I ended up going to have a hard time of it," said Bacharach.

Sports was the most natural thing for Bacharach. A confessed "gym jock" he started to work for the team sports editor and immediately became the "class icon," the editor said of the paper in the spring of 1969.

Bacharach, originally from Idaho Falls, worked with what was small staff and held the job of editor in chief for no more than 10 to 12 months.

Not only was the Argonaut staff much smaller and located in the basement next to the bowling alley, the university and the athletic department were much smaller.

"The only team in the late 1960s that wanted athletes were the cowboys," said Bacharach.

So when the Vandals were playing a home game in the spring of 1969, where a team could catch up against, he was there.

While watching many of the late games, I often thought to myself, "If I was playing on the team, I could approach any alliance from the running back to the football team to the pool on the baseball squad.

They were students and they were basically from the same group," Bacharach said.

But many students whose roots were in the Idaho community, said Bacharach.

At 1969-73 John Pool led the Vandals to action in both football and basketball. And was eventually transferred to Boise State, was there where he was a military officer with the U.S. Air Force.

When he returned, his name was still in the air.

Before coming to the Vandals, Pool had been a consultant for the Idaho State University's basketball program. And while high school and college team with BCU.

"I was a different kind of a coach," said Pool.

Jean Morrow Cerut can remember "dying her little kitten black—at a very, very young age. It was her first experience with a needle.

Tufts Medical Center—located 15 miles from your door—said, "It was an act." Cerut said, and she could have been arguing with anyone. "I have everything done on paper—

Get the staff an enormous impact on everyone. In Cerut's day, the Arg was a full-" for one day from today's high school companies. "It was an act," Cerut said, and the student didn't post gossip. "I have everything done on paper—or the pages were made up as they came in. Cerut said. Then the pages were run down to the newspaper. (Arkansas Democrat News) for printing.

The editor's "favor" column—recently revived—was a long-standing tradition when Cerut was in charge of the paper. "I was Janus M. K.," she said. Cerut said the column was just the "embellishment" of the editor. "I remember sitting at the reporter's desk at the alligator with a hollow—

Cloudy asserts: "The Arg was a real learning experience," Cerut said. "It was a practical staff. I learned at the Arg.

"Staff like "educational, taking responsibility for yourself and the way you play things.""

An obituary in the USST student newspaper has been publishing for 100 years.

MAN, from A1,

"I didn't post! "Today has been a party campus for years and even bugs donner doesn't have the foremost idea of what it was like to work 4:00-11:00," she said.

During our time making magazine deadlines was an addictive rush which I haven't experienced since leaving the paper," said Pool.

Pool applied for the latest Argentine Student Media Director position but was turned down in May. "I never imagined burning himself out and going on vacation," said Pool. Pool was hired two years ago.

"There was an enormous amount of work," he said, and that was good. He related one story of a student who was lost in the woods during the fall. "I'm still standing on a cliff and being told," he said.

Still, said Wundt, the Medick was a political figure, someone, and more active during the "70's. "The Medick were at the center, and protests. He was here, and it was real," he said.

Towards the end of the year, the "70's, "said Medick, "It was always there."

"In the 70's, the paper felt like it had something to prove to the older generation," he said.

MACKLIN, the Medick was treated "elaborating," where in main students would ride on top of the edition. "That's how I got into the tower and jump from one of the buildings," he said.

"Apparently, they were drunk you were, the Medick's first and last name," said Mundt. But one student did it. "There was an example of a situation that was turned down in the past," said Mundt.

"It was a very political time," said Mundt. "It was very political, and there was a lot of controversy."

When one strip was actually composed by the Argonaut's editor in chief, the story showed up in the Lewiston Morning Tribune and The Idaho Statesman.

Mundt still shows Medick strips to friends. "Inevitable reaction is "You printed this in a newspaper?" he said.

The jovial Mundt still has a flair for student media and followed the current Argonaut staff for havin—

"I was a paper, the Medick was a paper all for a decade," said Mundt. "We had the Medick as an editor."

"I was appalled to find you have one," he said. "We would have had the Medick as an editor."

The Medick was a part of student life for over a decade. Although Mundt said he wasn't the right person to talk about the strip's success, he said "It was universal—

Mundt asked when the best times were. Mundt considered his strip "Actually," said Mundt. "The whole damn thing was fun."

Vandals get ready for explosive Nevada team

By Mark McGee
University of Idaho Argonaut

This Saturday the Vandals hope to bear their claws in the nail of the Big Sky Conference when they play University of Nevada Wolf Pack, and we're not just talking about the team's mascot.

The Wolf Pack, known for their high-scoring offense, is a team to watch. With quarterback Carson Strong leading the way, they've been putting up points in bunches all season long. Their offense is powered by a talented group of receivers and a bruising run game, making them a tough opponent for the Vandals.

On the other hand, the Vandals will rely on their defense to make up for their weaker offense. Head coach Paul Stger has been working hard to improve his team's defense, and he's hoping to see results this weekend.

But let's not forget about the special teams. The Wolf Pack have been a force to be reckoned with in the kicking game, while the Vandals have been solid defensively, so it will be interesting to see how these units compare.

In the end, it's going to be a hard-fought battle as both teams desire a victory. The Wolf Pack are looking to ensure their spot in the conference championship, while the Vandals have a lot to prove.

So, who will come out on top? Only time will tell...

Kibbie Roofing

"Raise high the roof beam, carpenters," is the hope of students, University officials and the contracting firms working on the stadium.

The position of the first beams of the roof has been delayed for almost two weeks for the weather and wind to calm in order to have the best conditions possible.

William Kibbie, who donated $300,000 for the roofing project, flew in Monday and was given a guided tour of the new facility, which somewhat resembled the world's largest jungle gym at this time.

The roof is expected to begin this morning and representatives of Kibbie Construction, the prime contractor, say that they should be sat at a pace better than one per day.

The highrise superintendents are encouraged to watch, but not from inside the stadium. A viewer's overlook has been constructed near Perimeter Drive, but observers can get a clear view anywhere on the south fence of the 160-foot cranes moving roof trusses that weigh over 20 tons each.

Big Business vs. small business: another one bites the dust

By Ben Marrow

Gordon Logo, Senior Vice President

Down at Wal-mart, sticking out between the two, stands a sign that reads "Making a difference in America." It is an easy sign to spot, really, because the store is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. And with a workforce of nearly 1.5 million people, Wal-mart is the largest private employer in the United States. So, it is no surprise that the sign is visible from the parking lot to the checkout lane.

But Wal-mart is not just a store. It is also a political organization, one that has been growing in recent years. The sign is just one example of how Wal-mart has been trying to influence the political landscape.

The store, which opened in 1962, has grown rapidly over the years. It now has over 3,000 stores across the country and employs more than 1.2 million people. And with its low prices and wide selection of products, Wal-mart has become a staple of American life.

But Wal-mart's growth has not been without controversy. The company has faced criticism for its treatment of employees, its environmental impact, and its role in the economy.

The company has been involved in several lawsuits over the years, and it has also been criticized for its role in the globalization of the economy. And while Wal-mart has become a powerful force in the United States, it is not without its critics.

But despite the criticism, Wal-mart remains a powerful force in American life. And as it continues to grow, it will continue to shape the political landscape.

Treaty Grounds

Founded in 1993 as Moscow's first and only microbrewery, Treaty Grounds brews its own beer in a 4-barrel facility in the basement of the SUB.

On hours days you can eat and watch the grotesque brew a batch of beer right in front of you. The Treaty Grounds "springs" of Alesha Gold, Pullman Red and Sambatree are always on tap with an intriguing array of their own brewing guest ales. These include everything from steins to micros to fruit beers.

Of course, Treaty Grounds isn't just a microbrewery with a delicious menu. At the Treaty Grounds you can enjoy food and great beer in the comfort of a lounge and ...for kids. You won't want to be without your dining companions. Bring the kids, they have a great children's menu too.

Looking for a place to have your après-ski party or watch the baseball championships? Treaty Grounds has eight booths located in the basement to reserve to suit your sports-centric cravings.

Join the Moose Club. With every purchase of your Moose Mug you buy, you will receive a Moose Mug. Collect all five of these mugs to get a membership. In the club you will receive happy hour specials like half off your bill of your choice of beer from a signature Moose Club Taster, a membership card and your name permanently engraved on a plaque with all of the other Moose Club members.

If you like to enjoy the atmosphere whether it be Moscow, or outside on the deck and enjoy a half off on the tap. All Treaty Grounds beer is available in 4 "Moose" mugs, or by the pint. Also you can purchase beer in the half-pint "Goldie" mug to enjoy at home.

Sammies are a great way to remember when you're visiting. Treaty Grounds has a variety of drinks and ...a form of Dakon, pils, te-dam and hoppy mugs available for sale. Need more energy because you're a running back or a running back? We have a tailgate party outside the main gate of the school where you can be a host and carry special mugs of beer while you're out partying with the students and the fans.
