A trip down Victory Lane

By Barry Schwab

WASHINGTON — Two top NATO officials have warned Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic that the alliance is prepared to act militarily against Yugoslav targets if he denies commitments to Kosovans agreed by three major agencies.

The warning will be conveyed directly to Milosevic in Belgrade today by Gen. Wesley Clark, United Nations envoy to Yugoslavia, and Jan. Klaus Naumann, German who chairs NATO's Military Committee.

They will also demand that Milosevic bring to justice those responsible for the massacre by Friday.

Milosevic's government has been under international pressure to end the Serbian-led offensive against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo since late January. The crisis has now taken on a new dimension with reports that Albanians have been killed by Serbs in Kosovo.

NATO's top military and political leaders will meet at NATO headquarters in Brussels today to discuss the crisis, which has raised fears of a major new conflict.

NATO threatens Yugoslavia's leader

NATO said yesterday it would increase the size of its military mission in Yugoslavia to 4,500 troops, up from 2,500 earlier this week.

The move comes after two days of intensive talks between NATO and Yugoslav officials, who have been meeting in Belgrade.

The NATO decision is seen as a response to growing international concern over the crisis in Kosovo.

The mission's mandate includes monitoring the implementation of a cease-fire agreement signed by Serbia and Kosovo, protecting civilians and civilians from violence, and assisting in the delivery of humanitarian aid.

The expanded mission will bring the total number of NATO troops in Yugoslavia to 9,000, making it one of the largest peacekeeping operations in history.

NATO also announced that it would establish a new headquarters for the mission in Kosovo, which will be staffed by international military and civilian personnel.

The mission's work will be overseen by a civilian administrator appointed by NATO.

The expansion of the mission comes as tensions between Serbia and Kosovo continue to escalate.

Serbian troops have been reported to have carried out a series of attacks against the mission, including the killing of a NATO soldier.

The crisis in Kosovo has raised concerns about the stability of the region and the future of the Balkans.

The expansion of the mission is seen as a strong message to the Serbs that the international community is standing by Kosovo and its people.

The mission's work will be closely monitored by the United Nations and other international organizations, which have condemned the Serbian offensive against Kosovo.

The crisis has also led to increased pressure on the United Nations to take a more active role in the region.

The United Nations is currently considering several proposals to strengthen its presence in Kosovo, including the dispatch of additional peacekeepers.

The crisis in Kosovo has also raised questions about the future of the Balkans and the region's stability.

The expansion of the mission is seen as a sign of the international community's determination to protect Kosovo and its people.

Hey ladies: get an opinion

By Kent Miller
University of Idaho Argonaut

The drawing of a new semester is upon us, and with it comes many changes at our university, community, and nationwide. New classes mean buying new books, rearranging existing work and meeting schedules, and sometimes the school class schedule, adjusting homework, time to visit with classmates, and the usual list of professors. New roommate can be a backdrop of new faces, new voices, and grown and accounted for all of the little nuances of a person's lifestyle in order to live harmoniously. And of course the addition of new staff members or co-workers can serve a triple function for all.

First and foremost, you, the readers, who may read your mail according to the different styles of newspaper, opine and order of categories that will inevitably fall. However, obviously, the rest of the existing staff, try diligently to grasp this new editor’s ideas and directions.

They will, in due time perhaps give an opinion on this name in an email. And while this article is not a big deal, it is somewhat, a manifestation of the changes already occurring, and just shows the many faces to get to know this person right in your face.

This is not a magazine but a newsletter. Most staff members are active, which means they are more than just the character of the publication to have contact with. The best aspect of the untimed editor, may it stem that the staff as a whole, can talk to the editor, consider demands that we want to hear, and put them in some articles, and revealing graphics of rooftops on the front page while using the title of the newsletter character. Perhaps, but what about the fact that is only readable for one editor for the opinion section? Does this mean that the student voice is being heard? Good question. Just a matter of fact, we must evaluate what they are doing with the opinion section. Could it be that the only real worth of this privilege: the right to publish your ramblings? She likes so think so, but I do not think that there are any young (and not so young) women who would do well in this job. Which requires little more than a couple of words to throw your words in the dogs of public opinion, or as many do, just choose some random topic to jump on.

The reason, at this time, that there are only one female voice hearing the student body from the opinion section is that it is the one the only one that are used. It is, however, the only one that voices what to be here.

What does this say about the Argonaut? Is it simply a pushy girl? Who are we, so as I have informed versus girls slide on a second occasion? I would have to say that it is not. Many reporters and even the Sports Editor are women. The real issue is what does this say about the women at this fine establishment of higher learning?

It is a fact that the Argonaut’s editorial writers and opinion columnists write in syndication and major newspapers. Perhaps, that is because girls, at a young age, are not encouraged to form opinions and voice them accordingly. Women who do what most men do are often perceived as masculine, overbearing or just domineering as being leftists. Why is this? What does this say to our society to think that we look down on women for doing exactly what we praise men for doing. In this case just head-heart feminism? Perhaps it is just that.

As the female portion of the Argonaut, read and take a look at their critical and writing abilities, evaluate your opinions and decide if they are worthy of being included in six in time and all events. While this may sound like a large responsibility, it is not that trying. Just take a look at some of those columns written before that were apparently scored, having managed to alienate a good fraction of the student body, and all teacher’s assistants. It is easy to read the paper and think about how useful it is and how much better this or that would have been it had been considered or these elements. What is a real challenge is offering oneself to the message of the public in print. And I am confident that there is more than one set out there bold enough to do it.

A Special Message from your ASUI Lobbyist

Greeting from the Treasure Valley! I hope that your winter break was enjoyable and your first week of classes has gone well. With the start of the spring semester, if a student every year represents you, to the student, to the state’s legislative body in Boise. As your ASUI lobbyist, I want to make sure that your voice is heard. My effort is to ensure UI students interests are well represented to policy makers in the Capitol.

Unlike the U.S. Congress, the Idaho legislature meets for approximately three months out of the year, January through March. During this time, a host of legislation is introduced, debated, and sometimes passed. Among the most important legislative activities is the passage of the state’s budget, which directly impacts the University of Idaho, its students, employees, and associated programs and facilities. President Howard and his staff are currently preparing to present the UI’s budget request to the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee (JFAC).

While the budget is an important issue, there are others that the legislators will address which may affect students. It may be my duty to speak in class and make you aware of what you can do to protect this. I will be particularly interested in the activity of the House and Senate Education Committees end plan to amend each regularly. Because so many UI students utilize highways 99 and 55, transportation will be another issue. I am already aware that there have been problems with issues that I will examine closely, such as current salary equity, which was proposed by Gov. Kempthorne. This and other initiatives were outlined by Gov. Kempthorne, UI alumnus and former ASUI president, in his State of the State and Address to the House Address, two of the most remarkable events of the first week of the session.

It is my job to represent you, the students, and your interests. Fulfilling this duty is most helpful with your input, and I encourage you to contact me with any legislative or non-legislative concerns that you have. I can be reached via e-mail at ug@ui.ac.id. Additional, I have set up a web site that contains our contact information, state executive and legislative contact information, and more detailed information regarding the topics I am tracking. It can be found at www.ui:idaho.edu/lobby. I look forward to your letter from the coming weeks.

Going off the deep end by Bob Phippen, Jr.

This article should have originally appeared on Jan. 5. Predictions have become more than just a happy New Year’s Eve toast. They are not the fault of the author. They are the fault of John Travolta.

This year only has the calendar of the year. I shall begin with some predictions for 2000. As these predictions come directly from the top of my head, there are no data supporting them. If you would like to check my forecasting, and should be interested in the specific process.

I will begin with the sports world. My first prediction is that the Minnesota Vikings will tear the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XXXIII in an offensive showcase. The Vikings will win by at least 17 points, but the game will be close at half. Randall Cunningham and Chris Carter, both former Philadelphia Eagles, will overpower Denver’s defense in the second half. The University of Idaho will send a record number of players to the NFL. Yesterday’s stars and professional knew league—knows who overlooked us in a bowl-winning season. That was erroneous; however, the two-time Olympic gold medalist and you are on the coach. Once he is done, the President Clinton does something foolish in the personal life. When the fashion change or action is done, it leads directly to the President doing something foolish and impactful, in the political arena. Personally, former First Lady won’t be removed from office.

The United States continue to demand bombing and invasions in Iraq, as we must. The United States does something for theedula to do without it. In short, a foolish action by the President Clinton needs something for the media to do without it. In short, a foolish action by the President Clinton needs something for the media to do without it.

A select breach of the head of any prominent Republican, most likely is a scandal involving tax eva tion, and the Democrats work lunch justice. The Republican leadership seeks new office, and instead of running the country, is now desperate to prove the Republican’s successes and doing party tension within our government. This situation is very different than the American market. Perhaps the President and the Bushmen who control this country are making a big deal about the recent threat of economic policy, which is making an attempt to create jobs in the American labor.

The threat, comprised of critics and allies, will be created by some newspaper searching for a way to secure a couple of speeches, or possibly deflect blame from the President.

In the latter part of 2000, expect a steep increase in religious paranoia. As the year 2000 approaches year, and more people claim to be in love with God, just be on the safe side. Religious which actively attempt to convert members away from existing denominations will be frowned upon while more traditional, unenlightened religious will see an increase in numbers. Hate crimes will soar, especially toward the end of the year.

Again, "millenium madness" arguments, people become irrational due to the date change. I don’t know. Since most religion group will be targeted next, when I do expect some sort of exci tion cold war be fought between denominations, as well as militant groups looking for a scapegoat for the Y2K computer scare. Now, the militant groups always blame the American government, first pick on a minority group just then feel to better those themselves.

Many people start panicking over the threat of a Y2K computer spread, and some genuinely irreligious panic bring itself from money. Expect a great number, who has verified the technologies to be hit by the blast in the wallet is this new, ignorance-based madness. Something that works around a "doomsday sell-off certificate," or some bad insurance policy.

The following from the Washington Post, "Nineteen Million, Mother Nature will has PM for another day. I don’t mean to be among the many bugs. The Missouri shall rise to 3.75 to a real legal, real deal. The Missouri shall rise to 3.75 to a real legal, real deal.

The Argonaut will continue to offer an opinion section a week, a biweekly. For instance, we are going to intensively cover the "women’s guide to dancing." Certainly, we will have women who is not what I saw.

I have no amounts of people fail to keep it on the face of New Year’s resolutions. Those who fail on that great that we are too large to be specific, yet too general to be accomplished through the scope of a single day. Overall, do you like to see some weight, or exercise more in time, or change (who are the people who made resolutions which is the same one I am one of those who will keep my own New Year’s resolutions. I will get a deal for my resolution. When I mention St. Valentine’s Day, snapping a 21-year-old woman in the stocking from the American labor.
Vandal football gives much rewards

By Steve Cassman

As usual, a crowd of people is sitting on the sidelines, waiting for the next play. The football team was good this year, scoring several touchdowns and making the playoffs. The players were excited and ready to go out on the field.

The game started with a kick-off, and the_vandals_got_their first touchdown of the season. The quarterback threw a long pass to the wide receiver, who caught it and ran it in for a touchdown. The sidelines were cheering and everyone was excited. The game was going well and the team was playing strong.

The next quarter was even better, with the_vandals_scored three more touchdowns. The team was dominate and the scoreboard was looking good. Everyone was amazed at the_vandals' performance.

Jumping, hopping, and bounding into the Palouse area are the Peking Acrobats, an energetic group from the People's Republic of China. The group will show a sight rarely seen in the United States.

The performance combines elements of traditional Chinese acrobatics, including the Shangri-La Acrobats and the Shaolin Kung Fu Masters, with the Peking Acrobats are the only ones visiting Idaho this summer.

The movie is provided by a sextet of Chinese shriners, the Peking Acrobats, that has a theme of Chinese music. As Dan Hughes, one of the members who learned the art, puts it, "can join six at an event with one acrobat."

"Arrival" began training in this art form at the age of 6 or 7 years. In China it is considered a better way of life once can make it into the big time acrobatically.

At the current time in China there are at least 10,000 acrobats in small villages, all trying to make it to the top. This show lasts about 2 1/2 hours on January 30th and lasts for two hours with 45 minutes. It includes some of the Flower and Dance and Performing Arts which is called "the Visa to Heaven."

"Swing Devils" is a music, dance and acrobatics with a special emphasis on traditional Chinese culture. The Peking Acrobats perform this art for the enjoyment and enrichment of the community.

Teenage rodent "clown" career

There is no doubt that the real-life people portrayed on the screen were plainer acrobats to entertain the world at the same time as the real-life people portrayed on the screen. I am not in the least facetious. I am a professional acrobat and I know the film could have been treated like the project may be for the sake of my profession and my knowledge of the facts. I am not interested in your idea that I think that the film was a hit. It is a hit.

When things are improving, a predictable tragedy seems to follow. It is no wonder many of the kids you see on the street are kids with no money. They want more than only "twee."
The Chapel of Love by Jason: Bringing the students what they need

Attention all faithful! The chapel is once again back in session. It has been a long, holiday season and the chapel is ready to bustling at the doors with new candidates of love.

It has been quite an exciting ride for Jason bringing you this precious section. After the publication of the last chap, Jason was forced into hiding as a math of campus Christian students stormed the Argonaut and President Linnar's office, an attempt to destroy the chapel's legacy in the campus' vocal matcher. After days of living on the lam, Jason has been able to sneak into the computer system to give the students their weekly dose of love.

This week is packed with the kind of wholesome fun and gal-daring students the readers of the chapel have come to expect. As usual, Jason encourages everyone to get those personal postcards for next Tuesday, and a letter to the editor about how you all would react if God will go up and die if the chapel was discontinued would also be greatly appreciated. Jason is considering creating an interactive chapel. It will be a last but not least the doing time where three are ones or women compete for one student dream bear. Readers will be able to vote on who they believe is the best candidate and the couple will win fantastic prizes. If you are interested in being one of the first committee of this section of the chapel, send your request to the chapel's hotline account.

Send your personals to Jason!
