Condom awareness pops up at UI

By Stephen Kaminsky
University of Idaho Argonaut

Back in 1978, a group of students at UC-Berkeley started the first National Condom Week. Their message: control contraception and increase awareness. Now, the American Student Health Association (ASHA) is sponsoring the seventh annual National Condom Day on Valentine's Day. Condoms are effective in reducing the balling numbers of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) and pregnancy. New cases of STD's are up 12 percent from 10 years ago, and two-thirds of the cases are reported in people under 25. Visit the ASHA web site (www.asha.org) for more information.

Among the two types of condoms, the male condom made of latex is the most effective in preventing pregnancy and the transmission of most STDs. The female condom is also effective. Only water-based lubricants should be used with latex. Petroleum jelly and oil-based lotions can weaken the condom and increase the chance of breakage. Natural membranes, like lambkins, are not recommended for protection from STD's.

Opportunities abound for students to get free condoms. The health center always has a good supply on hand, and some rooms have free condoms available over the counter, but it could be a long wait because of the demand. Daniel Noble, a business major, thinks that condoms should be available all over campus and at all times. "The health center is a long way away and is out of stock on a Friday night when the condoms are needed most," he said. Malvina Hennessen, a music education major, thought the Trojan brand might be noticed and find in one-stop bathrooms. Daryell Harter, a criminal justice major, and Brooke Allston, an architecture major, found this while driving through Neptune Hall. They think the idea is a good one since it "puts condoms, glow in the dark condoms, glue in the dark condoms, and condoms with various interesting textures."

Others, like Sam, are trying to get people to talk seriously about condoms. Aside from the inherent use, condoms are a favorite tool of pranksters. Condoms will fit doorknobs and shower heads and make good water balloons.

Moscow fire chief resigns after complaints

Last week student volunteer firefighters met to discuss their grievances with the Landfield department Monday the department rest and Chief Landfield resigned on Wednesday.

"This decision to step down was very difficult, but I think the best interest of the Department is at heart," said Moscow City Council City Councilman in a press release. Throughout the semester students volunteers felt their voices were not heard concerning basic safety and health. Students considered leaving because of improvements weren't made.

When there are fewer volun-ters the reaction time is slower affecting the entire community. Volunteer Bill Dadd said the team can be in two minutes in two minutes but many rural communities in seven minutes. With fewer volun-ters a person with a 911 call might not hear a house fire and a house would be engulfed in flames.

Some students were also concerned about the job, and one said, "Students. Landfield's resignation that he often reminded them they worked for free and not to tell him how to do his job. Complaints were addressed to both the captain and the crew chief, but because this was an internal issue students felt many of their options were exhausted. Students proportion to the Landfield's negligence or remittance prior to their meeting last Wednesday. "On Wednesday 7 members met to discuss the matter, and the department was still split. After the two-hour meeting some students wouldn't say what was asked.

Students Robert Ryan and Jen Erickson try to let department regulators close their first priority serving Moscow.

"In 1980 the community and us of us are going to school to be professional firefighters and EMT's. This is on the job training," said Ryan.

HOMERV, N.H. — By what will mark the most significant change at Dartmouth College? What is the decision of the Trustees' decision in coordination with the Board of Trustees and President James Wright announced yesterday a plan which will put an end to the single-sex frac-crumes and security system which has existed at the College for more than 150 years. Although is unclear at the point what the new system will look like, Wright said The Dartmouth yesterday or Trustees' decisions will mean an end to the grade system "as we know it.

The Board — which, yesterday released a revolutionary list of five principles aimed at overhauling residential and social life in the College — said, "these changes manly before deciding on a new social system that will be based on a single-gender system."

Wright said both he and the Trustees are prepared to weather the storm and show support for what they expect will result from the decision, which will change the face of social and residential life at a campus where more than 30 percent of undergraduates are members of the 23 single-gender fraternities and sororities. / Dartmouth to end single-sex Greek system

CHICAGO—More than 40 percent of women and 20 percent of men who say they have sexuality in sex, can’t have an orgasm or suffer from some sexual dysfunction, according to what researchers say is the first detailed U.S. survey since the 1940s Kinsey studies.

The study, lead author of Chicago sociologist Elizabeth Lauren, called the findings “staggering.”

“I think it gives a base for the ongoing work that this one explicit “response to Viagra,” he said.

The researchers said problems with sex are often coupled with everything from emotional and health problems to lack of time, stress and money. But they said they aren’t sure which comes first, stress or problems with sex.

The study was published in the July 19 issue of the American Medical Association.

The researchers found their fudging.

Rainier brewery likely to close

Anna Reed

SEATTLE—Rainier beer will remain, but the Rainier brewery where it is made will probably close, another victim of the beer industry consolidations.

Rainier Beer Co. of Seattle, a unit of Hostess Hamburger Industry consolidations. It announced plans Monday to sell Rainier, which dates from 1873, and its other brands to Pabst Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, Hostess and it would seek a buyer for the Rainier brewery with its high royalty. A long familiar sight.

Stebek speakerle Lacey Logan said the deal would close in 60 days, ensuring the Juster Department approves, after which the company plans to produce both Pilsner for one month until the conversion is complete.

For the 230 Rainier employees, the offer is probably that "of January 2000, they don’t have jobs," said Lacey Logan, business representative for the Operating Engineers Local 280.

"We’re coming to the end of the line and the people here are starting to get nervous when they see what’s coming."

"The news was iconic to the employees at the brewery, which has been long operating in half capacity."

"We’ll be back to where we were back in the brewery’s heyday," said Lacey Logan, business representative for the Operating Engineers Local 280, which represents many of the employees.

"Company officials predicted the additional business would give job security and new work to the brewery’s 280 employees, and would eventually add 140 new jobs.

"It’s going to be good for the employees and the community," said Lacey Logan, who runs the plant as a partnership.

Rainier is the iconic beer of the region and one of the most recognizable in the country. Its distinctive bottle, a unique shape that has been around since the early 1900s, is a symbol of Seattle’s beer heritage.

The company, which has been in operation since 1873, produces a variety of beers, including Pilsner, a popular style in the Pacific Northwest.

The sale of Rainier beer to Pabst comes amidst a broader trend in the beer industry, where larger companies are acquiring smaller brands to increase their market share and reduce costs.

The deal is expected to be finalized by the end of the year, with production at the Rainier brewery scheduled to begin in January 2000. The company plans to produce Pilsner beer for one month until the conversion is complete.

Rainier is one of the oldest brewery brands in the United States, having been founded in 1873. It was acquired by Hostess Hamburger Industry in 1982, and the Rainier brewery has been operating in half capacity since then.

The company is facing increased competition from larger beer companies, and has been exploring ways to increase its market share and reduce costs.

Open container ban rejected by Senate

19 The Senate has already banned open containers by drivers of motor vehicles and last yearuba voted for a motion that was opposed by those who are concerned about the safety of Cassian's children. open- container laws, which are widely supported by those who believe that alcohol is not a major problem in Cassian's community, have been rejected by the Senate in the past. However, the Senate is considering a bill that would impose a $25 fine on anyone found in possession of an open container of alcohol in a vehicle.

Love does exist, and there's proof.

By Kenneth Phillips, University of Idaho Argonaut

Sunday is Valentine's Day, the day devoted to expressing our opinions about this day, which is supposed to be about love, is, paradoxically a day that is rather reviled or hated.

For me, I am full of expressions of love. But through Valentine's Day I seem a little overenthusiastic.

I think I am the first to do it. The only person I might get to spend time with, and that the two of us.

However, I'd like to challenge your thinking a bit. We all know love exists, but how do we know? Is it a feeling? Is it a real thing? To find out, we need to get out of the materialistic, science-dominated world in which we live and enter the abstract. But abstract ideas bring up the very question.

Besides, we are all human beings. The diversity of love is as real as the diversity of the people. But how can we know? Love can be expressed in any number of ways, but how do we know what love is, what love is not, what love means? What is it? Does it exist? What is its meaning? Is it both physical and non-observable? Do we need to prove something? They represent a non-observable substance! Can we prove that the trick is as well? Is this a non-observable substance? Is it a physical and non-observable substance? Can we prove that? Do we need to prove that? That is right and wrong are not physical things. But would anyone really need it that right and wrong other do not exist?

The discussion being the topic of science can touch us. Our world discusses make you just enough for abstract things. It is expendable now.

Perhaps the idea of spiritual and religion are actually worth.

But St. Valentine's Day is a day to express your love.

Madness is anyone's game

"As we get closer and closer to March 17th, there is no doubt that we have a tournament," said Munnz. Munnz is enough, he is more than 20 teams on small seeds and 4 teams on top seeds. The question is "can you take a risk?"

The NCAA selection committee is under pressure to pick teams that are not capable of winning it all. The tournament is not about the seeds, but about the players and the strategy of the coaches.

Once again we are reminded that March is the month of the unexpected. The biggest surprise this year is Michigan State, who is currently ranked 9th in the nation. This team has been playing well, but they are not expected to be in the Final Four.

With the signature of headset and phone numbers, the tournament is not over. Even with the best players and coaches, there is always a chance for upsets. The tournament is a test of both skill and luck. As a heralded team, Michigan State has surprised everyone by making it to the Final Four. The team's success is due to their teamwork, strategy, and determination.

Michigan State is one of the few teams that have the ability to win it all. They have a talented roster, a strong coach, and a winning attitude. The team's performance in the tournament has been impressive, and they have shown that they can handle the pressure.

Although the stakes are high, the players and coaches are not afraid to take a risk. They are ready to go all in and make the most of the opportunity. They are determined to make history and create memories that will last a lifetime.

Michigan State's next challenge is the Final Four. The team faces a tough opponent in the form of the top-seeded team. However, Michigan State is not afraid of a challenge. They are ready to face the best and prove that they are worthy of the title.

In the end, the tournament is about more than just winning. It is about the experience, the memories, and the legacy that the players and coaches create. It is about the thrill of the chase and the joy of the moment. The tournament is a celebration of basketball and the people who love it.
VANDAL NEWS AND NOTES

Men's Basketball
The University of Idaho Vandal basketball team will be back in action against North Texas tomorrow night. Tip-off is at 7:00 p.m. The men will only have one non-home game this season, a game Feb. 18 against Boise State.

Women's Basketball
The Idaho Lady Vandal basketball team is on the road for the holiday weekend. They will face New Mexico State and Nevada on Sunday.

Track and Field
"The U of I track and field team will host the 24th annual Vandal Invitational Friday at the Kiddie Court.

The field will consist of 10 teams and includes 14 previous Vandal Indoor Champions.

"The field we have gathered in very good collegiate competition that will not be an exciting three hours," coach Mike Keller said. "Among other things it will feature the indoor javelin for the first time since Chris Conger set the U.S. record of 222 ft. in 1988."

Idaho looks to average its last 13 rounds to 643 1/4 at the opening meet.

Research and development in the 644-mile dash is expected to begin.

"The Vandal and Idaho Indoor records will still hold to our victory in the second season," coach Bob Emery said.

"We have a solid five and a half of strong performance and quality." Keller said.

Keller's 4000 was record 5:52.4.

Total 5300, 25:24.

Drag Show: Vroom vroom!

By Shaye Rider
Contributing Writer

Friday was the fifth anniversary of the Moscow Drag and Toilet Show’s creation. In 1994 Kathy Sproage, stage manager and programmer, put together a huge party for her birthday, and in that year she had more people than ever before to celebrate with.

The dogs were initially held in the Moscow Social Club, but they fell behind the Kirov as their new home. Synga, who also did Slight and Saudi Pearl, and her co-UL, Tabitha Simmons, now organize the event every Friday night at The Beach and The Rock. They are friends from all over the Northwest and perform in increasingly popular venues.

In the past, the dog shows have been a way for people to have a good time and to support their local bars. The shows are put on by volunteers who have donated their time and effort to make them successful.

In this issue’s show, there were several dogs, including a St. Bernard, a Pekingese, and a Shih Tzu. The St. Bernard was the largest dog and was the star of the show. It was a black and white color and had a thick coat of fur. The Pekingese was a small dog with a white coat and a short tail. The Shih Tzu was a small dog with a long coat of hair.

During the show, there were a variety of events. The dogs were judged on their appearance, personality, and talent. There were also a few stands set up with merchandise for sale. The dogs were also given treats during the show.

In the end, there were a few winners. The St. Bernard was the grand prize winner, and the Pekingese was the runner-up. The Shih Tzu was the best in show. The merchandise stand also did well.

Overall, it was a successful show and a great way for people to have a good time and support their local bars.
Shakespeare and Ryan dominate academy award nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Hollywood rewarded moviemakers who took the risks.

Saving Private Ryan opened with a half-hour of unrelenting combat. The Thin Red Line matched its way through the battle for Guadalcanal with a lot of poster and very little plot. Dead Man chopped and cut a tell-all story.

The three films joined two others that received the Eliezerans' costume drama, Shakespeare in Love and Eliezerans' best picture nominees Tuesday for the 71 Academy Awards.

"lıkları is a tribute to the veterans," said Private Ryan director Steven Spielberg, whose movin get 11 nominations. "It's important that before this century is not at pale recognition for the expressions who saved the world."

Shakespeare was a reflecting screen about the Bard seeking his muse, crawling with a leading 13 nominations, one of the record 1.5 by Titanic last year and 40.

About 58 in 1954. The most was for a film is 31, a record held by The Docks of New York and Tension last year.

Goodrich about the themes behind the throne, tied with The Docks of New York and Tension with seven nominations.

The Oscar will be presented March 21 on ABC, with Whoopi Goldberg back for a third time as host.

Mostly the nominations spoke to Hollywood's, and America's, interest in World War II, with those of the finest best picture nominees not during that period. At least eight movies starring with the war have been picture Oscars, including Spielberg's own Schindler's List in 1994.

Each of the nominated war pic

niers were from the westerns — Spielberg, who is one of Hollywood's most powerful filmmakers, will head the resources to create what many belief is one of the most multiple epics of battle ever filmed, with 115 minutes of bloody, exciting, rain ning and railway half on the beaches of Normandy. Nominated included those for director Spielberg, who won this mark and Robert Reden, for original screen play — Terrence Malick, in a triumph of return to Hollywood after a two-decade absence (his previous film was Days of Heaven in 1975), pro up to The Thin Red Line a lyrical film with ethereal beats and scenes with stunning nature shots. Spielberg's director and assistant screenplay were nominated — Roberto Bronk, who is already one of the biggest stars in Italy, combined low comedy with tragic circumstances in Life is Beautiful to tell the story of a father trying to shield his son from the horrors of a concentration camp. In a rare first, Bespug was nominated for best actor, director and screenwriter.

Life is Beautiful also became the first film since 1996. It is to be nominated for both best picture and best foreign-language film. "It really Bandersnatch," Brango said.

My ancestors are Basque, but that doesn't mean I like having sex on my face. I am looking for a wonderful woman to show me her numbers, secrets. I love the long black hair and olive skin of a Basque woman but hate the softness of sheep. So please write in time for Valentine's Day, and sheep need not apply.

I'm a studious, hard-working engineer who's looking for a chick to hang out with on the weekends and weekdays. If you're athletic figure and then smoke, I enjoy going out watching moving movies (or playing video) and am looking for an active refresh to spend some time with. Enjoying an activity makes the relationship.

It really saddens me to see an unscientific engineer seekettes femininity, self-actualized with eating my club, but it turns out. It takes."
