Mrs. Clinton promises 'careful thought' on senate run

By Terence Hart

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton said Tuesday she was weighing her options for running for a U.S. Senate seat from New York, though her husband said she was talking with supporters about what it would take her time to run a serious campaign.

The first lady promised to make her decision later this year. President Clinton said Monday she would be "sure" to "run in the Senate." Mrs. Clinton's statement showed a quick response from the camp of Mary Kaye Cline Grynn, a possible Republican. "If Hillary Clinton announces a run for Senate, that would encourage the major Republicans to contest the candidacy for the Senate as well," a Grynn spokesman said.

The major Democratic Sen. Charles Schumer voiced a view of what might take late entry from another Democrat. "I think she would be an extremely formidable candidate," Schumer said Tuesday. "I caution my friends to do exactly what she did, but the favorites don't drop down," Schumer said at a news conference in Albany.

The Clintons said they were deeply grateful for the large number of people who have encouraged Mrs. Clinton to run. The reason she was being encouraged by the retirements of Democratic Sens. Daniel Patrick Moynihan in 1988 and 1994, President Clinton said, is that she and her husband disailed to give much thought to a potential candidacy but said she would be able to transfer it to one. She said she would make her decision later this year.

"In the meantime," she said, "I will state a three- sentence statement, I intend to make a decision on my intentions on the issuu central to the president's agenda and on which we have worked together for too many years."

Studying the most recent Canadian study, it was found that two-thirds of adults and women identified as having gambling problems. However, the data suggests that men and women are equally likely to report gambling-related problems. The study also found that there is a significant correlation between the presence of gambling-related problems and other mental health disorders, such as depression and anxiety. The results highlight the need for further research and the development of effective interventions to address gambling-related problems.
Woolf is gold for Vandal hoops

By Sean Campbell

Stanford, Calif.

The days of painting gold in her Idaho home are long gone, but three years ago Hills Holt blacked in red. Not in Idaho though—Andover, Kansas. The target of the town was Woolf.

It wasn’t as though Holt stumbled upon Woolf, how could she? Woolf’s numbers were astonishing. She was Kansas’ player of the year in both her junior and senior years.

When she graduated she had poured in more points in her high school career (2,347) than anyone else in the history of Kansas high school basketball. She averaged over 30 points in her final season along with 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

She was a four year starter on the basketball team and listed in all-state and all-tournament lists of accomplishments didn’t end with athletics, though, her name was synonymous with the honor role and she was a member of the National Honor Society.

When Holt went looking Woolf was more disappointed in missing the final home football game than missing about taking hops with someone from Idaho. Holt made quite an impression though. “She reminded me exactly of my high school coach and the one I never over,” Woolf said with a smile.

Although she is the daughter of University of Kansas (father) and Kansas State (mother) alumni, her parents were very supportive of her choice to make the 26 hour trip to Moscow. “They knew this was the place for me,” Woolf said, and granted her decision with bags of UI apparel they had purchased when they visited on their own.

Adversity seems to be a part of Woolf’s DNA; her father was a three sport athlete at Kansas and her mother led cheer for the cross state rivals.

It is her father that the one she really looks after. Head coach Hillary Rocknol praises Ms. Woolf also, “She really guided her well.” But she didn’t give all the credit to him. “I didn’t have to dog the tail, but the arrow.”

Before Susan became a regular gym, she was mixing her jump shot in her do-overs. At the age of five she began competing against her twin brother David in pick up games. Their competition did not die in the driveway but extended into virtually every facet of their lives. It is a characteristic that defines Susan to this day.

Woolf is the type of person who won’t do anything if she’s not going to try to be the best at it; she excels at almost anything she does,” Rocknol said of her three point specialists.

The hours spent in the driveway and gym have paid dividends for Woolf. She is a constant force to some from the outside, her quick release and deadly accuracy has left opponents scrambling in confused frustration since she arrived on the Palouse.

Woolf’s ability to bounce from the outside lead Recknor to move her to the front, where she will more than. Obviously, she is one of the best shot blockers, and that I have ever seen,” Rocknol said.

Although, Woolf relishes the opportunity to stick out from deep, in the face of an opponent, she is from a bad leg. “I’ll do anything the team needs,” whether this means blocking the half in to fellow junior All State, or diving to the floor after a loose ball, Woolf looks to help the team.

Rocknol calls Woolf “one of the most dedicated and disciplined players I have come across. Just as her competitive nature as a child was not limited to the driveway, Woolf excels as a student also, maintaining a 3.6 GPA. Not bad for someone double majoring in graphic design and public communications.

Her love for art was inherited from her mother who has always encouraged her to pick up as pick up a paintbrush. Woolf hopes to apply this talent and her education to designing advertisements. She says her ideal job would be to come magazine advertisement editor for VW.

That insight may as well hint a career the day she graduates because according to Rocknol “whatever she decides to do she can do it.”

With the regular season coming to an end and the 27 of February, Woolf’s predicted for the Big West tournament will be precipitous. “We can best any team in our conference.”

Ski Team heads downhill

By Todd Marshall

University of Idaho

There are some people on the UI campus that have welcomed all the snow this winter. The UI Ski Club has enjoyed the white stuff the last two months, wrapping up regular season competition last weekend in Vancouver, B.C.

The skiers compete in the Northwest Conference of the United States Collegiate Ski Association. Although they didn’t win a championship, they did place competitive and established Idaho.

There are only two months in the competition; slalom and giant slalom. Each tour brings six females and six males racers and the team scores are calculated by adding the team’s times.

Idaho competes with the likes of Washington, WSU, Oregon, OCS and about 12 other schools. Ski club president Jeff Slivick said down hill half of the skiers have skiing in varsity sport and the others are, like Idaho, at the club level.

Obviously it is difficult compete against the varsity teams, but Slivick said Idaho does reasonably well competing with the other clubs.

Jerry McMurtry acts as both the faculty advisor and the coach for the ski team. He said the skiers come in at different skill levels.

“Don’t have a wide variety of skills, from excellent skiers to some is that are pretty rough, so we’re just working to bring everyone up to a high level, at least make them a better skier.”

The team has a weekly training session over Winter Break when they determine who will race in competition. There are about 30 UI students in the ski club, so making the top ten is no easy task.

One ski, Cathy Martin is on a regional competition next weekend in Brundage Mountain in McCall. She had the best individual success of anyone on the team; finishing 16th at Brundage January 29th and with overall season top 20 finishes.

On the men’s side, Rich Milenkovich was one of Idaho’s top racers. He finished 3rd at Brundage and 39th at M. Meadows, Oregon. Slivick, Steven Krueck and David St John are also making strong outings in the competition.

The women’s best finish of the year at a dual, was 78, while the men took home as 8th place finish, finishing with 15 other teams.

Idaho missed making the regional races by two points. McMurtry said, “The goal each year is to make the regional competition and he said each of the last five years, Idaho has sent either individuals or teams.

This year’s regional competition at Brundage will feature teams from all over the Western U.S., so Marty may have plenty of stiff competition.

The club is such a number of skiers to raise funds in the offseason. They organize ski swap each fall and they sponsor the “Warren Miller” ski film each year. Skiing is an expensive, time-consuming sport, but with a winner like we’ve had to it well worth it for the UI Ski Club.

Cougars to play first five of their next six games at Martin Stadium this season

The Apple Cup will be played Nov. 20 in Seattle.

The week after, the Cougars will play Hawaii in Honolulu.

Cougars football schedules seven home games

Associated Press

Washington State football fans can start making plans for seven trips to Pullman this year, even if one of them is actually in Idaho.

Idaho is playing all six home games at Martin Stadium in Pocatello this season because the Vandals’ stadium in nearby Moscow is too small to qualify for full Division I status.

On Sept. 18, Idaho will play Washington State in what is officially an Idaho “home” game. Idaho a person who buys a WSU season ticket will also get admission to the game, [Willie] Tindall.

“Our fans will sit in their regular seats for all seven games, even just the six Idaho Cougars home games,” WSU ticket manager Mark Johnston said.

The Cougars will play five of their first six games at Martin Stadium this season.

The Apple Cup will be played Nov. 20 in Seattle.

The week after, the Cougars will play Hawaii in Honolulu.
Video Game, Abe's Exoddus: A Design Graduate Honored Internationally

A University of Miami graduate’s work was recently showcased at the Prague Quadrennial International Theatre Design Exhibition. The student, who is working on his final design class at U.S. Design as part of the Master’s in Interior Design program, received international recognition for his design work on the 2010 season’s production of "Macbeth" at the Miami Shakespeare Festival. The student was one of seven from the U.S. program who were selected to present their work at the exhibition.

"It’s really exciting to see students from around the world showcasing their work," said the student. "It’s a great opportunity to see what others are doing and to learn from them.

"I’m very excited about the opportunity to go to Prague and see the work of designers from all over the world and get the chance to talk to them about their work and their design," said the student.

"I was happy to be selected to present my work," said a fellow student. "It was a great experience to see what others were doing and to learn from them.

The Week after ...

Last week’s Valentine’s Day edition of the Chapel was hard to beat! Temple of Awesome somehow packed the many pieces of the university’s love lore. All content should write the Chapel with any news about our church.

Jone is now taking applications for participants in the Chapel’s new virtual dating game. The game will include three weekends after the bachelor or bachelorette. Jone will select a random assortment from the applicants. If you are a student, e-mail Jone at show_me_the_love@hotmail.com. We will then arrange to have you come up in the mighty Agape Temple located 3rd floor USB (for a picture we can use with your application).

As for the first cohort for this exciting new service? Get in on your requests today!
