Federal program aims to level the academic field

By Eric Braun

Ut Student Support Services (SSS) is a national, $700 million program designed to help students overcome obstacles to their higher education. Although UI has a regional office of SSS, the program is run through the Department of Education for funding renewal.

“Because we're at the leading edge of this new federal program, we are now responsible for implementing it on our campus,” Dr. John Eker, director of the UI's Office of Student Services, said.

The program's purpose is to help students achieve their academic and personal goals. The SSS program is designed to help students who have disabilities, are from low-income families, or are first-generation college students.

A number of students have already benefited from the program. Among them is a student who is enrolled in the UI's School of Business. The student is a first-generation college student who has been able to overcome his disabilities through the SSS program.

More information can be found at the Student Support Services website or by contacting Dr. Eker at 208-388-6450.

WWF has 1600 crothths-points a year

Good viewing for kids?
By David Roiter

NEW YORK — A study has found that a weekly cable television’s wrestling show is packed with obscene gestures, crude language, erotic rituals — and a bit of actual wrestling.

A detailed Indiana University investigation of 50 "WWF Raw" episodes in the last year on the USA network turned up a staggering amount of profanity or risque incidents and an average of more than 30 minutes of wrestling in a two-hour show.

Researchers counted 1,588 instances of a character grabbing or pointing to their own erogenous or nearly eight every 20 minutes, not counting the slow-motion instant replay.

"I would see no reason that an adult could be very satisfied with the frequenty of which these incidents were aired, particularly at this time of day," Walter Gunz, professor at Indiana’s Department of Television and Film Studies, said today.

The show is from 9 to 11 p.m. EST.

For the past year, wrestling programs on USA or TNT have continuously been among the highest-rated shows on basic cable. But the show is also the favorite fan of the old days.

The syndicated news show "Inside Edition" commissioned the Indiana University study for a story that had been set to air just a few days after the wrestling show.

Researchers counted 157 minutes of sex scenes or nudity and 434 times when people either said a sexually-charged phrase or showed an on-screen hand sign.

There were 136 episodes of effective sexual activity and 47 references to sexual activity. One segment featured people supposedly wrestling drawing blood from a "slaving woman and drinking it. Gunz said.

There were also 409 mentions of sex or being exited by objects such as cars or right sticks.

"I do not see that a Wizard of Oz reality that they are doing it as kids," he said.

Hynne said "WWF Raw" has been similar to those seen on the NBC show "NYDNY Blue" and Fox's prime-time soap opera "Heavenly sliced."
ASUI President 22/2/99

Since taking office in December, I am taking more method to get information to you and give you more avenues in getting your views to your student government. Every week, the Digest allows the new ASUI President to discuss an issue. I have been able to sit on KITR (104.3 FM), KUIH (99.3 FM) and at LZTV. I have met and communicated with clubs and organizations through the Student Organization Center and in living groups through Student Advisory Services. I have attended Residence Hall Association meetings in addition to Interfraternity/Fraternity Council.

This week, I hosted a breakfast for all students to attend and hear any concerns. My goal is simple: to reach as many of you as possible to hear you. Whether you attend or not, I want you to let know what the ASUI student Government is doing. I will continue to meet with the student body and will continue to make these meetings and will try to have better of communication for the future.

As ASUI president, my job entails representing you to student organizations, to student government, to student groups, those currently in student government, future student leaders, faculty, and the city of Moscow. University of Idaho students throughout the state of Idaho, which is a true honor for me.

What does our student government do? Why should I care about our student government when I am just a Greek System? So what have we done, or what are we going to do this quarter? There is much you can do for every student.

The ASUI is structured with a president, vice president, liaisons of staff and lobbyists. Along with these positions, there are: student representatives, student representatives, student representation officers and some that deal with committees, or work on projects.

What have we done, or what are we going to do this quarter? For the ASUI student government, please continue to read thisDigest. The goal is to inform you of our progress.

We are concerned about the following areas:

Admissions: We are taking action against making consecutive lines for student admission. We are working with the clubs to set up workshops and classes for students to learn about the student body. We are working closely in the student government to change the group discussion curriculum to make it more relevant.

Sports: We are truly pleased with the success of our team. The move to Martin Stadium is beginning to show improvement. We are adding more students to the clubs, athletics, director, in sports. Part Two of a two-part series: American war criminal resurfaces in Kosovo

By Greg Mullin

Argonaut Columnist

Last week, we saw how the recent North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) military campaign in Kosovo has led to an international outpouring of letters, telegrams, and telephone calls to the U.S. State Department and the U.S. Senate. But the American press repeated only the essence of the Kadin massacre exactly as they had done their job, which was to report on the numerous discrepancies uncovered by European journalists.

This same theme has been at the center of the debate for both parties since the beginning of the conflict...

Chapel Hesliene News: Truth or Dare not for kids

Associated Press

ABILENE, Texas — A man accused of luring minors into a low version of the all-girls "truth or dare" but then sent to juvenile detention. Brandon Holts, 38, of Abilene had been charged with two counts of aggravated sexual assault and two counts of sexual assault. But Holts pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of indecency with a child. In the four cases from 1998 and he was sentenced Monday.

Prosecutor Lynn Peich said she did not want to pursue the aggravated sexual assault charges, which carry a life prison term upon conviction, because the victims did not want to testify.

The defense attorney Holts has an IQ of less than 70.

"He knew what he was doing was wrong," said Ms. Peich. "Anyone who takes advantage of a child, it’s egregious. We have an obligation to protect the kids.
