A ‘cultural shift’ puts Greeks in the hot spot

An examination of the past and future of alcohol on Greek row

By Adam E.H. Wilson

On Aug. 17, 1993, an 18-year-old student named Alex Petreski made news. The day began with the usual weekend shopping trip to the Idaho Falls Safeway, and in the back seat of the car, he told his friends, "I’ve been drinking all day."

The story may sound familiar, but it was a turning point in the history of Greek life at the University of Idaho. The University of Idaho Greeks, an organization that includes all Greek life on campus, was founded in 1935. It is comprised of four fraternities and five sororities and is one of the largest Greek organizations in the state. The Greek organization is responsible for hosting events such as tailgates and parties, as well as coordinating with the university to ensure that all activities are conducted within the legal framework.

According to the University of Idaho Greeks, the organization has grown in recent years, with an increase in membership and participation in university events. The University of Idaho Greeks is a member of the National Greek Honor Society, which recognizes individuals who have demonstrated academic excellence and leadership in Greek life.

However, the organization has faced challenges in recent years, including concerns about alcohol consumption and hazing practices. The University of Idaho Greeks has implemented various initiatives to address these issues, including education programs and increased enforcement of university policies.

The future of the University of Idaho Greeks is uncertain, as a proposed budget cut could result in the loss of funding for the organization. The organization is currently in the process of developing a strategic plan to address these challenges and ensure the continued success of Greek life at the University of Idaho.

at the UI (Goal 1: Objective 2).

The new student body has shown its enthusiasm by participating in the annual Greek Week activities, which is the final event of the academic year. The new students are expected to continue the traditions of their home institutions. The UI has a strong tradition of academic excellence and is known for its strong programs in engineering and computer science.

The UI is also home to a large and diverse student body, which includes students from all over the world. The university offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs, and is known for its strong emphasis on research and innovation. The UI is ranked among the top universities in the United States, and is a leader in many fields, including engineering, business, and the sciences.

The UI has a strong tradition of student involvement, and is home to a large number of student organizations. These organizations provide students with opportunities to engage in extracurricular activities, and to develop leadership and teamwork skills. The UI also has a strong academic community, and is home to many talented and dedicated faculty members.

The UI is a wonderful place to work and study, and I encourage all UI students to take advantage of the many opportunities that the university has to offer.
Rise of police power causes beer riots

By Greg Metten
Argonaut Columnist

Nov. 25, 1985

Sure, beer is in the news again. Slightly over 18 years ago, the beer tax was 30 cents a gallon. Now it's over $1 and it's going to 60 cents before next year. And it's sometime in the last few weeks of the school year. Since the first beam of sunlight in the streets in March, or large, almost exactly follows the most significant factors in our population's daily lives. We're all sick of it.

In 1967, I'm sure many of you have heard the stories about the December 7th attacks. The police were in a constant struggle to control the crowds. It was a time of great relief for many. People were happy to see a police force that could control the situation.

We've learned to expect the worst in our lives. We no longer trust the police. We no longer believe that they will do what's right. We no longer believe that they will keep us safe. We no longer believe that they will be there for us when we need them. We no longer believe that they will be honest. We no longer believe that they will be fair. We no longer believe that they will be impartial. We no longer believe that they will be professional. We no longer believe that they will be effective. We no longer believe that they will be accountable.

The police have become a symbol of our society's lack of trust in government. They have become a symbol of our society's lack of respect for the law. They have become a symbol of our society's lack of respect for our rights. They have become a symbol of our society's lack of respect for our dignity. They have become a symbol of our society's lack of respect for our humanity.

We no longer trust the police. We no longer believe that they will do what's right. We no longer believe that they will keep us safe. Editor gives thanks to campus heroes

By Andrew T. White
"Editor in Chief"

Fairly periodically throughout the existence of the University of Idaho Campus, whimsy awards for different reasons recognize the dedication of members of the university community. The recipients of university wide recognition should be proud of themselves as the accomplishments attested are truly deserving and a reflection on the respected individuals hard work, dedication and enthusiasm towards the university.

As this review year for all intents and purposes marks my online undergraduate education, I can state in my only truly meaningful endeavors, I can take a string of truly exemplary members of this university community who have inspired and motivated the personality I have in my ways, the current honor of special recognition, as well as several other members who have made unmeasurable and tangible contributions to other students and the college community.

Do you know anybody who has astoundingly given her time and compassion for the betterment of the university experience? For some it is a professor, it is someone you have become personally attached to, a fellow student, Greek alumnus, or another member of the university community. In my experience at the University of Idaho, this campus is particularly susceptible to the flourish of exceptional relationships throughout the campus environment.

I will elaborate on several members, or for the purpose of this review, the campus community that have made significant impressions on my university experience and have been a source and a representation of many of the individual's heroically mentioned.

The hardest working student I ever met on campus was Flo Neaf. U-aims and currently a third-year medical student in the Washington University College of Medicine's School of Medicine. Flo Neaf was an undergraduate driving to gain acceptance into medical school realized in the "college work ethic" of studying among other aspects of life in general. I have to admit the current students in the College of Medicine, know that Flo Neaf is a bus individual and attribute much of my success to his existence in the back corner. My study car was located next to his. Near barely opened and closed the library dozen times a week. Have you ever heard of, or know David Mucci? One of the most talented and respected members of the UI campus is Mucci. Mucci has an acute ability to use his athleticism as a student mentor and friend are amazing alumni make it a part when visiting campus to still visit and visit the man with who has provided irreplaceable advice and guidance throughout the years. When a student has a problem they not only feel comfortable approaching Mucci, but due to his credentials and his ability to provide advice that results in a positive manner is amazing. Everybody needs to have a second mentor who will provide a positive influence. If you are lucky enough to have Mucci as your mentor, please make it a point to do so! — Guarantee it will enhance your experience as a student, he's an incredible person.

UI President Richard Holmer serves as an embodiment of everything that makes this university unique and special. He places a special emphasis on developing personal relationships with students, faculty, staff, and alumni that is characteristic of the UI's tradition, conviviality, and culture. I would like to provide some insight into my relationship with Holmer, a student's perspective.

During my sophomore year Holmer began his tenure at UI, succeeding President Beal who served as the interim president in 1993. He was specifically nominated with Holmer was when I jogged with him around campus on a chilly Moscow morning. Holmer dressed in sweats pants, a jogging pick- et, hat and sneaker's comfort wasn't the appearance I was expecting of a university president. When I was told we were going jog- ging around campus with the president I thought it would be doing a great part of UI's unique campus walk and I was for my body to jog behind the golf cart! Holper start arrive in a golf cart, and while incidental at the tiny impression of Holmer as a hero and part of campus was impressive.

I know my experiences are not unique.

During the spring of my sophomore year, I along with approximately 30 other stubborn students emailed in Holmer's rel- evant security policy class, the most affected students, and myself, petitioned to change the university's security policy for student activities. Holmer's reaction to the email was my direct analysis of the policies and assisted the endowment of my pursuit of an interdisciplinary liberal arts education. Holmer continues to offer the class and in my rec- ommendation that any student who is interested in creating meaningful change in the world, at the same time engaging in school and society, who has an interest in extra-curricular security policy, which Holmer clearly endorsed, from the number of published works authored by him and his engaging method of teaching, that you experience the class. An abate of notes to the campus community is Holmer's responsiveness to suggestions from students on how to enhance the campus experience. I speak for all students when I ask that they appreciate the opportunity to have our constraints properly, taken in the pursuit of improving the UI. I personally can attest for anything.

Sergio Brown to progress Argonaut into 2000

By Andrew T. White
"Editor in Chief"

As I prepare to graduate, I will also be passing my relationship to Sergio Brown, a senior English major from Nampa, Idaho, and current productions and operations manager for the Argonaut. Next year the Argonaut will feature a technological advancement, a tool that incorporates both the creative and practical approach to journalism, while financially the trend has been set this year's Argonaut will focus on new-wave innovation and personalization of the Argonaut.

Next year as part of this year's main emphasis all news stories will have web addresses that will provide additional coverage information on the subject of story. If you are interested by the article you can have the main news necessary to research additional information for your purposes. The Argonaut Innovation will help us tell the trend in the college newspaper industry.

As you have probably noticed, the front page today was designed digitally. This design focus will help explode the "hard" market and college media extinction that is essential for the university and local paper and also the university and local college market and world.

As part of the Argonaut's planned technolog- ical revolution, the management hopes to in- clude our innovation in presentations to other college, secondary and industry newspapers. For example, through the presentation of the technological emphasis of a newspaper to secondary high schools, such as the Argonaut will ensure next year's principal in Idaho and Washington, the subsequent desired result by this newspaper will be a higher rate of Argonaut employment, recruitment, and retention. In the private and public sector industry newspapers, magazine, and other print medi- a our focus will be on the highlighted elements of Argonaut Innovation which is built to help Argonaut staff secure employment with the respective establishments. The current and future Argonaut manage- ment believes it is imperative this newspaper is able to adapt, adjust and innovate as the world around us becomes more focused on the technological revolution occurring in America and across the globe.

This year I founded the "Argonaut Online" with the interaction of our network and contribu- tion to this point. Next year Brown and I along with the rest of the editorial board for Argonaut Online edition A campus, an edition that will be a personalized campus experience for all students. Additionally, the Argonaut will extend our internet presence to all UI alumni, with a spe- cial emphasis of Vandal Athletics. The Argonaut will strive to be a college leader and innovator in the area of web page design, usability and versatility. The web page will also be the key to the potential success of various alumni to the support of the entire organization fairly.

Also next to my new paper will be the Brown's addition of Argonaut staff in this task this system will allow any Argonaut reader with a question about an article to have the author of the paper electronically for clarification or rewrites. Many other major newspapers in the industry have adopted the feature.

Myself as an interested alumni of the Argonaut and Brown will strive to associate with the professional aspect of the Argonaut\news technolog- ical innovation. All stories will have web page addresses for additional information, e-mail subscriptions, contact us, and a full service web page that will enhance and expand our exist- ing print version. It is our goal to have the Argonaut article as a part of the Argonaut online newspaper, the college campus, and print and multimedia. The Argonaut will strive to produce newspapers such as the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash., and the Idaho Statesman. If those in the pursuit of illustrating to the future of print journalism.

While I have mentioned many of the new beginnings in this column the future Argonaut will incor- porate the many new报纸 technologies; there are numerous other aspects that will be unveiled next year. It will be an exciting and innovative year for the Argonaut. Major goal that Brown and we all strive to achieve is guiding the Argonaut into the new millennium with more technologically up to date issues.
Go Vandals!

By Andrew White T. Cigar

It hasn’t felt good to be a Vandals in a long time. I’m especially thankful to all the student-athletes, who’ve been willing to serve, work hard, and focus on personal and team development. We’ve taken care to make sure our student-athletes are ready to make the most of their time here. A student and, future alumna, I’m honored to be a part of this special event.

I’m proud to share that the event will be held at our Eggs plush. The event will feature various activities to help you and your family prepare for the rest of the academic year. We’ll have raffle prizes, goodie bags, and food to enjoy. The event will be held on campus.

The event starts at 9:00 a.m. and will conclude by 11:00 a.m. We hope to see you there!

Bunnyfoot Charm gets shaft in Pullman

Viva 2001 Skyline/Bell fellow bands, you'll want to check out the upcoming events in the Pullman area. This Friday, May 3, at 8:30 p.m., at the Pullman Civic Center, the 3rd annual Pullman Spring Concert will be held. The concert will feature a variety of local and regional bands, including Bunnyfoot Charm. Tickets are $10 in advance and $15 at the door. For more information, call 882-7619.

REVIEW

Bunnyfoot Charm is a local indie rock band composed of six members: lead singer/guitarist Jordan Hall, bassist Wyatt Jones, drummer David Knowlton, guitarist/violinist Christian Neat, keyboardist/vocalist Matt Schab, and guitarist/vocalist Ashleigh Enos. The band has been together since 2016 and has released three albums: "Not Tonight," "The 57th Time," and "Reverie." They are known for their catchy melodies, lively stage presence, and engaging performances.

Lyrical elements such as "out of my mind tonight" and "If you don't see the sun in my eyes, you're seeing red" are replayed in choral, but full of truck punk attitude. Jordan'scząskowski talked about the need for music in one's life, and how music brought him to Pullman.

Unfortunately the band's big debut was tad bit bitty because one song could be sung or had a bit of a problem. But it was a brief event. The band was light on it's feet with the always energetic Christian Neat leading the way. The lead singer, Jordan Hall, was an absolute delight to watch.

The instrument dynamic of the Gardneres was enhanced by their fun stage presence.

The BDR is a welcome addition to Pullman with its unique style and energetic performances. The instrument dynamic of the Gardneres was enhanced by their fun stage presence.

The Gardneres are a welcome addition to Pullman with its unique style and energetic performances. The instrument dynamic of the Gardneres was enhanced by their fun stage presence.

Other local bands, Vitamin K and Carapah, performed. Bring out more youthful energy the vocalists were harmonically sung and scatting. Their lyrics were down to earth and touched on themes that many can relate to. They even threw in some "who's it" in one song, living up to their social media selves.

Capricorn started off well, but with their last song, they had melded into one over amplified medley. This may have been due in part to the inefficient acoustics of the Java Lava.

Overall, the show continued a few good hours of genuine youthful musical catharsis and ample opportunity to indulge in social residue habits made the warm walls of the Java Lava.

We'll be back on Friday. Check us out on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and Snapchat. We're @Bunnyfootcharm. And don't forget to check out our new album out now, "Reverie."
